DEDICATION

The entire history of the Committee on Publications and the labor of all of its members have been under the chairmanship and leadership of one man, the late Anthony C. Russo.

All of the books published by the Collectors Club of Chicago, except the first, were under Tony's aegis, and we of the committee became accustomed to letting all of the work, save for the editing of the individual books, fall on his willing and capable shoulders.

When the possibility of the publication of this pair of volumes was first broached, it had no stronger backer than Tony Russo. While some members wanted only the rate charts published, and others were in favor of the reproduction of the entire material available, Tony never wavered in his belief in and support for the publication of the entire 1860-72 run presented here, with provision for the eventual publication of the later years, if sufficient copies suitable for reproduction can be assembled.

Tony lived long enough to initiate the project and set it in motion. We think he would be most pleased with the results. We humbly, but proudly, dedicate these volumes to Anthony C. Russo.

Cheap Ocean Postage.

The London correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer urges a revision of the rates of postage between this country and Europe. He thinks it unreasonable that twenty-four cents should be charged for a letter to Liverpool, when the same would be carried to San Francisco for three cents. All experience has shown that the number of letters is increased as the rate of postage is reduced. The British Government derives five times the net revenue from postage at 1d. that it had when postage averaged 9d. per letter.

There are certain principles settled on scientific grounds in regard to this matter, which our Congress have never taken the pains to comprehend. It is certainly absurd to charge as much for the conveyance of three or four letters across the ocean, as would pay for the transportation of a barrel of flour. The intensely artificial and complicated system of management in the case of ocean postage causes great expense without any additional security. It is mathematically demonstrable that wherever a regular mail is carried, any increase in the number of letters adds very little to the actual expense. "At the same time, the average expense per letter is diminished in proportion as the number of letters is increased. The English Post Office has proved that the whole expense of the Department is less than half the increase. In other words, the actual cost per letter is considerably less than one cent. If the British Government would reduce the present rate of inland postage one half, the receipts would more than pay the expense of the Post Office.

The reasons why the British Government has never applied the principles of cheap postage to the ocean mails are probably political rather than financial. The financial success of the new system has been so complete at home, that it is difficult to account for the rigid maintenance of the old policy on the ocean on any other supposition, unless we ascribe it to the dogged obstinacy with which English statesmen are apt to resist popular improvements. No reason can be given why the same principles, both financial and moral, should not be as applicable to the one as to the other. The interest which both rulers and people profess in favor of universal freedom of trade should furnish an additional consideration in favor of cheap postage to foreign countries. It would greatly extend the influence of English opinions and the respect for English interests, if that country had extended the benefit of its favorite postal system to other countries. That this has not been done is one of the causes which have given such wide currency to the impression of the short-sighted selfishness by which the policy of that country is so generally controlled.

Nearly twenty years ago this subject was commended to both countries in an earnest pamphlet by Elihu Burritt. A society in Boston promulgated a plan for cheap ocean postage, adapted and recommended especially to the United States. But when our Government finally adopted a rate of postage fifty per cent. higher than that which is found so productive and beneficial in England, and then proceeded to double the postage on transient newspapers and circulars and small pamphlets, it seemed idle to press upon public attention at that time a system which was based upon purely scientific principles, amply sustained by facts, but opposed to all the prevailing theory and practice.

Perhaps the suggestions of the Inquirer's correspondent may have the effect to reopen the question. The Boston plan for cheap ocean postage was based upon the idea that under the cheap postage system the multiplication of prepaid letters was the sole concern of the department. It was then proposed that our Government, having first adopted the most perfect and absolute system of cheap postage at home, should extend the same system to ocean postage, so far as our own mails are concerned, without reference to the course pursued by any other country. That is, all the letters mailed in this country for foreign countries to go in American mails, should prepay two American postages, for which the letters should be delivered at the port of destination, where they would of course be subject to the disposal of the Government of the place. Having settled this, which is all that our Government could do by its own authority, the most liberal terms practicable should be offered to foreign nations on terms of perfect reciprocity, in regard to the receipt and transmission of letters. The most liberal of all would be an agreement that each country should collect its own postages, and transmit gratis the prepaid letters of the other, with an equitable division of the expenses of sea transportation. Take Germany, for instance, and let all American letters be pre-paid two American postages, and all German letters be pre-paid two German postages, whether carried in American or German vessels.

It is easy to see that the great simplification of the business would save much of the expense, as no accounts would be necessary between the two countries. It is equally obvious that an incalculable increase of correspondence between the two countries would be the inevitable and most beneficial result: and such a multiplication of letters would be the very way to make ocean postage productive, which it has never been under the old system of sharp bargaining and minute reckoning to balance accounts.

A similar plan could be applied in the case of newspapar and pamphlet postage. If once adopted by the United States on their own account, and persistad in, all other countries would soon be compelled to follow.

There are one or two facts which ought to be added to the above article (which we copy from the New York Evening Post.) For a number of years past the United States Post Office Department have been endeavoring to induce the Government of Great Britain to agree to a reduction, upon a basis equitable to both countries, of the rates of ocean postage between them, but without success. Postmaster General Holt, in his report for 1859, referred to the subject as follows:

"The negotiations, which were temporarily suspended, having in view the reduction of the rates of postage upon letters and upon printed matter, between this country and Great Britain, have been renewed, but, I regret to say, without any encouraging result. A most liberal proposition was submitted by this Department to the Postmaster General of England, and, in view of the previous correspondence on the subject, the expectation was confidently indulged that he would promptly accede to it. It has, however, been declined, and for reasons so unsatisfactory, that for the present, no disposition is felt to pursue the matter further."

Again, in his report for 1860:

"In the month of August, 1859, I proposed to take the inland rates established in the respective countries—three cents United States to two cents British—as presenting a fair division, leaving the sea postage at seven cents; and that each country should continue the account as at present for its due proportion of the postage, instead of retaining all it should collect and accounting only in respect to the sea postage. Regarding this proposition as most liberal, offering as it does to the international correspondence advantages in reality superior to those extended to our domestic letters in the aggregate, since a considerable portion of the latter are subject to ten cents postage, it was confidently believed that it would be promptly accepted. But I regret to say it was declined; the British Government insisting on an equal division of the inland postage, and proposing that the inland rate for each country should be two cents, leaving the sea postage at eight cents.

"As in the division of the twelve cent postage proposed, England will consent to no abatement of her inland rate, her postal authorities cannot reasonably expect that the United States will reduce their domestic rate, which, as shown, is already much below what the service actually costs. It is difficult to perceive on what principle it can be claimed that our rate, which is not remunerative, shall suffer abatement, while that of England, which is confessedly so, remains intact. Seven cents is regarded as affording an ample compensation for the ocean transportation. If, however, it is not so, it should be increased; but that increase should not be abstracted from the domestic rate of either of the two countries."

Postmaster General Blair, however, in his report for 1861, states that he had, "on a review of the whole subject, concluded to accept the division of the rates as proposed, which grants to the United Kingdom the same rate of inland postage, rather than longer delay an arrangement so desirable as that sought to be obtained by the reduction of the international letter postage from 24 to 12 cents the single rate."

But in his report for 1862, he is obliged to report that—

"The expectation offered in my last report of a reduction of the letter rate of postage between this country and the United Kingdom from 24 to 12 cents, I regret to state, has not been realized; my formal acceptance of this reduced rate for international letters proposed by the British post office in February, 1857, having failed now to receive the concurrence of that office. The British Department states in reply that it is not disposed to agree upon any reduction of the international letter rate, until the existing contract entered into by it for the North American mail service terminates; and this contract has about six years to run. The non-concurrence of the British office in my acceptance of its proposition was not anticipated, and is placed upon such grounds as to leave no opening at present for the further prosecution of the negotiations."

The above conclusively shows that if the present rate of ocean postage to the United Kingdom is excessive—as it undoubtedly is—the fault lies on the other side of the water. It is to be hoped that on the expiration in 1868, of the contracts above referred to, no other obstacles will arise in the way of so desirable a reform as the reduction of this postage.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO.

It is certainly unpleasant to be caught in a shower in an umbrella-less condition; but it is far worse to be subjected to a nipping frost, in loose linen garments. Who would have imagined that the sweltering heat of July would be followed by Novembry weather in August? The clerk of the weather certainly mixed things somehow or other, and were it not for his long established reputation for punctuality and regularity in introducing each month in its proper season, he might be suspected of being a reconstructionist. The idea of unchaining Jack Frost in midsummer, and allowing him to fly to the mountain and powder its crest,—to light on the trees, and dress their boughs in diamond beads, is almost bewildering, but, nevertheless, it was done; and, instead of going forth to my Waltonian exercises, at early dawn and dewy eve, on the St. Lawrence, I preferred, decidedly, to sit by a good fire, gossiping with my landlady and her sprightly daughter about neighborhood occurrences, marriages, births and deaths, and the prospect we had of the fruit and maple sugar crop.

This I continued for two or three days, in hopes the weather would warm up a little—but the tops and bottoms of the days kept growing colder and colder, and the swallows having all disappeared, I thought it prudent to move southward. The lady and her daughter (the former was a widow) both urged me to stay a little longer, but I would not yield. By adroit questioning they had found out that I was a bachelor, and took occasion to tell me that having neither wife nor children to bother about, I was just as well off one place as another. The young lady was pretty sharp on me sometimes, but the mother would say, "How can you be so aggravating? Ain't you ashamed, Jane Mary," and would give me such a singularly sympathizing look that "kind o' liked" Jane Mary to keep on "aggravating" me.

The little minx, too, occasionally retorted on her mamma in rather an unfilial manner; once in particular, when I thought it was highly improper. On opening a snood, which had been severely wrenched by a big fish, I accidentally wounded one of my fingers with a hook; the blood flowed pretty freely, and the madam was kind enough to bind up the lacerated digit, to do which we were brought into close quarters. At this juncture Miss Mischief poked her head in the door, and gave a long, shrill whistle, which sounded very much like the keyhole music of the wind on a winter night, and instantly withdrew. I was terribly abashed, and Ma grew terribly red in the face, and as neither of us knew exactly what to say, we acted wisely, and said nothing. I walked out soon after, to give the ladies an opportunity for explanation, and when I returned, I inferred from the red eyes of the younger that it had been made. Apprehensive that some unjust hardship had been used, I approached her in my usual amiable manner, and, in my sweetest tones asked her if she had been weeping. "Yes, sir, I have," said she. "Ma has been unnecessarily cross to me." "Why, Jane Mary, how can you? What will Mr. Tonson think of us, to hear you go on so?" "I don't know what Mr. Tonson will think of us, but judging from the closeness of your faces to each other awhile ago in the sitting-room, I know what he thinks of you," and bursting into tears, she flung herself out of the room, leaving us both in a peculiarly perplexing predicament. I left the same day. I felt half provoked with Jane Mary, but as "keeping spite" is out of my line, I soon forgot everything but her good qualities, and grew good natured with pleasant memories of her fascinating naivete and ingenuousness. The village of Hillhollow was blessed with a church, and a Post Office, and through the instrumentality of Miss Ann Thrope and A. Leaky Vessel, Esq., the fashions and foibles of the former, and the hidden mysteries of the latter, were revealed to her upon honor. Now, as I was a stranger, Jane Mary considered it no breach of confidence to divide the trust with me, and every day she gave me the latest news, until I grew more familiar with the affairs of Hillhollow than the oldest inhabitant. Church matters being of a local nature, served to interest and amuse for the moment, but the revelations made to her by the post office clerk were so minute, so graphic, and so elaborate, that I felt convinced he either looked over the shoulders of writers and readers of letters, or else got at the contents by some unknown criminal means. It is impossible to describe the contempt and disgust I conceived for this vender of stolen confidences. A body snatcher's reputation would suffer by companionship with such as he.

Day after day I listened, apparently pleased at these details, but my mind was fully made up to put a detective on the fellow's track, and I await with much solicitude the result of his investigation. It seems almost impossible that young men of character and intelligence should be guilty of such nefarious practices. For the honor of human nature, I hope they are rare. The sanctity of the official oath ought to deter those who believe in retributive justice, and unbelievers have no right in such places. In some offices, perhaps in a good many, Postmasters who are engaged in other affairs, employ clerks to transact postal business, and neglect to have them sworn in. Now, as this is a palpable violation of the law, would it not be well to furnish you with a list of these delinquents, so that they may be handed over to the Department for instruction, or held responsible for any losses or delays incurred through their irresponsible employes. Possibly, only the unsworn officials may be the offending ones. Ten to one that A. Leaky Vessel, Esq., never took the oath of office. His conduct shows him to be a coward—and cowards have consciences—therefore A. L. V. has a conscience, and having one, might have frightened him from the perpetration of dark deeds by shadowing a hereafter settlement.

Communications.

P. O., INNUBIAUS, N. Y.

Editor U. S. Mail:—When I commenced my first letter to you, I expected to say all I had to say in that and a second, but I have received so many letters of inquiry about my office, and requests for advice, that I think I may benefit both the public and postmasters by giving some attention to them, "through the columns of your valuable journal." Notwithstanding their sameness of origin, these letters are curiously diverse in character. One party complains of the difficulty of "collecting postage," another considers "wrapping a great nuisance, and the cause of the loss of many letters," while a third is certain if letters "were only wrapped and tied as required by the regulations, losses by mail would be reduced one half," another is perplexed by the "complications of the Registry system," one is troubled by the "repeated calls of school children and toddling infants," and another by the "rudeness or pomposity of budding bloods," by which, I suppose, is meant those annoying specimens of humanity, who are ceasing to be boys and beginning to be men, and whose correspondence is confined to "drop letters" to and from silly and imprudent school girls, or, what is worse, ladies of unquestionable character. One thinks he ought not to be compelled "to open so early," while another thinks he is obliged to "keep open too late." Is there not a maxim, to the effect that "Not every one can command an army?" Whether there is or not, I say "Not every man can be a postmaster." Still, every postmaster can make some effort to have his office properly conducted, and not think, as some seem to do, that the "commission" confers the knowledge for the office as well as the right to it. The commission is only the first step, a step which should be immediately followed by another, viz.: the acquisition of the proper knowledge. Hence, I draw the conclusion that the great cause of annoyance to postmasters is their ignorance of the "Laws and Regulations," and I would advise every one, on receiving his commission, to immediately set about obtaining a full knowledge of those Laws and Regulations, that apply to his office. This is what I did. The next thing is to be as exact himself, and to insist on his clerks, and even the public, being as exact as possible in the observance of these laws and regulations, and this I did. For a while, indeed, it occasioned some trouble to all parties; but in the end all were better satisfied; and from having been unpopular, and the "very worst postmaster they ever had had at Innubihus," and causing even my political friends to look to a change of administration for a relief from the burden, I became very popular. The post office in Innubihus "had never been so well managed," and even my political enemies were heard to say they would "oppose my removal."

The Regulations are generally clear and explicit, but whenever doubt arises, I have always found "the columns of your valuable journal" ready to instruct me. True, this readiness may be because I am careful to ask only such information as I cannot find in the Regulations, or in answers to some other correspondent,—there is therefore no excuse for ignorance. The delivery, and the mailing of letters, the separation, for other offices, of the contents of a mail bag,—the putting up a mail,—the properly labeling and locking mail bags,—the supervision of mail carriers,—are all matters so easily understood that it would be "child's play" to dwell on them. The Registry system, however, though like "making the egg stand alone," simple enough when one knows how, is a matter of some difficulty to the igoorant. The "Instructions" are clear and free from verbosity, yet that they are either not read, or not understood, by a large portion of the postmasters of the smaller offices, is very evident. Two prominent difficulties seem to exist, How to Bill and where to send registered letters. And now, Mr. Editor, if you will not deem me impertinent, or reflecting upon your Instructions, I will say a few words upon these two points. And first, about billing,—and while I am on this subject I may as well include all the blanks required for registered letters. These are of six different kinds. 1. A Registered Letter Receipt, to be given for each letter, to the party mailing the letter. 2. A marginal receipt for each letter, to be kept by the postmaster. 3. A Return Registered Letter Receipt, to accompany each letter, being fastened to it by gumming or tying. 4. A Registered Post Bill, to accompany each package of Registered Letters, whether containing one or more. 5. An Ordinary Post Bill, marked with the number of packages, and to accompany the bundle of letters for delivery in which the package of Registered letters is placed. 6. A Return Registered Letter Bill, to be sent to the postmaster by the next mail. All these six blanks must be dated on the day on which the conveyance carrying the mail leaves. Now respecting the office to which Registered Letters are to be sent. I will suppose that postmasters know the difference between "mailing direct," and "mailing to a D. P. O.," but there is ignorance in mailing registered letters to a D. P. O., the envelopes often being directed, for instance, P. M., New York D. P. O., instead of "P. M., New York." A great many Smiths live within the delivery of my office—they are off-shoots of the old, wealthy, yet highly respectable, Smiths of Smithvale, and they keep up a constant and friendly correspondance with their relations; it is said, by the way, that the original Smith "came in with the conqueror," but one scapegrace of the family, having married the daughter of a journeyman tailor, who made a fortune in the war of 1812 by his ignorance of the difference between shoddy and real cloth, asserts that the real original Smith was "driven out" with the ancestors of the F. F. V's. However this may be, scarcely a day passes but that one or more letters are sent to or received from Smithvale, and New York is the D. P. O. between the two places; therefore I always send the letters for Smithvale to New York D. P. O. But if I have a registered letter for that place, I enclose it with the proper blanks, properly filled up, in an envelope, and direct it "Postmaster, New York," that is, I send my registered letters to the Postmaster at New York, in person, for him to send to Smithvale. If I have letters going to Canada, I direct the envelope "Postmaster, Buffalo." If going to the Western States, I direct it "Postmaster, Cleveland." And I put these letters to the postmasters in the bundles for "delivery," and not for "distribution." And I am happy to say that I have never yet had occasion to report the loss of a registered letter from Innubihus, and hope I never shall. If I do, however, I shall have the satisfaction of knowing that the loss has not occurred through any negligence of mine.

Yours till next time,

NICOTINUS.

MANTSUCH, N. Y.,
September, 1866.

Mr. Editor:—I hope I will not be thought impertinent or presumptuous in addressing a letter to you. I know, indeed, that your paper is devoted entirely to the "mails," (please excuse this ancient and by no means pun gent pun, it is not even p(h)unny, but its use is an easy way of introducing my ladyship to you.) As I said, I know your paper is devoted to the "mails," and therefore you may not be inclined to give any attention to females, but I have a sort of claim on you, for my brother Dick is clerk, head clerk, in our post office, and so I quite frequently, when I am in the village, about dinner or supper time, or when Dick and I are going to a good concert, step into the office and wait for him,—and, by the way, this waiting for men to be ready to go anywhere with one is very trying to a woman's patience! One day I found it more than usually so, when Dick had kept me waiting more than half an hour, with his "ready in a minute," repeated about every minute; so, in a fit of desperation, I took up the Mail, conscious that even dry reading was preferable to impatient waiting; but I was agreeably surprised to find the Mail anything but dry. On the contrary, it afforded me a great deal of amusement, and some little profit, especially "Monsieur Tonson's" letter, and the "Answers to Correspondents;" so from that day I have read the Mail as regularly and eagerly as though I were a post office clerk. To be sure, I gave way to a few expressions of woman's impatience on your occupying nearly two columns in the July number with a new postage law, and in the August number with a list of Money Order Offices. Some amends, however, were made in the former by the letter of your new correspondent "Nicotinus," while your "Raid on Mail Swindlers," and "Monsieur Tonson" in the latter, redeems almost entirely that "desert waste" of names. The number for September, however, is splendid, but do you really expect women to believe that that letter from a seeker for a "true and loving heart" was a genuine production of one of my sex, or did you think that your paper, being only for males, (oh, that horrid pun again!) you would relieve the monotony of post office duty by holding up us poor females to the ridicule of post office clerks? [The document is genuine, Miss. Call at our office and see the original.—ED. MAIL.] And Monsieur Tonson has outdone himself; but he need not hope to make me believe that that old stage-horse is only to be found in the wilds near Canada. Why, there are two or three of them in our very village, and each one might tell just such a tale as "Monsieur's" horse, and I, even I, young as I am, and I am not twenty, could prove what they could tell. Why, only last week I went over twenty miles in the stage to visit Aunt Hepsey, and I saw enough on that trip! How I did wish "Monsieur" had been along, and one time I was inclined to believe he was; for one of the passengers was a stranger, a good looking, stoutish gentleman, from 40 to 45 years of age, very polite and very affable, and certainly with very kind, almost chivalrous devotion to my sex. He did not say much when he saw the mail bags flung about in a careless manner, or the driver, lazily banging about a tavern door for twenty or thirty minutes, while the mail bag lay in the dirt by the side of the stage, waiting for his bigbness to get ready to drive on. I could see, however, the stranger's eyes flash with indignation, and once he exclaimed, impatiently, "I am very glad I do not live on this route." But my traveler could not have been "Monsieur," for he was too young, too well dressed.

Now, kind Mr. Editor, all I have written is but a preface to what I want to write; but I am such a gabbler, as Dick says, that I could not help it, and my fingers can fly quite as nimbly as my tongue. I want to say something about post office clerks knowing more than they ought to know, and telling more than they ought to tell; for I have found out how it's done. But may be you will be frightened or offended at my long preface, so I will not trouble you any further until I know you are willing to listen to me.

Very respectfully, your friend,

FANNIE SPIGH.

DEAR SIR, I consider the U. S. MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT a valuable and meritorious publication, useful alike to this Department, to Postmasters throughout the country, and to the public; it is my wish to see it generally circulated among postmasters and others, and I shall with pleasure extend to you every proper facility for enlarging the sphere of its official usefulness, and the range of its circulation. The following Official Order has also been made by the Postmaster General:

Ordered, That the Assistant Postmasters General, and Chief Clerk of this Department, each cause to be furnished from time to time, for publication in the "United States Mail," all such new orders or regulations of the Department touching the business of the several bureaus as may be of general importance or interest as soon as practicable after the same shall have been promulgated or established.

DEAR SIR—I have no hesitation in adding my endorsement to that of my predecessor, Postmaster General Blair, to the members of the UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT "as a medium of communicating correct information to Postmasters and others respecting postal operations," and cheerfully recommend it to the favor and support of Postmasters and other agents of the Department. W. DENNISON, Postmaster General

TO J. GAYLER Esq. Editor U. S. Mail.

Special Notice.

By request of numerous subscribers who say, "at all events don't stop the paper," we have during the past year continued to send the Mail to those whose time of subscription had expired, and who have neglected to forward pay for another year in advance. As a consequence, quite a large number of our subscribers are more or less in arrears, and we have to request such either to renew at once or to pay arrearages, and order the paper discontinued. We send out this month upwards of 1,000 bills, and we trust that all those whose paper reaches them with wrapp's marked 72, or any less number, will respond immediately.

☞ Although it is our desire and endeavor that our paper should appear on the first of each month, yet it is sometimes, owing to various circumstances, impossible to secure that result. Important changes in the laws and regulations occasionally occur at such times as to require, for the benefit of our readers, that our issue should be postponed for a few days in order to enable us to lay the details of such changes before them at as early a date as possible, instead of allowing a month to elapse before their publication. Our subscribers will therefore readily understand that a short delay in receiving their papers is sometimes unavoidable, and that when such delay occurs, it is the result of a desire to give them advantage of the latest official information on the postal matters.

Carelessness—Outside and Inside.

A short time ago, we published an article on some of the causes of errors and delays in the forwarding and delivery of letters and other mail matter. One of the most prominent of the causes thus referred to was the exceedingly slovenly and incomplete manner in which a great portion of the letters passing through the post office in this country are addressed by the writers. Americans are proverbial for "rushing things." Our railroad engineers can "make up time" (occasionally sending a car-load or so of passengers to eternity, by the way) in a manner never equalled nor attempted by those of other countries. Our builders can set up a row of tenement houses in sixty days, and when they have tumbled down and buried some scores of families, can duplicate them (the buildings, that is,) in six weeks. One of our travellers can jump from a car at a "refreshment station," swallow an oyster stew, two cups of coffee, three saleratus biscuits, a piece of pie, and a brace of doughnuts, and be back in his seat to enjoy his newspaper and his indigestion, all within five minutes. Ours is unquestionably a fast people, and in no way do they prove the fact more emphatically than in the manner in which they prepare their correspondence for transmission by mail. The idea of wasting time in adding the street and number to the direction of a letter intended for an individual whose name may be precisely similar to that of a dozen other persons in the same city where he resides, would not be entertained for a moment by some of our driving, go-ahead business men. What's the use?—so they argue—the Post Office people all know, or ought to know, who the letter is for; and to expend ink and time in helping them to find out what they already know, or ought to know, would be useless, if not positively sinful. And off goes the letter, directed simply to the name and city of residence of the person for whom it is intended, reaches the Post Office there, falls into the hands of a new clerk, "who ought to know" (but doesn't,) the particular John Brooks or Joseph Snooks to whom it rightfully belongs, and so delivers it to the first of the name who calls for it, and to whom it does not belong at all, but who, nevertheless, pockets and omits to return it; whereupon ensue great wrath and many imprecations on the part of the writer of the letter, directed against that condemned humbug, the Post Office, in which Brooks or Snooks heartily join, thinking it "a condemned shame that a man who has lived and done business in this city, sir, for thirty years, can't get a letter, plainly directed to his own name." And all this because our "driving" business man, or his "driving" clerk, would not take the trouble to tell the Post Office people, in addressing his letter, whether Brooks or Snooks lives or does business, or even what that business is.

It would be very easy to go on and show how in many other ways this false economy of time on the part of our business men and others leads to all sorts of trouble and confusion in their correspondence; how they misdirect letters to Boston intended for Buffalo, and are prompt with the offer of any number of affidavits to prove they addressed them correctly; how they contrive to make "N. Y." in such a way that anybody but themselves would swear those characters were intended for "N. J.," and to write "Pittaburgh" so that a jury of writing-masters would never be able to agree as to whether "Pittsfield" or "Pittsford" were the correct rendering of the hieroglyphics, &c. &c.

It would not be honest, however, in referring to this subject, to stop with the shortcomings of the "outsiders." Many of the postal fraternity are quite as apt to indulge in the "rushing" style of doing business as are the public. Take a "fast" distribution or box-delivery clerk in a large post office, for example. How quickly a formidable pile of letters will melt away under his dexterous manipulation! Not many seconds does he require to decide which box is the proper receptacle for each letter as it passes through his nimble fingers; the merest glance is sufficient; the boxes are quickly filled with letters, and all beholders with admiration of his rapid movements and with wonder that "one small head can carry all he known." But stop a moment. Go and examine those boxes and their contents a little more closely, and—what's this? Here's a letter in Jones's box which is plainly addressed to Brown, next box below! Here's another for Robinson in Smith's box, next above! Here's one for Barker the broker in the box of Parker the grocer! Here's one for the Trumpeter newspaper snugly reposing in the box of its rival, the Trumpeter! Or if it be a distributing clerk, whose activity seems so wonderful, take a look over his work, and lo! a letter for Waterloo is in the Watertown box; another for Barrytown tarries in the Tarrytown pigeon hole; a third for Sugar Valley has been put into the shades of the Sugar Grove box; and with such discoveries one's admiration of the rapidity of the work is lost in quite another feeling concerning the heedless manner of its execution. Or go with a carrier who is always the first to return from serving his route, who brings back with him few, if any, letters undelivered as "not found;" whose integrity is beyond question, (though, strange to say, the complaints of missing letters from the residents in his district are neither few nor far between,) and perhaps his apparent promptitude and despatch may be accounted for by the fact that he doesn't scruple to save himself the trouble of ascending a couple of flights of stairs by calling a juvenile from the sports of the gutter, with "Buh, just carry that letter up stairs to Mrs. McBride," or "Sis, you know Mrs. O'Toole? just hand her this next time you see her;" or if the lady who lives over the bakery happens to be absent when he calls with a letter, he leaves it with the baker's boy, who next week is arrested for robbing the till. No wonder that the other carriers seem laggard compared with him who fulfils his important trust in this hap hazard style.

Nor is this fault of undue haste confined to the large offices—as many a route-agent can testify, who, day after day, finds among the mails received from small offices on his western trip, letters and packages of letters intended for the east, hurriedly thrown into the pouch by the Postmaster, who has been too busy talking politics to begin making up his mail until he hears the whistle of the approaching train. And, per contra, many a Postmaster can tell of repeatedly receiving from a route-agent a pouch whose contents prove to be all addressed to the next office below or above, and being obliged to announce the unwelcome fact to the waiting crowd, many of whom will be sure to charge their disappointment as being in some way due to his negligence.

There are, of course, many allowances to be made for both "outsiders" and "insiders" in this matter. There may be cases in which a merchant or banker is almost excusable for a hasty and incomplete letter-direction, and errors by Post Office clerks, amid the unavoidable hurry of some of their operations, must occasionally occur. But far too many of such blunders are the result of unnecessary haste, and of a desire rather to "get things out of the way" somehow or anyhow, than to accomplish work with all needful speed and at the same time with all needful care.

"The Fool and his Money."

Under the above title, the New York Tribune publishes the following article on the various swindles in the shape of lottery and gift enterprises which have for years past been carried on principally through the mails. We are glad to say that these schemes are pretty generally "played out," and that the harvest now reaped from the few remaining simpletons who believe the flattering tales of the lottery, jewelry, opera-house and other rascals, is now exceedingly meagre. If papers like the Tribune, however, with their large country circulation, had taken a little more pains to warn their readers against these schemes a year or two ago, as the American Agriculturist persistently did, and had refused to publish the advertisements of some of the knaves, very many "fools," who now mourn over the parting from their money, would have been spared their tears:

"There is need to day of a vigorous protest against a serious and growing abuse. It seems that, not content with the achievements in paths of honorable distinction which have made Americans justly proud, not content with having the best country, the best government, the bravest army, the finest generals, the greatest navy, Admiral Farragut, Hoe's Printing Press, the Mississippi River, and the New-Rochelle Blackberry, Niagara Falls, Mr. Morse and Dr. Franklin, two inventors of chloroform, three Websters, and so forth and so forth, and an interminable list of great names in every department;—not content with this altitude in excellence, we are striving to reach an equal eminence in badness, and are just now turning our attention to the getting up of lotteries, the mere reading of whose "schemes," as they are well called, is calculated to reduce the hearer to that state of stupefied astonishment that his pockets can be picked with impunity by the unscrupulous inventors of these fraudulen devices.

The reader may think we are in a jocular mood, but we are only so far moved to laughter as a man may be who sees that even wickedness has a ludicrous side, and that, painful as it may be to see innocence duped, it is not always equally painful to our unregenerate nature to see greediness overreached by cunning. But, we are by no means disposed to treat these lotteries as a jest, however little to be pitied we may think the greater number of those who buy tickets. We do not forget that the smaller number, however small in proportion it may be, must always be made up of those whose very ignorance supposes a condition of life in which the loss of the price of a ticket is seriously felt, and to whom the possession of a line engraving of any picture under the sun, must seem a mockery when they compare it with what they have parted with, or with what they hoped for. And, yet, it is very difficult to know just how to attack these organized swindles, so as to squelch them effectually. They are most carefully planned in every instance to elude existing laws made for the very purpose of repressing them; and they assume by their pretensions a high place among the agencies of social refinement. The most delicate euphemisms veil their inherent rascality, and under the name of Art Unions, Art Associations, or Gift Enterprises, they conceal the fact that they are simply lotteries open to all the objections, and liable to all the censure that belongs to those traps for the unwary. If we hold our tongue about them, and suffer them, day after day, to lay their nets without a warning, we are reproached by the gulls that they so plentifully make, with indifference to the public welfare; if, moved by wrath, we try to pillory the rogues, they impudently face us, and threaten us with libel. And, so, we are too often tempted to let them go their ways, and plunder unobstructed, content with keeping our own pockets buttoned when we go by their doors, and with warning our young and green acquaintances in private to do the same.

But there really is no reason why so many people should be victimized by these thieves, as we know there are, in a country like ours, where we boast of a widely diffused intelligence and education. How can any man who thinks at all, how can any man who reads his newspaper daily, and cons the oft-repeated stories of the tricks of scoundrels, small and great, be ready to swallow with eager appetite a similar bait when it is offered to him? Think of a man of ordinary intelligence perusing seriously any one of these preposterous "schemes" which are now being advertised all over the country so persistently, and at such an enormous expense, and then deliberately going and purchasing a ticket, as if he believed all the prospectus has told him! He will turn away from a beggar who runs off her glib roll of lies, some of which must at least, judging by the patent rags and leanness, be founded in truth; he will give a soldier—who tries to support, by the sale of hooks or newspapers, the miserable maimed life the enemies of his country have spared—the cold shoulder, and perhaps the insulting word; but the stories of the lottery men meet with his respectful attention. It seems wonderful, but so does every species of futility, to the cool and the sane; and perhaps nothing is more idle than to attempt to reason with those who seem determined to be deluded. "When a woman hesitates," says somebody, "she is lost. When a man hesitates, he wishes to be lost." And the man who is taken in by these gift enterprises, or lotteries called by whatever name, only declares that he hankered after the pleasure of being swindled, and ought to be congratulated on the completeness of his gratification, rather than pitied for the extent of his loss.

But, some reader with more than childlike innocence, will ask: "After all, suppose one does get the great prize!" Let him open his ears and listen, for an answer, to the rumors that already begin to come from the West:

"The firm of Ludlam Hale & Co., conductors of the 'Great North-Western Gift Concert,' 'failed' on Monday, the 13th, and those who invested are minus their money and gifts. One of the firm had absconded with $75,000, and the others were preparing to leave when the police arrested them."

And, already, from Chicago we hear a report that a panic has spread among the purchasers of tickets to the great scheme there, and that it is seriously proposed to have no drawing made. Any day this bubble may burst, as others have done before it, and it certainly will add nothing to the public confidence to be told that it is not yet known whether so-and-so, who is abundantly able to do it, will consent to pay back to the ticket buyer the money they have invested, in case the scheme is abandoned! The cool impudence with which these bogus promises are made to a presumably asinine public, is as nothing to the cool impudence with which these promises are broken.

But, after all, it has nothing to do with the right or wrong of the matter whether these lotteries are carried out in accordance with the published programmes or not. They owe their success principally to two causes; one is the light estimation in which Americans hold money, and which is quite easily compatible with the worship of the dollar which, if you will, is their characteristic; the other is, the eager haste to be rich, which we share in common with the rest of the world. We think nothing of a dollar, in one sense, though far too much of it in another; and we are, one and all, infected with the wild delusion that fortunes are constantly being made by chance, by accident, by luck, by any means, in short, except hard working and plain living, and until economy becomes a more popular virtue in America than it is at present, we suppose there is very little hope that the number of dupes to these enterprises will be considerably lessened by any amount of warning. We believe it is etiquette, now, to think five dollars the smallest sum that a gentleman can give to anybody for any cause or service. We are on the verge of an era when even the bootboys will not "do the heels" under that trifle, and it follows, of course, that anything which costs less than what is popularly known in polite circles as a V, is of no account whatever. Tickets for gift enterprises, when at par, are usually placed low, in order to attract a larger shoal of weak fish and gudgeons, and it is taken for granted that the whole bulk of the loss will be so minutely divided among individuals that the suffering will be easily borne. Where the prizes are made fabulously large, indeed, as in some recent instances, of course the tickets are held by speculators at a great advance on the original price, and the loss is likely to be more serious than in other cases. But human nature may be relied on for the possession of a good deal of the pride that fears to be made ridiculous, and most dupes would rather suffer than expose their folly needlessly; and American human nature cares far less for the loss of a few dollars than for the discredit of having been "taken in." Therefore we see little hope that these swindling undertakings will be arrested by any outbreak of popular indignation.

The only way to cure this evil is, "to stamp it out" by stringent, persecuting laws; to hunt it down in the courts, to drive the men that deal in it and profit by it, from decent society, and to brand them in the public prints and in public places as deliberate swindlers, far more worthy of the State prison than the majority of convicted thieves."

STAMP YOUR MONEY ORDERS.—Postmasters at Money Order Post Offices should warn their clerks against the omission from money orders of the stamp bearing the name of the issuing office, and the date of issue. Orders on which this stamp is lacking cannot be paid when presented, which may lead to great inconvenience to the persons in whose favor they are drawn, and to the expression by them of not unnatural indignation, at being obliged to suffer through such carelessness. We are tempted to give the names of some offices which have sinned in this way, especially that of an office several thousand miles from New York, which issued an order for a considerable sum, minus the stamp, and therefore worthless, until the omission had been supplied after many weeks' delay.

☞ Messrs. DODGE & MCLELLAN, Solicitors of Claims and Patents, Washington, whose advertisement appears in the present number of the Mail, are known to us as gentlemen to whom any business in their line may be entrusted with a certainty that it will be promptly and faithfully attended to. If any of our readers have need of the services of a Solicitor in matters pertaining to business in any of the Departments at Washington, they cannot do better than to secure those of Messrs. Dodge & McLellan.

☞ We would call attention to the advertisement in our advertising columns, headed "To Postmasters." We have examined Mr. Tryon's system of keeping accounts, and can readily recommend it to Postmasters, for its simplicity and efficiency. We also feel assured that its use would considerably increase the revenue of the Department from postage on newspapers.

Answers to Correspondents.

[Subscribers will greatly oblige us, and often save time and trouble, if they will, before sending us inquiries to be answered in this column, consult the various standing articles in the Mail under the heads of "Miscellaneous Information," "Domestic Postages," &c., &c., for information on the subject in regard to which they are in doubt. We receive a great number of questions, answers to which could readily be found by attending to this request.]

Wrapping Letters, &c.—W. F. C., L——, Tenn.—1. It is only offices supplied in whole, or in part, by railway Post Offices that are allowed to discontinue wrapping. You must not confound offices supplied by railroad with those supplied by railway Post Offices: all offices but the latter, whether supplied by railroad or otherwise, are required to wrap. 2. You do not charge yourself for the new Regulations in your quarterly return but in your general account, and you should make this charge as soon as you receive the book. 3. At offices where the business is not extensive enough to require a separate room, and where the net proceeds amount to at least five dollars per quarter, a cheap, plain desk or case is allowed, but for permission to procure this you must apply to the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department: the Regulations fix no price for it. 4. A Postmaster cannot remove the site of his office from the usual post road, or make any material change in such site without the consent of the Department.

Delivering Letters Addressed to another Office.—W. F. C., L——, Tenn.—"Postmasters cannot deliver letters from their respective offices which may be addressed to and deliverable from other offices, except in cases of letters addressed to a discontinued office nearest the office where such letters are held for delivery."

Postage on Bundles of Papers for Gratuitous Distribution.—J. M. J., H——, Vt.—If the papers referred to are sent to bona fide subscribers—no matter who pays their subscriptions—they should be charged with postage at regular quarterly rates; if strictly for gratuitous circulation, the postage should be prepaid by stamp at transient rates—but if they are received unpaid, they should be charged at prepaid transient rates.

Removing Stamps from Circulars, &c.—O H. S., M——, N. Y.—1. The law provides, in substance, as follows, viz.: If any person shall wilfully remove from any letter posted at, or received in any post office, any postage stamp, affixed thereto in payment of postage, he shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months. 2. In billing for postage, you must not bill to the D. P. O. if you send the letter to one. If you mail direct, you bill to the office to which you send the letter. No bill is required with unpaid matter to a D. P. O.

Law Regulating Postage on Unpaid Transient Matter.—J. O., M., C——, Mo.—The wording of the law would seem to confine its provisions to letters, but it has been decided that they apply likewise to papers. Hence Sec. 150 of Regulations of 1866 directs: "If any matter on which, by law the postage is required to be paid at the mailing office, shall reach its destination unpaid, the prepaid rates shall be charged and collected on delivery." The directions on the third page of the Mail, have been altered to conform to the regulations; it was marked to be done in two or three previous issues, but each time escaped the notice of the proof readers.

Postage on Foreign Letters, &c.—D. C., Mt. P——, Utah.—1. The postage on foreign letters is according to the Table, and there is no increase for the premium on gold in the postage on letters to foreign countries. The postage is charged on those from foreign countries, at the exchange office, according to the gold rate on the day they are received. In other words, on letters leaving your office, postage is to be charged according to the table, in currency. On letters arriving, it is to be collected, if unpaid, as charged on the letter. 2. Sec. 229, Regulations of 1866, evidently intends that letter postage should be charged on all the matter mentioned that is conveyed from any part of the East to any place west of the western boundary of Kansas, and the same coming east, from any point west of the eastern boundary of California, as well as between those two boundaries; but this would not allow such matter to be sent to California on newspaper postage because it is "mail matter sent westward beyond the western boundary of Kansas." 3. Of course, if you never see who "drops a letter in" your office, you cannot encourage him to use reqnest envelopes, but you can encourage those you do see mail letters, and this is all that is expected. 4. If a parcel, chargeable with letter postage, is deposited in a post office with one rate prepaid, it must be sent to its destination charged with the balance of the full prepaid rate. You will thus see there will be no loss of postage stamps, in the case you mention.

Franking by Members of Congress Elect.—J. W., C—— H——, N. C.—Members of Congress elect have not the Franking Privilege. The law gives it to "Members of Congress during their term of office, and until the first Monday in December following."

Mail Carrier Leaving Main Road to Deliver Mail.—C. B., B—— M——, Ms.—Such questions as yours are difficult to answer, so much depends on local circumstances. As a general rule, a mail carrier must deliver the mail as near to the door of the post office as he can go, without leaving his horses. It seems to us that this question of a mail carrier going a few rods more or less, in a certain direction, is more one of good feeling and courtesy between the postmaster and the carrier than it one of strict right.

Mailing to a Distributing Office.—G. L., F——, N. C.—Section 93 seems very clear. Letters not mailed direct should be mailed to the first D. P. O. through which they must pass. All the letters, therefore, from your office, which would first pass through the Raleigh office, should be mailed to that D. P. O. Whether packages received at that office, directed to another D. P. O. are opened, we cannot say, but presume not. But even if they were, that fact would not explain the reason why letters addressed to a town in another State are received at and advertised in a town of similar name in your State. It is just as likely that the mistake should occur in your office as in the D. P. O.

Cramming Letter Boxes with Stones, &c.—L. P. W., P——, Conn.—We cannot advise you on this subject. Wilful injury or destruction of letter boxes is a penal offence, but the matter of which you complain seems rather to arise from that spirit of fun, mistaken though it be, which is indigenous to American youth, than from any wilful wickedness.

Postmasters Receiving Mutilated Currency.—H. M. G., L——, Ind.—Postmasters are obliged to receive, for postage stamps, mutilated currency according to its value, as fixed by the Treasury Department, but of course they are not expected to take the counterfeit. Should any doubt arise, it is best for a postmaster to agree to mark such, and make a memorandum of the person from whom he receives it, and if it is not returned to him, then to give the owner the amount in stamps.

Miscellaneous Information.

Dead Letters.

By the instructions under the postal laws, UNMAILABLE LETTERS are specified to be—

Unpaid letters for foreign countries, on which prepayment is required by the regulations.

Letters not addressed, or so badly addressed that their destination cannot be known.

Letters misdirected to places where there are no post offices.

Only such letters as are herein described are, when deposited in any post office, to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office; all others must be dispatched to their destination, charged with the amount of unpaid postage.

When unmailable letters are sent to the Dead Letter Office, the specific reason therefor must be endorsed upon the envelope of each.

These instructions will be strictly followed at all post offices.

For more full instructions relating to dead letters, advertising letters, &c., examine carefully Chap. 35, Regulations of 1866, and Sections 1 and 2, Act of June 12, 1866.

RULE FOR RATING LETTERS TO GREAT BRITAIN, &C.

The attention of postmasters is particularly called to the mode of rating postage upon letters exchanged in the mails between this country and the United Kingdom, which differs only in the rate, and not, as heretofore, in the weight or standard. The maximum standard weight is now half an onnee, and the rate is twenty-four cents; postage to Great Britain and Ireland, therefore, is as follows, viz.:

One rate (24 cents) for a single letter not exceeding ½ oz. in weight.

Two rates (48 cents) when over ½, but not exceeding 1 ounce.

Three rates (72 cents) when over 1, but not exceeding 1½ ounces, &c., &c.

Thus, a letter to Great Britain, weighing 4½ ounces, should be paid $2.16, being chargeable with nine rates. All part paid letters to foreign countries are treated as wholly unpaid, and the amount paid lost to the sender.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore, decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at itspleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and it charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

Applications for blank registers of arrival and departure of the mails must be made direct to the "Inspection office." For special instructions, to the First Assistant Postmaster General.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

Applications for these stamps should be made to the Appointment office.

Postmasters at offices, the gross receipts of which are less than $75 per annum, if they use rating stamps must obtain the same at their own expense.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly: when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any question as to prepayment, by this simple criterion.

Domestic Postages.

The law requires postage on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or, (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established, the rate is 1 ct.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

RATES OF LETTER POSTAGE BETWEEN OFFICES IN THE UNITED STATES, AND TO AND FROM CANADA AND OTHER BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES

To and from Canada and New Brunswick, Inc. per ½ oz., irrespective of distance.

To and from other British N. Am. Provinces, for distance not over 3,000 miles. ..... 10 cts.

For any distance over 3,000 miles..... 15 "

For every additional half ounce, or fraction of a half ounce, an additional rate is charged. Prepayment is optional on all letters for the British North American Provinces except Newfoundland, to which prepayment is compulsory.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Dagnerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material, (not in cases,) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter—viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Photographic Albums are chargeable with book postage—four cents for each four ounces, or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

Postage on Daily Papers to subscribers when prepaid quarterly or yearly in advance, either at the mailing office or office of delivery, per quarter, (three months). 35 cts.

Six times per week, " " 30 "

For Tri-Weekly, " " 25 "

For Semi-Weekly, " " 10 "

For Weekly, " " 5 "

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers on any part of the U. S.:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz. ..... 6 cts.

" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz... 12 "

" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz... 18 "

Monthly, not over 4 oz. ..... 3 "

" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz ..... 6 "

" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 9 "

Quarterly, not over 4 oz. ..... 1 "

" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 2 "

" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.... 3 "

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the p. m. must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, any four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications, the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of news papers, magazines and periodicals to regular subscribers,) sent via Overland Mail, is to be charged at letter postage rates.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, and scions,) the postage to be pre-paid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the new Post Office Law, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows—"The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing hooks, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings of scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the seperate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (except bills and receipts for subscription) in, or to write or print anything, after its publication, upon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the person to whom it is to be sent, and the date when subscription expires, subjects the package to letter postage.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO POSTMASTERS.

THE undersigned respectfully solicits attention to his system of keeping, rendering and collecting Newspaper and Box accounts. He offers it as the result of twelve years' experience in the difficulties, vexations and uncertainties of keeping these accounts in accordance with Postal Law and Regulations, so well understood and painfully realized by Postmasters and their assistants.

The author is confident that in this system will be found a most valuable auxiliary, and one long needed in this perplexing branch of official duty. The advantages of it are, its simplicity, certainty, celerity, and cheapness. It is in exact and full accordance with the requisitions of Postal Law, and renders compliance with the regulations of the Department in regard to these accounts, and their Quarterly Return, easy, certain, and with little comparative cost of time and labor.

The blank forms are on folio sheets of the usual size of Post Office blanks, and are arranged to embrace a period of four years.

From ten to fifteen sheets are sufficient to last that period for offices of the Fifth and Fourth classes, and will be sent together with a copy of the explanations, directions and examples, by mail, post paid, as follows:

For Ten Sheets ..... $1 50.
For Fifteen Sheets ..... 2 00.

After which Postmasters ordering in quantities of from Ten to Twenty sheets will be furnished by mail, post paid, at the rate of $4.00 per 100 sheets.

Over this quantity, for large offices, an additional amount, to cover Postage, will be required.

The blank form for Postage Receipts on inferior paper will be furnished in sheets to those ordering them, at a reduced rate.

WILLIAM TRYON.

☞ All orders must be addressed to George W. Tryon, Box 5532

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

TO THE BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES.

Cape Breton, Pr'e Edward's Island, and Nova Scotia. To Newfoundland prepayment required. To Canada and New Brunswick, 10c. per ½ oz., any distance.

* 10 cents when not over 3,000 miles from the line of crossing.

* 15 cents when distance exceeds 3,000 miles. Prepayment optional.

Steamers of the Cunard line sail from Boston twice each month, touching at Halifax, and when letters are sent by that conveyance for Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward's Island, the U. S. postage is 5 cents the single rate, to be prepaid. The inland rate is collected on delivery. On newspapers by this route, the postage is two cents each.

Newspapers and periodicals published in the United States and sent to regular subscribers in the British North American Provinces, or published in those Provinces and sent to regular subscribers in the United States, are chargeable with the regular prepaid quarterly rates of United States postage to and from the line; which postage must be collected at the office of mailing in the United States on matter sent, and at the office of delivery in the United States on matter received. In like manner, such matter, if transient, is chargeable with the regular domestic transient printed matter rates to and from the line, to be collected at the office of mailing or delivery in the United States, as the case may be. Editors, however, may exchange free of expense.

REGISTRATION OF LETTERS.

Valuable letters for Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen or Hamburg line via New York, or by the Prussian closed mail via New York and Boston, as also letters addressed to Great Britain and Canada, will be registered on the application of the person posting the same, in the same manner and on the same terms as those deliverable in the United States, provided that the full postage chargeable thereon to destination, together with a registration fee of twenty cents on each letter to Great Britain or Ireland, and five cents on each letter to the other places mentioned above, is prepaid at the mailing office. Such letters should be mailed and forwarded to the respective United States exchange offices in the same manner as domestic registered letters are mailed to those offices.

RULE OF RATING LETTERS, ETC.

Letters addressed to Great Britain and Ireland are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, a single rate being charged for each half ounce, &c.

Letters in the mail to France are to be charged with single rate of postage if not exceeding the weight of one quarter ounce; double rate if exceeding a quarter, but not exceeding half an ounce; and so on, an additional rate being charged for each quarter ounce or fractional part of a quarter ounce. Letters addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Hamburg, and the British North American Provinces, are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an ounce. Postmasters, should be careful, where the postage is prepaid, to collect the proper amount. They should be particular to notice the route indicated on the envelopes of letters, and to collect postage accordingly. Letters mailed at some offices, marked "via England," or "via Prus'n closed mail," for a German State, are frequently taken upon the prepayment of Bremen rates, and those marked "via Bremen," at Prussian closed rates, &c.

RULE OF RATING LETTERS GOING VIA FRANCE

In the case of letters to be forwarded in the British mail for transmission from England via "Marseilles," the French postage is rated at 6 cents the quarter ounce, except on letters for Java, China, Labuan, Borneo, Japan, the Moluccas and Philipine Islands, which are rated at eight cents per half ounce, and except, also, on letters for Syria and Asia, by French packet, when the single French rate is 12 cents per quarter ounce.

The rates by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz.: Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey, in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent via Suez, countries beyond seas, via France, other than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibralter, Hong Kong, Java, Mauritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia, (except Belgrade,) Shanghai, Singapore and Spain. VOL. VII, No. 2. NEW YORK, NOVEMBER, 1866. WHOLE No. 74.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO.

I was not the only one that was hurried back to town by the premature wintry weather; but I don't believe any of the multitudes of home returners felt more rejoiced to get under the domestic vine or fig-tree than your humble correspondent. To be sure the cause of my hurried departure still existed to a limited extent; but the constant exposure to the enemy's fire makes the most timid reckless, if not brave, so my varied border trials and tribulations fortified me against fear to such an extent that I could have snapped my fingers at a legion of contagious diseases had they dared me to the encounter. On my bitter journey I felt quite invigorated, and I don't think I ever enjoyed a trip so much. The weather was delightful, the cold snap had exhausted itself, the summer heat and the summer dust were things of the past, our own sublime autumn was around and about us; a golden dreamy haze was in the sky; the forests were clad in their gorgeous thousand-tinted robes; the mild sunshine mellowed the ever-changing landscape, and everything in nature imparted rapturous gratification. Perfectly happy and at peace with all the world, I was good company for myself, and I gave a free rein to my thoughts. Among the many subjects which shared my meditations, was one which I confess I could not manage mentally to my satisfaction, and that was the extraordinary desire of people during the summer season, to leave their cozey, roomy homes, replete with every conceivable convenience, and at an enormous expense purchase limited accommodations and a thousand aggravating discomforts at some fashionable sea-shore, mountain-top, river side, or mineral water resort.

Newport to be sure has its Ocean House, and ocean surf, its dusty day drives, and its nocturnal revels. The White Mountains, after the toil of climbing them, have their hot days sandwiched between cool morniogs and evenings, have their nooks, and crooks, and fussy brooks, their dinners and their dances. Saratoga has her variety of hostelries, her recuperatory waters, her races and her roulettes, her patrician and plebeian patrons, her churchly virtues and her worldly vices, her sloughs and her miseries. Niagara, the unique, the mighty and never resting, has her world-wide prestige, her international vis-a vis, her terrors and her temptings, her exciting drives and promenades along fearful precipices, her dizzying Suspension Bridge, her blood-curdling inclined plane, her boiling ferry, walled by sprays and roofed by rainbows; and the numberless other bathing, watering, and airing resorts all have their fascinations, excitements, temptations, bewitcheries and disappointments, but with all their good qualities aggregated, and their bad ones ignored, I believe that nineteen out of every twenty of these human swallows, at the close of the gayest season, realize the truth of the beautiful sentiment—"Be it ever so humble—there is no place like home." Of course these places are, and of right ought to be, Meccas for valetudinarians, and brain and mind worn invalids. Brine, fine air and medicated waters, in such cases, are essential and beneficial; but as I said before, for wealth, health, and refinement to change the luxuries and liberties of princely habitations for the conventual routine, apocryphal associations, and the disgusting restraints of these fashionable places, merely in obedience to the decrees of the inexorable Mrs. Grundy, is to say the least a matter of positive astonishment. But I can't remedy the matter, and don't know that I would if I could—but in connection with it, a great amount of trouble and annoyance is foisted upon the Post Office department, which might be remedied. Many of these eccentric satellites of fashion and primordial custom, like mother Carey's chickens, are constantly on the wing. Forty-eight hours spent at any one locality seems like a limited life time, and in many cases laundresses are required to furnish forth the recently sent out soiled linen, washed and starched but unironed—the latter process having to be performed at the next "fetch up." Now these wanderers when they left home gave to their correspondents a particular address, for instance "Prolelary Buck, Esq., Brown-Stone Hotel, Root Beer Springs, New Jersey." When Buck left his friends and his home, Root Beer Springs was the objective point, and to that delectable refuge from heat, creditors and poor relations he requested his letters to be addressed. Arriving there, a brief stay surfeits him, and he "moves on" to the next salt, sulphur, or cliff establishment, to leave there again after a few days, and so on until he has exhausted the supply. In the meantime his letters come to "Root Beer." He either has or has not left instructions at the hotel to forward his letters—in either cases it amounts to about the same thing—for if they are not "gobbled up" by hotel attaches, or delivered to wrong parties—they become so traveled stained, and illegible, after passing through two or three hotel offices, that they are neglected or overlooked, and never overtake him. Of course the disappointed Buck becomes indignant, and pours out the vials of his wrath, not upon hotel keepers and their clerks, but upon the Post Office, and he spares no efforts to bring innocent postmasters to grief. Now it strikes me if the postmasters at these various points of attraction would have periodical examinations made of the letters remaining uncalled for, and unforwarded at the hotels, they would make frequent discoveries of alleged lost or missing ones, and thereby relieve themselves of much (undeserved) censure, and mail-agents or whatever name they go by, of a good deal of much fruitless labor. The adoption of this rule at all hotels I think would work advantageously. I suppose there is no regulation or instruction of the Department making it obligatory to do it; but it strikes me that much benefit would result from the establishment of such a system, not only to post offices, and the owners of letters, but it would create a greater respect for the fiduciary character of the responsibility imposed upon hotel keepers by their confiding guests, and more care and time would be taken to secure the prompt delivery and safe keeping of letters directed to their care.

MONSIEUR TONSON.

Communications.

A——a, N. Y., October, 1866.

Mr. Editor:—"'Tis pleasant to see one's name in print," but it is also sometimes surprising, especially when "one wakes up some morning and finds one's self famous," not even having dreamed of such a thing the night before. And I was surprised when I saw that you had printed my letter in full, and thus launched "my bark upon the sea of literature." I had no idea of such a compliment, but I hope that you have no fear that I will prove a troublesome correspondent. I promise you I will not, for although "my bark is afloat," it is a tiny one, and I doubt if this second letter will not exhaust its freight. The most that I hoped for was a few words among your "Answers to Correspondents;" and there is where, after eagerly waiting for the Mail, I looked, but when I found not a word of reply, I threw down the paper in a not very amiable mood, and I do believe I had the usual idea regarding editors, held by those whose communications receive no notice, that is, that editors do not know how to appreciate genius. After a few moments, however, to recover my equanimity, I concluded I would finish reading the paper, knowing if I did not I would punish myself more than you, when lo I found my letter, as I have said, printed in full. I must then consider that you are willing to have me tell you what I know or have seen, and that you know how to appreciate genius. Post Office tattling is so mean, so absurd, so unmanly, so wicked that too much cannot be said against it, and I am glad to see that Monsieur Tonson does not consider it beneath the notice of his able pen. Speaking of Monsieur's letter, it enabled me to escape very handsomely and almost truthfully, Dick's charge that I "might have written my own letter if I only had brains enough." I berate Dick a great deal about this post office tattling, and he always says 'Pshaw, Fannie, people in the country always will take an interest in other people's affairs." To tell the truth, though, Dick does not tattle much, but as for Joe, the delivery clerk, why he is as perfect a specimen as you could wish to find. I would just like you to be in our post office about 12 o'clock, after the academy dismisses, and the scholars are on their way home to dinner, and see how they rush into the office inquiring for letters for themselves and everybody they know; a very favorite practice is to take letters for their acquaintances, under pretence that they will deliver them, when after reading the addresses they will return them with the plea that they are not going home immediately after school, or that some of the folks will be in town themselves, and this does not happen occasionally, but every day. But this is not so bad as their crowding round the delivery window, asking Joe all sort of questions about who received letters, whether so and-so, and so-and-so, and Joe is all smiles, and fancies himself a hero and oracle, giving all the information in his power, tells that Jenale B. received a large package, thinks it was an elegant book from Philadelphia, and Harry K. received a large envelope, thinks it contained a pair of slippers, from Cleveland. Now all the village knows who Jennie's Philadelphia correspondent is, and who it is in Cleveland that would send slippers to Harry K.; but that is no reason why the post office should gossip about it. I was so indignant one day at the actions I saw between Joe and the academy scholars, that I scolded Dick all the way home. He called me a prude and silly and cold hearted, but I don't care, I know I am right. I know that post office clerks have no business to tell who send or receive letters.

During one of my visits to Aunt Hepsey, I met a young gentleman from Albany. Among other matters that came up in conversation was the post office. Aunt Hepsey has two daughters: this gentleman wanted to send one of them a book for a birth-day present, and not to let her know of it till she found it among her other presents, on the day. To provide against a chance in delays of the mails, he wrote to his sister that on such a day he would send a book addressed to a certain name, that she must get it from the office, and make such disposition as he requested; he had to do this because the one who was to receive the present usually goes to the office and gets all the mail for the family, and of course if there were a book she would want to know what it was; but the gentleman's nice little plan was foiled. The sister wrote to him not to send the book directed in another name, as it would make "such a talk" but to direct it to her, and she would manage to go to the office for it. Now this is a simple affair to trouble you with, but it shows the meanness of this post office tattling so well. When I spoke of it to Dick, he replied that the Department did not allow the delivery of letters bearing fictitious addresses. There may be some good reason for this as a general rule, but I do not believe it was meant to apply to cases where harmless social pleasantries are the sole motive, and if it was, that is no reason for clerks to talk about it—they need not tell that they delivered Sophia Jones a package directed Cornelia Brown, and seat themselves and all the town to wondering and guessing and prying to find out who Cornelia Brown is that is staying at Mrs. Jones, and gazing and staring at all the Jones family the next Sunday, when they come to church, in expectation of seeing the new and unknown visitor. I might say a good deal more on this subject, and tell you a good deal more that I have seen, while waiting for Dick, and I believe I have got brains enough to do it, even though Dick does not think I have. But this must do for this time. I have had "my say," and thanking you for thus affording me this one luxury of woman's life,

I am, very respectfully, your friend.

FANNIE SPIGH.

☞ We have heard of several post offices having been lately entered and robbed at night. This but confirms an opinion we have for some time maintained, that postmasters are not sufficiently careful to guard against burglary. It may seem that the care of a few letters, newspapers, and postage stamps, does not demand a great deal of vigilance or trouble, and that it is needless to incur any but a trifling expense to make a post office secure against unlawful visitors. But postmasters should consider that the property entrusted to their charge is far more valuable than it really appears, more valuable to others, though not to a postmaster himself, and that extra vigilsot care for others property is obligatory, because the persons interested have not the privilege of choosing to whose care such property shall be committed, but they are compelled to rely on the one government agent. In addition to this obligation to have a special care of other people's property, postmasters should recollect that no credit will be allowed them in cases where post offices have been robbed of stamps or stamped envelopes. As stated in the Regulations of 1866. "In an opinion of a former Attorney General, 'One who has the custody of public money or property, and is paid for taking care of it, cannot get rid of his responsibility by showing a theft or accidental loss.'"

It would be judicious to have a clerk sleep in the office, where the business is sufficient to require a separate room, and if this is not practicable, have a good watch dog to act as guardian. Care should also be taken that doors and windows, on lanes or alleys and out of the way places, should be strong and securely fastened. We have known quite large offices with rear doors so slight that a man could cut through them with an ordinary pocket knife, in five minutes, and locks so common that a crooked nail would readily unlock them. We hope these hints and suggestions will be well received, and that postmasters will be "wise in time." The old adage of "locking the door after the steed is stolen," is peculiarly pertinent to our warning.

☞ A foolish story was lately started by some malicious individual, who telegraphed to a New York paper that a newly appointed Postmaster had refused to receive in his office for mailing, certain unnewspapers published in the same town, and that he had stated, when remonstrated with, that he had "received instructions" not to forward any papers through his office except such as supported a particular political policy. The whole story was of course false—no such absurd "instructions" ever having been issued to that or any other postmaster. The statement, doubtless, originated in his refusal to deliver, free, newspapers published in the town and intended for subscribers within the delivery of the office—a refusal in which he was perfectly justified. The free circulation of weekly newspapers within the county where published, applies only to such as are conveyed by mail, and not to those deposited in a post office for delivery thence. By the decision of the Department, published in the July number of the Mail, a postmaster is not obliged to deliver such papers. If, however, he does deliver them through courtesy, he can make no charge for so doing, and of course should make no discriminations in such a matter on political, personal, or any other grounds. He should not do it at all if it involves neglect of his regular official duties.

"The Post Office Question."

The New York Evening Post, in a late issue, published an editorial under the above title, based upon the statements contained in a letter to the Tribune written from San Francisco last winter. The arguments and assertions in that article, and the accompanying letter, are of the same nature as a number of others which have from time to time appeared in print, favoring the policy of dissolving the connection of the government with the mail service, and leaving the transportation and delivery of the correspondence of the country to express companies or other private enterprises. Any proposition of such magnitude as to involve the abolition of an institution which at present has so important a bearing upon our social and commercial interests should certainly be supported by calm and well-considered arguments based upon indisputable facts, and presented only after a careful review of all the existing circumstances of the case, and of all the probable consequences of making the proposed change. We do not think this course has been pursued by the Post in the present instance.

The portions of the letter of the Tribune's correspondent referring to the mail service in California are the following:

"The Wells, Fargo & Company Express is a prominent and all-pervading interest on the Pacific slope. It transports most of the business letters and nearly all treasure and other packages from the interior to this city, and hence to New York. It combines banking and express business, and has about one hundred offices. One encounters its messengers on stage-coach, railway train and steamer, and sees its signs in every town and mining camp. Like other great express companies, it illustrates the superiority of private enterprise. When its messengers run side by side, on the very steamer, or the same railway carriage, with those of the United States mail, three-fourths of the business men entrust it with their letters, which are invariably delivered in advance of the government consignments. In this city Mr. Colfax dropped a note into the mail, making an engagement for the next week with a gentleman residing less than half a mile from our hotel. Three days after the appointed time his friend appeared, saying, 'I have just received your letter. Why didn't you send it by Wells, Fargo & Co.?'

"The uniform charge for delivering letters is twelve and a half cents, but the company carries them only in stamped envelopes, thus paying a government tax of three cents on every half ounce. Yet the post office authorities oppose it, and a mail agent comes out periodically from Washington proposing to stop it. Half a million of the 'fierce democracy' being in its favor, however, he might as well forbid water to run down hill. Last year it carried 2,300,000 letters. Two and a quarter millions of writers paid 9½ cents extra not to have their letters subjected to the Circumlocution Office. What stronger proof of the folly of government mails! It might with just as much propriety sell groceries, convey heavy freight, or deliver washing. The Post Office Department is a hopeless nuisance, which, like the wrongs of our forefathers, has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished. Abolish it altogether. Leave this, like other carrying trade, open to private competition, and the mail service of the United States would be performed fifty per cent. cheaper and one hundred per cent better than it is to-day."

In introducing these extracts, the Post says that

"It is a remarkable illustration of the mischief done by the government when it charges itself with the transactions to which individuals, but for its interference, would naturally attend for their own convenience and interest. The monopoly of the mail is a very glaring instance of this mischievous officiousness. Two men want to communicate with each other by letter. They are not allowed to employ a person to carry their written messages to each other for a compensation, which would be the case if the Post Office laws did not prevent it. The government steps in and arrogates to itself a monopoly of carrying the business communications, which private persons address to each other on the subject of their own concerns. The government might as well undertake to convey passengers from port to port by sea, or on our rivers, or on our canals, railroads, and stage routes. To escape the penalties of this absurd law, the express company carry letters in stamped envelopes, paying a tax to the government equal to what it would derive from carrying and delivering the letters, and then, running side by side with the mails, they beat them out of sight in despatch, certainty and punctuality. Our Post Office system is a bungling affair in comparison."

That is to say: Because an express company, whose operations as letter carriers are confined to a single State of the Union, where there is scarcely a railroad in existence, but where the necessities of the people require constant transportation of gold from the interior to the coast, can, with the facilities necessary to conduct such an enterprise successfully, combine with their ordinary business the carrying of letters at a charge of three hundred per cent. over the government rate of postage, and can do this—in California—so well that many of the people there prefer to entrust their letters to them, therefore "the Post Office Department is a hopeless nuisance," and the Tribune correspondent demands that it be "abolished altogether." There is an additional fact connected with this matter, however, which that writer ought to know—if he does not already—namely, that a very great proportion of the letters which Wells, Fargo & Co. are thus paid twelve and a half cents each for delivering, are not delivered by them at all—but after being conveyed (by the same steamer which carries the mails) from San Francisco to New York, are there deposited by Wells, Fargo & Co. in the Post Office, four or five hours after the mail letters sent by the same steamer have reached the Post Office and been forwarded thence to their destination. When the steamer arrives after the middle of the day, these letters often do not reach the Post Office until the next day. Precisely what advantage in "despatch, certainty, and punctuality" is gained by the writers of these letters—who have paid 9½ cents freight on each of them, in addition to the postage—is not very apparent. We are speaking, of course, of letters only—not money packages, for which a receipt is given, and a per centage paid according to value.

The Post further says that it has, "for more than thirty years, been in favor of liberating the government from all connection with the Post Office. It is a connection which only brings the government into discussion with the people; or, is not with the people generally, but with all who have an opportunity of comparing the awkward, clumsy, and inefficient manner in which it performs the office of a carrier of messages between man and man, with the swift and punctual execution of the same office by private expresses. Some time or other this anomaly in our institutions, this invasion of the proper province of the private citizen, this obstruction of the free communication between man and man, this absurd restraint, in short, upon personal liberty—for such it is, make the best of it—will be done away. The monopoly of the mails will be abrogated, when men become a little more enlightened as to the proper province and functions of government. It will be abrogated at some moment, when men are able to pause awhile from the contentions of parties, and occupy themselves with beneficial changes in legislation. The sooner that time arrives the better for the country.

One circumstance that makes such a change important at the present time is the wants of the treasury. We have piled up an immense national debt in the course of the war, a debt so large that if we had anticipated it six years before, we should, in the very prospect of it, have despaired utterly of ever paying it. We know, now, however, that it can be paid, and a reform in our Post Office laws, which should open the mails to private enterprise, might be effected in such a manner as largely to help to pay it. The express companies would be glad to make a bargain with the government which would secure to the federal treasury one cent upon every letter delivered, and they would undertake to deliver the letters to individuals for three cents each, as now. In this way the government would get rid of the entire expense of the Post Office, amounting to many millions yearly, and receive annually a large income from those who should be admitted to the privilege of carrying letters from one part of the United States to another."

If the object of the government, in assuming charge of the transportation and delivery of the correspondence of individuals were to make that service a source of revenue, such arguments would have more force; but every one knows that the reason why this government, and all governments, insist upon retaining the mails in government charge is, that regular postal communication between all points of the country is a matter of too great importance to be subject to the caprices, convenience, and exactions of private individuals. "Private expresses" will carry letters and packages from point to point so long as the business pays, and no longer. It does pay in California, but not elsewhere; and Wells, Fargo & Co.'s is the only express company in the country which makes a regular business of carrying letters at all. Does any one doubt that the express companies would be "glad to make a bargain" to convey letters between New York and Boston, or Philadelphia, or Chicago, at three cents each, and pay a tax of one cent each to the government? And does any one believe that they would be "glad" to convey a letter from Skowhegan, in Maine, to Pine Bluff, in Arkansas, on the same terms?

If "all who have an opportunity of comparing" the operations of the Post Office Department and the express companies are so struck with the superiority of the latter, how is it that the columns of the newspapers (those of the Post included, if we mistake not) so often bristle with the wrathful complaints of correspondents as to the exorbitant charges and vexatious delays of these companies, to say nothing of the insolence of their employes? What express company in the country now undertakes to deliver packages beyond the limits of towns, or villages directly on the line of railroad or steamboat routes? There are thousands of mail routes throughout the country on which the government undertakes to deliver, and does deliver, letters at half a dozen post offices daily semi-weekly, or tri-weekly, where the receipts for postage do not begin to cover the expense of postmasters' salary and contractors' pay, and where an expressman has never been seen or heard of. Peculiarly this does not pay; but the government considers, and rightly, that by keeping up the service on just such routes as these, the indirect advantages to the people of regular mail communication, identified as it is so closely with their intellectual, moral, and business prosperity, justifies what is apparently an outlay of money bringing no return.

As for the government monopoly of the mail service being "an absurd restraint upon personal liberty," it is no more of such a restraint than the law compelling a believer in the bliss of ignorance to pay his school-tax, or granting a railroad corporation the right of way through private grounds, regardless of the wishes of the owner. Many private rights have to yield to the demands of the public welfare; and we believe the government best consults the public good by forbidding the competition of private individuals with itself in carrying letters, in order that it may be the better able to extend the blessings of a cheap postal system over the whole country. Take away from the Post Office its national character, and leave the duties it now performs to the hands of private persons or corporations (who will manage them with "a single eye" to their own good, or else belie all experience), subject to State control, and to the confusion and interruptions liable at any time to arise from local causes, and we are confident that the experiment would prove a magnificent failure.

What "private enterprise" does as exemplified in city railroad companies (and a good many other railroad companies), California steamship companies, and even some express companies, viz., to extract the maximum of cash from the public in exchange for the minimum of accommodation—would be very likely to be exemplified on a larger scale were the mail service given over, as the Post proposes, to private hands.

The Post Office Department is not faultless; its servants may not all be faithful, not all honest, not all devoted to the public good. There are many reasons why it is not now in all respects what it should be, nor what it will be. But the people are not quite prepared to surrender the advantages it at present affords them in the hopes of any improvement that could be expected from the transfer of its functions to the hands of a dozen or a hundred individuals or companies.

Perhaps it may not be out of place to relate, by way of offset to the Tribune correspondent's story of Mr. Colfax's delayed letter, one or two occurrences which have come under the writer's observation in the course of investigation of reported delay in the mail service:

Not long since a gentleman in Savannah sent to New York by express, several letters, each containing a large sum of money—in all, about $7,000—addressed to a banker here. The letters reached the express office in New York, their arrival being recorded on the books of the company, but they did not reach the banker to whom they were addressed. On his making inquiry for them, it was found that they had been given in charge of a young man in the Company's employ to deposit in the Post Office. This, of course, accounted for the trouble at once; some dishonest Post Office clerk had embezzled the letters, and complaint was at once made to the Postmaster. Careful search and inquiry was made, but without success—the thief had so well "covered his tracks" that the attempt to discover him seemed hopeless. So the matter stood, when it was ascertained that the young man to whom the letters had been entrusted had suddenly decamped from the express office, and being traced, was discovered in the far West, whither he had gone to enjoy the fruits of his ingenious attempt to cast the odium of his crime upon the Post Office.

The editor of a New York morning paper about a year since published an article bitterly denouncing the inefficiency of the Post Office Department, and strongly urging its abolition—the cause of his wrath being the fact that he had placed a letter in the New York Post Office, addressed to a village about thirty miles distant on the Harlem Railroad, which had been two days in reaching its destination. He also alleged that the copies of his paper addressed to subscribers residing on the line of that road, and other roads, were very often one or two days in reaching them, and sometimes did not reach them at all, the fault being in the New York Post Office. An investigation was promptly made, and developed the facts that the long-delayed letter was directed in a handwriting so eccentric as to resemble Chinese as much as English chirography, and had been laid aside until a clerk more familiar with hieroglyphics than his fellows, tracing some dim resemblance in the address to the name of a post office, it was sent there "on a guess," which proved to be correct. The difficulty as to the newspapers proved to be the result of carelessness on the part of the persons employed in the newspaper office, who were in the habit of sending an average of a hundred copies a day to the Post Office, with no address whatever on the wrappers, and also of sending entire sacks full directed to subscribers on the line of the Harlem Railroad, labelled "Hudson River" or "New Haven," and vice versa, the sacks not being opened until they reached the hands of the route agents on the trains, when it was too late to repair the blunder. These practices had been brought to the attention of the publisher of the paper by the officers of the New York Post Office, but it was of course much easier for the editor to write a slashing article abusing the Post Office than to inquire as to the real locality of the fault, which might have been found in the basement of his own office.

Since the above was written, we have seen in the Nation (one of the ablest journals in the country, and one which could never be accused of any backwardness in finding fault with the Post Office) the following remarks on this proposal to hand over the postal interests of the country to the tender mercies of the express companies:

"The Evening Post has come out in favor of the abolition of the Government Post Office and the transfer of the letter-carrying business to express companies. We shall be in favor of this change also whenever we see a disposition in any quarter to make express companies amenable either to law or public opinion. They have recently, by wholesale consolidation, escaped from the checks usually imposed on money-making corporations by competition. Whenever a rival makes its appearance in the field the whole weight of the capital and prestige of the old company is brought to bear on it, and it is speedily crushed. For neglect or misconduct or incivility on the part of the great express companies and great railroad companies, poor men have now absolutely no remedy. To talk of the courts as an instrument of justice in such cases is a mockery; inasmuch as these companies keep lawyers on a yearly salary, to whom and to their employers it is a mere amusement to defend suits, while to a busy or poor plaintiff litigation is ruin. The State legislatures, Congress, the courts and the municipal corporations are daily passing more and more under the influence of these gigantic monopolies. They promise, in our opinion, before very many years, to prove a greater curse to this country than any aristocracy now in existence to any country of the Old World, because they have "neither a soul to be saved nor a body to be kicked." We now see, however, the great organ of free trade proposing that a fresh addition be made to their powers and privileges by handing over to them a monopoly of letter-carrying—a business which so nearly concerns the happiness of the community. It is a duty which cannot be safely entrusted to anybody but the Government. Governments discharge it in France and England with a punctuality, safety, economy, and fidelity such as no company has displayed or will ever display here or elsewhere, in any branch of business; and if the public wills it, our Government can be made to do it just as well. Government is the only corporation over which the people have any effective control; and we warn them that, if they allow it to hand over its duties to private speculators, the result will simply be the reduction of the masses to still deeper and more degrading subjection to the Vanderbilts, Laws, and other capitalists of this class, who play very much the part in our day, mutatis mutandis, which the robber barons played in the Middle Ages."

J GAYLER, . . . Editor.

NEW YORK NOVEMBER, 1866

TERMS—One dollar per year, payable in advance. All communications to be addressed to the Publisher of the UNITED STATES MAIL, New York.

Subscriptions received at any Post Office in the United States.

☞ Letters containing remittances for subscriptions, or in reference to the business department of this paper, should be addressed to "Publisher U. S. Mail" and not to the Editor.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, October 25, 1861.

DEAR SIR.—I consider the U. S. MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT a valuable and meritorious publication, useful alike to this Department, to Postmasters throughout the country, and to the public. It is my wish to see it generally circulated among postmasters and others, and I shall with pleasure extend to you every proper facility for enlarging the sphere of its official usefulness, and the range of its circulation. M. BLAIR, Postmaster General.

The following Official Order has also been made by the Postmaster General:

Ordered, That the Assistant Postmasters General, and Chief Clerk of this Department, each cause to be furnished from time to time, for publication in the "United States Mail," all such new orders or regulations of the Department touching the business of the several bureaus as may be of general importance or interest as soon as practicable after the same shall have been promulgated or established.

M. BLAIR, Postmaster General.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, Washington Oct. 13, 1864.

DEAR SIR.—I have no hesitation in adding my endorsement to that of my predecessor, Postmaster General BLAIR, to the usefulness of the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," as a medium of communicating correct information to Postmasters and others respecting postal operations, and cheerfully recommend it to the favor and support of Postmasters and other agents of the Department. W. DENNISON, Postmaster General

To J. GAYLER, Esq. Editor U. S. Mail.

[OFFICIAL.]

New Stamped Envelopes.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, FINANCE OFFICE, October, 1866.

Letter-size envelopes stamped 3 cents, made of a cheaper quality of paper than those heretofore issued, are furnished by the Department at $32.80 per thousand (being $2.80 exclusive of postage,) and in proportion for less quantities.

The better quality at $34.80 per thousand is not, however, superseded, but will be supplied as heretofore, and, if desired, will be ruled for the address, without additional charge. This is the only kind of envelopes furnished with ruled lines.

In using ruled envelopes the superscripion should be written before placing the letter in the envelope, otherwise the lines will be concealed.

Upon all letter and official size envelopes there will be printed across the end, without additional charge, the names, business, and Post Office address of parties, and a request to return if unclaimed within a given time—the whole not to exceed four lines—when ordered in quantities of five hundred and upwards of any specific denomination.

Among the advantages secured to the public by the use of stamped envelopes are:

First. Cheapness.

Second. Security to correspondence. In this, that the stamp cannot be removed nor lost.

Third. Where a request is endorsed for the return of the letter, it will not be sent to the Dead Letter Office in the event of its non-delivery, but will be returned directed to the writer free of postage.

The postage on stamped envelopes, spoiled in directing, will be refunded in stamps as provided in section 189, Postal Regulations.

By order of the POSTMASTER GENERAL:

A. N. ZEVELY,
Third Assistant Postmaster General.

☞ We call attention to the following changes to be made in our list of special agents: Rollin C. Gaskill, and John Graham are no longer agents. Marshall Smith, St. Louis, Mo., and H. C. Tenney, Madison Wis., have been appointed. We will next month give a complete list, with the jurisdiction and Post Office address of each.

Collection of Newspaper Postage.

There is no doubt but that there is a great deal of neglect on the part of postmasters, in collecting postage on newspapers and other printed matter, and the revenue of the Post Office Department thereby considerably diminished. Previous to this time, the payment of postage before delivery became a law; it was allowable for postmasters, and quite common with them to give credit for postage. There were no bills more difficult to collect, none to settle which the debtor was so apt to "have no money with him," or for which he treated a "dun" with so much indifference as postmasters' bills. The consequence was, that in many instances persons have received papers for years without paying any postage on them. The law requiring prepayment of postage was intended to remedy this evil, and it at the same time, by making it obligatory on postmasters to collect the postage in advance, relieved them from the responsibility—perhaps odium is not too strong a word—of refusing to "trust." The old habit of "not having any money by me" still clings to many, even of the most respectable callers at post offices, and deficiency in money seems more than made up in the reply of indignation to shower upon a postmaster who refuses to deliver a paper on which the postage has not been paid. Notwithstanding the "oath," many postmasters bow to this storm of indignation, or escape it entirely by delivering papers without even a demand for the postage. We would say to postmasters that the law requires prepayment on all mail matter, except that mentioned in chapter 17, Regulations of 1866, and in chapter 20, payment before delivery. That they have done this they are required to make oath in every quarterly account. They should resolutely determine to fulfil the law in this respect, and educate the public up to the necessity of doing their part. Refuse at once but politely, to deliver any paper or mail matter on which the postage has not been paid, and the public will soon become as accustomed to carrying money when they go to the post-office as when they go to a store. To obviate the difficulty of collecting postage and keeping accounts of newspaper-box rents, &c., two different gentlemen connected with the postal service have introduced Account Books. We have examined both kinds, and can recommend them. Their advertisements will be found in our columns.

REGISTERING LETTERS TO A D. P. O.—We must again call attention to the ignorance or neglect of postmasters in sending registered letters to a D. P. O. We repeat, when a registered letter, or letters must pass through a D. P. O., put it in an envelope and direct it to the postmaster of that D. P. O. individually. Suppose the letter is to pass through the New York D. P. O., then direct the envelope "Postmaster, New York," and also put registered letters in the bundle of letters for city delivery, and never in that for distribution. Recollect this, never put a registered letter in a D. P. O. bundle. We request our subscribers if they know of any postmasters, who are not subscribers, to take the first opportunity of reading to him this paragraph.

THE POST-OFFICE AT THE VILLAGE OF LANCASTER was entered by burglars Thursday night. The robbers blew open the safe, and carried off some $300 in stamps and currency. No trace of the perpetrators of the act have been discovered, but they are supposed to be parties who were engaged last fall in committing depredations in and around the town.

A CORRESPONDENT of the N. Y. Daily Papers writes that for the fiscal year ending June 30, four millions of dead letters were returned to Washington. This is stated to be 300,000 less than the preceding year, when large armies in motion rendered the delivery of letters less certain.

☞ C. F. MACDONALD, Esq., Superintendent the Money Order Office, has returned to his duties, after an absence of some months, rendered necessary by the state of his health, which is now, we are glad to learn, greatly improved.

PRESENTATION.—F. E. HARRISON, Esq., the courteous and efficient Assistant Postmaster at New Haven, Conn., was presented with a beautiful gold headed ebony cane, by the officers and employees of the New Haven Post Office, on the 17th ult. Postmaster Sperry, with a few well timed remarks, made the presentation, to which Mr. Harrison replied in a beautiful and happy manner. The party then sat down to a fine collation. Numerous toasts were given, and among them was the following, from Mr. Harrison:

"May we all so live that when the welcome signal to "close up" our earthly labors shall come, when the "carriers" shall be appointed to perform for us the last friendly offices of earth, the angelic messengers who shall be the "through route agents," may not "missend" that which is entrusted to them, its "wrapper" being left behind in closed "boxes," but may safely guard us till we arrive at the glorious "general delivery," which awaits "the spirits of just men made perfect."

☞ Although it is our desire and endeavor that our paper should appear on the first of each month, yet it is sometimes, owing to various circumstances, impossible to secure that result. Important changes in the laws and regulations occasionally occur at such times as to require, for the benefit of our readers, that our issue should be postponed for a few days in order to enable us to lay the details of such changes before them at as early a date as possible. Instead of allowing a month to elapse before their publication. Our subscribers will therefore readily understand that a short delay in receiving their papers is sometimes unavoidable, and that when such delay occurs, it is the result of a desire to give them advantage of the latest official information on the postal matters.

Answers to Correspondents.

[Subscribers will greatly oblige us, and often save time and trouble, if they will, before sending us inquiries to be answered in this column, consult the various standing articles in the Mail under the heads of "Miscellaneous Information," "Domestic Postages," &c., &c., for information on the subject in regard to which they are in doubt. We receive a great number of questions, answers to which could readily be found by attending to this request.]

Collecting Double Postage on Papers, when not collected at the beginning of the Quarter.—M. C.——, East O.—The collecting double postage is not required under any circumstances. But in case of papers regularly received by subscribers, the payment of postage should be in advance for at least one quarter, and you cannot deliver such papers until the postage is paid, without violating your official oath; nor can you honestly take the prescribed oath to your quarterly returns: in that oath you swear, "you have not knowingly delivered, or permitted to be delivered, to any person any mail matter on which the postage had not been paid at the time of delivery." If parties are not prepared to pay the postage, withhold the papers until they are, they will soon find the money, it may occasion some dissatisfaction for a while, but in the end they and you will be better satisfied.

Net and Gross Proceeds of an Office.—D. K. S., M——Tenn.—The net proceeds of an office are the proceeds after deducting expenses; the gross proceeds are the whole receipts from whatever source.

Right of Mail Carrier to assist in Changing Mail.—M. P.— W——— C——, Pa.—Mail carriers have not a right to assist in changing a mail, and should not be allowed to do so.

Why People delay Mailing Letters until the Time for Closing the Mails.—F. E. D. S.——F——. Cal.—The "reason why," in this case, would be difficult to state; it may be because, in general, people make a habit of putting off a duty to the latest moment; it may be to save a second trip to the post office in case letters should be written near the time of closing the mails, though, as you state, the practice subjects your office clerks to extraordinary exertions, and sometimes occasions letters to lose a mail; yet we cannot see how it can be changed.

Postmasters obtaining Increased Compensation.—A. W. M——— C———, Mo.—Any Postmaster of an office of the third, fourth, and fifth class seeking a readjustment of his salary, under section 8 of Law of June 12, 1866, "must make to the First Assistant Postmaster General, under oath, a special exhibit of the whole amount of stamps cancelled—that is the amount of postage prepaid by stamps or letters originally mailed at his office during a period of not less than two quarters. Also a statement of other items of postage on which commissions were estimated under the act of 1854." This is all the information we can give you.

Advertising by a Written List. J. R. L., P——, N. J.—No allowance was ever made for advertising letters by a written list, nor is any made now; consequently, letters so advertised should not be charged with one cent.

Disposition of Drop Letters.—P. O. Clerks, P——, Ill.—Drop letters after having been held about a month, should be sent to the Department with other dead letters. No authority is given to Postmasters or Post Office clerks to open sealed letters of any kind to learn the name of the writers.

Settling Accounts with the Department.—O. V. H., J———, Iowa.—Postmasters are required to render quarterly returns to the Department. Post offices are divided into "deposit," "draft," and "collection" offices, and make respectively such dispositions of post office funds, as is required by chapter XXVI, Regulation of 1866, which please to read carefully.

Postage on Autograph Albums.—G. O. S., R——, N. C.—Autograph Albums, and all books containing manuscript writing, are subject to letter postage.

Postage to Scotland!—J. H. C., W——, Pa.—For the rate of postage to England, Wales, Scotland, or Ireland, consult the table for the rates under the name of "Great Britain and Ireland." Scotland is generally supposed to be a portion of Great Britain.

Forwarding Letters. C. R., B———, N. J.—Section 1 of Act of June 12, 1866, provides that "prepaid and free letters shall be forwarded, at the request of the party addressed, from one post office to another, without additional postage charge."

Postage on Photographs to Russia and Germany.—W. R., S———, Ill. They can only be sent at letter rates of postage.

Preserving Orders to forward Registered Letters.—T. M. C., C——— Ga.—The order to forward a registered letter should be attached to the original "Account of Registered Letters Received." As you send a copy of this account to the Department, of course the "order" is retained in your office with the original. Postmasters are required to keep an account of letters sent—the last quarter of every second fiscal year. That quarter ends with the month of June in each even year.

Postage on Papers published in one County and Delivered from a Post Office in an Adjoining County.—W. B. R——— M———, O.—Section 249, Regulations of 1866, provides "Bona fide subscribers to weekly newspapers can receive the same free of postage, if they reside in the county in which the paper is printed and published, even if the office to which the paper is sent is without the county, provided it is the office at which they regularly receive their mail matter."

Regulating the Rent for Post Office Boxes.—W. D. S———, Ga.—The rent for boxes has generally been regulated by postmasters; but since the Acts requiring postmasters to account to the Department for box rents, and establishing salaries for postmasters, we presume that the consent of the Department would be required to make any change.

Preserving Post Office Accounts.—D. M. D———, Mass.—It is considered that two years is long enough to hold the accounts, transcripts of which are sent to the Department.

Registering Letters to Italy.—J. F. N., L———, Ky.—Letters can be registered to Italy and to all places but France, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Holland, Asia, Africa, Australia, Oceanica, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, the islands or colonies of the various powers (except Canada and Jamaica). They cannot be registered to any part of this continent except the United States and Canada.

Increase of Salary of Postmasters.—H. J. S., D——— B———, Wis.—We can only advise you to apply to the Post Master General, Washington, D. C.

Postmasters holding other Offices.—Wm. Mc. V., C——— O—See Sec. 62, Postal Laws, published 1866, as to holding another federal office. We do not think this applies to state offices.

Editor U. S. Mail:—I beg leave through your columns to inform persons sending for sample sheets of "Tryon's Post Office Account Book," that they cannot get a correct idea of the system without the examples and instructions for use, which, with not less than ten blank sheets, comprise the work, and can be sent only as advertised.

A careful following of the directions will demonstrate the utility of the system, and its perfect adaption to the requirements of the service.

Copy right secured.

Your obedient servant,
WM. TRYON.

OF THERMOMETERS.—Not as measurers of the weather, but of character, is the theme of the article. "Chit" at the post-office, superintends their operations, the thermometers being a civil request at the box delivery windows as follows; "Dont hit the bell so hard." He assures us that it is amusing to watch its development. Some show the "asinine" by a rap with double force; others, the "well bread," by courteous attention, while, between these two extremes, the mercury ranges at every stage from fridig to boiling heat. When you call at the box window tomorrow, remember that "Chit" is getting the measure of your character on the scale of his thermometer.

Perhaps the conductors of the horse cars, and other people in quasi-public service, have other similar self-registering thermometers in operation, unobserved by you, taking your measure in a like way. Make a good record.—New Haven Palladium.

Dead Letters.

the instructions under the postal laws, UNMAILABLE LETTERS are specified to be—

Unpaid letters for foreign countries, on which prepayment is required by the regulations.

Letters not addressed, or so badly addressed that their destination cannot be known.

Letters misdirected to places where there are no post offices.

Only such letters as are herein described are, when deposited in any post office, to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office; all others must be disputched to their destination, charged with the amount of unpaid postage.

When unmailable letters are sent to the Dead Letter Office, the specific reason therefor must be endorsed upon the envelope of each.

These instructions will be strictly followed at all post offices.

For more full instructions relating to dead letters, advertising letters, &c., examine carefully Chap. 35, Regulations of 1866, and Sections 1 and 2, Act of June 12, 1866.

Foreign Letters, &c.

RULE FUR RATING LETTERS TU GREAT BRITAIN, &C.

The attention of postmasters is particularly called to the mode of rating postage upon letters ex changed in the mails between this country and the United Kingdom, which differs only in the rate, and not, as heretofore, in the weight or standard. The maximum standard weight is now half an ounce, and the rate is twenty-four cents; postage to Great Britain and Ireland, therefore, is as follows, viz.:

One rate (24 cents) for a single letter not exceeding ½ oz. in weight.

Two rates (48 cents) when over ½, but not exceeding 1 ounce.

Three rates (72 cents) when over 1, but not exceeding 1½ ounces, &c., &c.

Thus, a letter to Great Britain, weighing 4½ ounces, should be paid $2.16, being chargeable with nine rates. All part paid letters to foreign countries are treated as wholly unpaid, and the amount paid lost to the sender.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremeu, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newloundland, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore, decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at itspleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPUN LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly: when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any question as to prepbyment, by this simple criterion.

Domestic Postages.

The law requires postage on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or, (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established, the rate is 1 ct.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

RATES OF LETTER POSTAGE BETWEEN OFFICES IN THE UNITED STATES, AND TO AND FRIM CANADA AND OTHER BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES

To and from Canada and New Brunswick, 10c. per ½ oz., irrespective of distance.

To and from other British N. Am. Provinces.

for distance not over 3,000 miles.	10 cts.
For any distance over 3,000 miles.	15 "

For every additional half ounce, or fractiou of a half ounce, an additional rate is charged. Prepayment is optional on all letters for the British North American Provinces except Newfonndland, to which prepayment is compulsory.

Letter postage is to be charged on all bandbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material. (not in cases,) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter—viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Photographic Albums are chargeable with book postage—four cents for each four ounces, or fraction thereof.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the U. S.:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz.	6 cts.
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	12 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	18 "
Monthly, not over 4 oz.	3 "

Quarterly, not over 4 oz.	1 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	2 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	3 "

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the p. m. must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications, the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the post ...d, either at the mailing or deliver ... office of publication, or ... thereof, must not be forwarded ... unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazines and periodicals to regular subscribers) sent via Overland Mail, is to be charged at letter postage rates.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, and scions,) the postage to be pre-paid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the new Post Office Law, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows—"The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the seperate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, be shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (except bills and receipts for subscription) in, or to write or print anything, after its publication, upon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, is illegal, and subjects such printed matter, and the entire package of which it is a part, to letter postage.

Any word or communication, whether by printing, writing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper of a newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the person to whom it is to be sent, and the date when subscription expires, subjects the package to letter postage.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

TO THE BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES.

Cape Breton, Pr'e Edward's Island, and Nova Scotia. To Newfoundland prepayment required. To Canada and New Brunswick, 10c. per ½ oz., any distance.

* 10 cents when not over 3,000 miles from the line of crossing.
* 15 cents when distance exceeds 3,000 miles.

Steamers of the Cunard line sail from Boston twice each month, touching at Halifax, and when letters are sent by that conveyance for Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward's Island, the U. S. postage is 5 cents the single rate, to be prepaid. The inland rate is collected on delivery. On newspapers by this route, the postage is two cents each.

Newspapers and periodicals published in the United States and sent to regular subscribers in the British North American Provinces, or published in these Provinces and sent to regular subscribers in the United States, are chargeable with the regular prepaid quarterly rates of United States postage to and from the line; which postage must be collected at the office of mailing in the United States on matter sent, and at the office of delivery in the United States on matter received. In like manner, such matter, if transient, is chargeable with the regular domestic transient printed matter rates to and from the line, to be collected at the office of mailing or delivery in the United States, as the case may be. Editors, however, may exchange free of expense.

REGISTRATION OF LETTERS.

Valuable letters for Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen or Hamburg line via New York, or by the Prussian closed mail via New York and Boston, as also letters addressed to Great Britain and Canada, will be registered on the application of the person posting the same, in the same manner and on the same terms as those deliverable in the United States, provided that the full postage chargeable thereon to destination, together with a registration fee of twenty cents on each letter to Great Britain or Ireland, and five cents on each letter to the other places mentioned above, is prepaid at the mailing office. Such letters should be mailed and forwarded to the respective United States exchange offices in the same manner as domestic registered letters are mailed to those offices.

RULE OF RATING LETTERS, ETC.

Letters addressed to Great Britain and Ireland are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, a single rate being charged for each half ounce, &c.

Letters in the mail to France are to be charged with single rate of postage, if not exceeding the weight of one quarter ounce; double rate if exceeding a quarter, but not exceeding half an ounce; and so on, an additional rate being charged for each quarter ounce or fractional part of a quarter ounce. Letters addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Hamburg, and the British North American Provinces, are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an ounce. Postmasters, should be careful, where the postage is prepaid, to collect the proper amount. They should be particular to notice the route indicated on the envelopes of letters, and to collect postage accordingly. Letters mailed at some offices, marked "via England," or "via Prus'n closed mail," for a German State, are frequently taken upon the prepayment of Bremen rates, and those marked "via Bremen," at Prussian closed rates, &c.

RULE OF RATING LETTERS COING VIA FRANCE

In the case of letters to be forwarded in the British mail for transmission from England via "Marseilles," the French postage is rated at 6 cents the quarter ounce, except on letters for Java, China, Labuan, Borneo, Japan, the Moluccas and Philipine Islands, which are rated at eight cents per half ounce, and except, also, on letters for Syria and Tunis, by French packet, when the single French rate is 12 cents per quarter ounce.

The rates by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz.: Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey, in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent via Suez, countries beyond seas, via France, other than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibralter, Hong Kong, Java, Manritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia, (except Belgrade,) Shanghai, Singapore and Spain. The limit of prepayment to Spain, Portugal and Gibraltar, is Behobia; to Servia, (except Belgrade,) Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria;" the frontier of Turkey and Austria; to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries via Suez, the seaports of the Indies, or of the sea of China to which the English packets ply; and to places beyond seas, other than those designated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of destination.

RATES ON PAMPHLETS, MAGAZINES, ETC.

On pamphlets and magazines, to or from the West coast of South America, the United States postage is four cents; and to or from all other foreign countries, (except Great Britain, Belgium, and the German States, via Bremen or Hamburg mail,) two cts. per 4 oz. or fraction thereof, to be collected in all cases in the United States.

Newspapers and periodicals to foreign countries (particularly to the continent of Europe) must be sent in narrow bands, open at the sides or ends; otherwise they are chargeable with letter postage.

ROUTES OF TRANSMISSION, ETC.

To prevent mistakes at the exchange offices, it is desirable that the particular routes by which letters are to be forwarded from the United States to Europe, should be distinctly written on the covers. Letters intended for transmission in the open mail to England, should bear the direction "open mail via England;" if for transmission in the French mail, they should be directed, "via France in French mail;" if for transmission by closed mail to Prussia, they should be directed "via Prussian closed mail;" if for transmission in the closed mail to Belgium, they should be directed "via Belgian closed mail;" and if for transmission by the New York and Bremen line to Bremen, or by the New York and Hamburg line to Hamburg, they should be directed "via Bremen," or "via Hamburg."

It is important that letters addressed to Germany and other European countries, via France, where the single rate per quarter ounce is 21 cents, should be plainly marked to be sent via France; otherwise they may be missent in the open mail to Liverpool by United States packet, the 21 cent rate per half ounce being also chargeable on letters thus forwarded.

UNITED STATES MAIL
AND
POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. V[illegible], No. 3. NEW YORK, DECEMBER, 1866. WHOLE No. 75.

Report of the Postmaster General.

We give below such portion of the Postmaster [illegible] Annual Report as our limited space will allow us to publish in the present number:

FINANCIAL CONDITION.

The Revenues of this department for the year eading June 30, 1865, were $14,386,986, 21, and the expenditures $15,352,079 30, showing an excess of the latter of $965,093 09. Anticipating this deficiency, a special appropriation was made by act of Congress approved July 28, 1866.

The decrease of revenue compared with the previous year was 1 1-5 per ceat., and the increase of expenditures 12 per cent. Including the standing appropriation for free mail matter, $700,000, as a legitimnte portion of the revenues yet remainiag unexpended, the actual deficiecy for the past year is only $265,093 09—within $51,141 of amount estimated in the annual report of 1854.

The estimated expenditures for the year eading Juae 30, 1868, are..		$17,583,000
The revenues estimated at 5 per ceat. over last year.....	$15,106,335
Appropriation for free matter.....	700,000
		15,805,335
Excess of expenditures.....		1,776,665

For this deficiency ao special appropriation will be required. The standing appropiations for free matter, unexpended for several years, are deemed sufficent.

POSTAGE STAMPS AND STAMPED ENVELOPES.

The number of postage stamps issued dnring the year was 347,734,325, representing $10,816-661; stamped eavelopes 30,386 200, representing $921,500 50; stamped envelopes bearing priated cards and requests 7,683,525, representing $230,005 75; stamped wrappers 1,025,000, representiag $20,500; making in all $11,988,668 25; a decrease of $858,769 25, as compared with the previous year.

The aggregate of stamped envelopes and stamped wrappers issued during the year eaded June 30, 1866, was 39,094,725, representing $1,-172,007 45; an increase of 12,888,550, representing $424,557 25, or nearly 50 per cent; being largely in excess of issues durlng any previous year since tho introduction of stamped envelopes.

The sale of stamps, envelopss, &c., during the past year amounted to $12,204,729.54, or $215,-961 29 more than the issues; showing the absorption to that extent of the steck remaining unsold in the haads of postmasters, which amounted on the 1st of July, 1865, to $447,710.

The issues of postage stamps aad stamped eavelopes during the current fiscal year, from 1st of July to 1st of November, are $360,755 in excess of the issues for the corresponding period of last year, being at the rate of more than one million of dollars per aanum.

The increased demand since 1st July for envelopes with printed cards and requests for returning direct to the sender, if not promptly delivered to the address, is very notable, being about 66⅔ per ceat. The general use of such envelopes will tend largely to reduce the number of dead letters.

TRANSPORTATION STATISTICS.

There were in the service of the department on the 30th Juae, 1866, 5,059 coatractors for the transportation of the mails.

Of mail routes in operation there were 6,930; aggregate length 180,921 miles; aggregate annual transportation 71,837,914 miles; aggregate annual cost $7,530,474; including the compensation of route agents, local agents, mail messengers, postal railway clerks, and baggage masters in charge of mails, viz., $779,710, the aggregate annual cost was $8,410,184, This service was divided as follows:

Railroad routes: length 32,092 miles; annual transportation 30,609,457 miles; annual cost $3,391,592. nbout 11 cents per mile.

Steamboat routes: length 14,345 miles, annual transportation 3,411,962 miles; annual cost $440,-844, about 13 cents per mile.

Celerity, &c.: routes' length 134, 483 miles; annual transportation 37,816,485 miles; annual cost $3,798,038, about 10 cents per mile.

The length of routes was increased over the preceeding year 38,581 miles; the annual transportation 13,724,420 miles; and the cost, $1,393,-590, the increase arising principally from the restoration of service in the southern States.

MAIL SERVICE IN LATE INSURGENT STATES.

A table herewith annexed shows the rate of pay per annum for mail transportation in operation in late insurgent States on the 30th June, 1866, $1,170,529, compared with the amount due for service actually rendered in those States in the year ending with that date. $769,218; the difference, $401,311, resulting from the fact that much of the service was in operation only part of the year. The net postal receipts from those States of the same period being $593,835, the liabilities (without including the compensation of route agents, local agents, and mail messengers) exceed the receipts by $75,383.

A table is annexed showing the mail service in operation in these States September 30, 1865, compared with the condition of the service in the same States. November 1, 1865, the date to which the statements on this subject were made up in the last annual report. From this table it will be seen that there are in operation in the States enumerated ninety railroad routes, with an aggregate length of 8,170⅔ miles, at a cost of $587,581 per annum; twenty-six steamboat routes, with an aggregate length of 5,557 miles, at a cost of $195,565 per annum; and 1,137 "star service" routes, (celerity, &c.,) with an aggregate length of 46,442¼ miles, at a cost of $1,062,-477 54 per annum; making the whole service now in operation in these States of all grades, 1,253 routes, with an aggregate length of 60,170½ miles; at a cost of $1,845,623 54 per annum.

Compared with the service in operation on the 1st November, 1865, viz., seventy-one railroad routes, with an aggregate length of 6,242 2-10 miles, at a cost of $437,257 per annum; twelve steamboat routes, with an aggregate length of 3,869¼ miles, at a cost of $93,260 per annum; and 154 "star service" routes, with an aggregate length of 8,186¼ miles, at a cost of $177,743 per annum, there appears an increase of nineteen routes, 1,928 55-100 miles, and $150,324 annual cost of railroad service; fourteen routes, 2,971½ miles, and $102,305 annual cost of steamboat service; and 983 routes, 38,256½ miles, and $884,734 54 anaual cost of "star service;" making a total increase of 1,015 routes, 41,872 55-100 miles, and $1,137,363 54 aanual cost.

Another table is annexed showing the number, terminl, aad leagth of southern railroad routes not in operation September 30, 1855; the number being only fourteen, and the aggregate length 696 12-100 miles. Comparing this with ninety routes in operation, having an aggregate length of 8,170⅔ miles, shows a remarkable progress in the resuscitation of the railroad system of the South. There being two thousand two hundred and fifty routes in all the States enumerated, these statements show more than half the whole number to be in operation, comprising nearly nine-tenths of the railroad routes. All the routes in these States were duly advertised to be let to contract; a part from 1st January, 1866, nad the residue from 1st July, 1866; but on a large uumber of them no proposals were received under the advertisement, and on many others the bids were extravagantly high. In the latter case, offers of the highest admissible rates were submitted by the department to the lowest bidders; aad in some instances negotiations were opened through special agents, postmasters, and leadiag citizens. By all these means combined, the amount of service here stated has been obtained.

Tbs existiag contracts in all the States named, except Tennessee, will expire on the 30th June, 1867. New advertisements, inviting proposals for four years' service from 1st July, 1867, are now being issued, under which it is hoped all routes of real utility in the whole section will be let.

OVERLAND ROUTE TO CALIFORNIA.

By a recent order of the department, the overland mail route to Califoraia, of which Atchison, Kansas, had been the inital point, has been changed so as to have two points of departure—one from Junction City, Kansas, on the Union Pacific railroad route. (eastern division,) running from Wyandotte, Kansas; aad the other from Fort Kearney, Nebraska, on the Union Pacific railroad route, running from Omaha City, Nebraska. The lines from these two points meet at Denver City, in Colorado Territory.

The Junction City road conaects at Wyandotte with the Pacific railway from St. Louis, Mo., making a contiauous railway connection with the eastern cities. By this route the stage travel is diminished one hundred aad sixty-eight miles, aad the time occupied in the transit should be proportionally reduced. The mails to and from Califoraia, which before were sent via Chicago and St. Joseph, were consequently ordered, on the 15th of August last, to be sent via St. Louis, Wyandotte, aad Junction City. The reports so far received of the actual running of the mails since the change took effect do not show the average diminution nl time in the performance of the through trip which the departmeat was led to expect, through tbe capacity of the routs for superior expedition is proved by the fact, that in one or two instaaces the mails have been received at New York in nineteen days from Saa Francisco, a day less than the shortest time ever made previous to the change. Subsequently, however, the extension of the Chicago and Northwestern railway to Omaha City, which is necessary to form a continuous line by rail to Fort Kearney, bas become so nearly completed, that, on the 13th of November instant, orders were issued to forward via Chicago, Omaha City, and Fort Kearney, all mails destined for the overland route from the distributing offices at Portland, Boston, Hartford, Albany, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Buffalo, Cleveland, and Detroit—the expectation being that mails from that portion of the country represented by these distributing offices will find their quickest transit by the northern route.

POST-ROUTE MAPS.

The preparation of post-route maps for publication has been continued by the topographer, and is well advanced. Two sheets, exhibiting the post offices and mail service of the New England States, are in the hands of the engraver, and will be ready for distribution and sale early this winter.

FOREIGN MAIL SERVICE.

The aggregate amount of postage, sea, inland, and foreign, upon the correspondence exchanged with foreign countries, was $2,289,219 30, being an increase of $469,290 70, as compared with the previous yenr. Of this amount $1,840,-800 92 accrued upon the mails exchanged with Great Britain, France, Prussia, Bremen, Hamburg, and Belgium; $328,341 33 on mails exchanged with the British North American Provinces, and $120,077 05 on the correspondence transmitted to and from the West Indies, Mexico, Centrnl and South America.

The number of letters exchanged in the mails with foreign countries was 9,430,546; of which 4,886,916 were sent from, and 4,543,630 received in the United States. Of this number 8,564,347 were exchanged with the European countries, an increase of 1,851,330 over the number exchanged in 1865.

The number of newspapers sent to foreign countries was 2,804,442, and the number received from foreign countries, 1,381,724, making a total of 4,186,166. Of this number 3,828,135 were exchanged with Europe, being an increase of 29,157 on the number in 1865.

The increased correspondence with foreign countries, particularly with the continent of Europe, during the year is unprecedented, amounting to more than twenty-five per cent, as compared with the previous yenr.

POSTAL CONVENTION WITH ITALY.

A liberal postal convention has been concluded with the kingdom of Italy, which adopts the leading reforms in international postal intercourse, recommended by the postal conference held at Paris in May, 1863. It was negotiated and signed at Turin on the 8th of July, 1863, and the ratification thereof were formally exchanged at Florence on the 14th of June, 1866. This convention, a copy of which is anuexed, will be carried into execution as soon as notice is received from the post department of Italy of the route or routes of transit by which the exchange of correspondence in closed bags can be effected.

BASIS OF NEW POSTAL CONVENTION WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

Notice was given by the British government, under date of July 25, 1866, of its purpose to terminate the existing postal convention between this country and the United Kingdom on the 1st of January, 1868, simultaneously with the expiration of the mail subsidy contract with the Cunard line; accompanied with an assurance of the desire of that government to conclude a new convention on a more liberal basis, reducing the present rates of international postage and granting enlarged mail facilities. The necessary steps were accordingly taken to accomplish that object, and I have the satisfaction of announcing that a preliminary basis for a new postal convention has been agreed upon by the two post departments, reducing the international charge on a single letter from twenty-four to twelve cents; admitting into the mails printed matter of every kind, and patterns of merchandise, at such rates as the despatching country shall establish; and granting to each country, reciprocally, the right to transit correspondence in closed bags, or in the ordinary mails, through the other, at the same rates of charge paid by the inhabitants of the country through which the correspondence is forwarded.

No time has yet been agreed upon for carrying the new convention into operation, but it is confidently expected that the British office will consent to name as early a date as practicable, that the public may receive, without unnecessary delay, the benefit of the reduced rates of postage, as well as of more frequent means of mail communication between the two countries.

MAIL STEAMSHIP LINE TO JAPAN AND CHINA.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company of New York, to which was awarded the contract for the China mail service, authorized by the act of February 17, 1855, has executed a contract for that service, a copy of which is annexed. The high reputation of this company, their experieace and undoubted resources, aad the zeal and energy which they have manifested in making preparations for the service, afford a guarantee of the success of this great national enterprise to extend and develop American commerce, by obtainiag control of the vast and constantly increasing trade of Japan and China, which the advantages of our geographical position should enable us to possess.

The contract is for monthly trips between San Francisco and Hong Kong, touching at the ports of Honolulu in the Sandwich Islands, and Yokohama (Kanagawa) in Japan, both on the outward and inward passages, by a line of first-class American sea-going sidewheel steamships of not less than 3,500 tons burden, government measurement, and of sufficieat number, not less than four, to perform the stipulated service.

FREE DELIVERY SYSTEM.

The free delivery system is in operation in forty-six of the principal cities. The number of carriers employed was 863, at an aggregate compensation of $589,236 41.

This mode of delivery has steadily grown in favor with the public, and in several of the large cities, where its progress has been most marked, the local postage shows a gratifying increase. Experience has shown its superiority over the old system of box delivery, and the results of the last two years commend it to Congress as a permanent branch of the postal service. Its effects in saving time to the public; in insuring the correct delivery by inducing the habit of directing letters to street and number; in reducing the great number of advertised and dead letters; in facilitating correspondence, especially local; in obviating the necessity of the many fruitless calls at the post office, are relied on to prove its advantages over the old system of office delivery.

DEAD LETTERS.

The whole number of dead letters received, examined, and disposed of during the year, was about four and a half millions, upwards of 40 per cent, of which were from forty-seven of the larger post offices. About six hundred thousand other letters were received, being unmailable for want of pre-payment of postage, or on account of misdirection or illegible address.

During the year there were registered and remailed to the respective owners, as enclosing money in sums of one dollar and upwards, 32,814 letters, containing an aggregate of $244,589 99, of which number 27,948, containing $221,066, 19, were delivered, being 90 per cent. The number of letters enclosing sums of money less than one dollar, remailed to the respective owners, was 13,834, containing an aggregate amount of $3,652 55. Of these, 11,175, containing $3,001 23, were delivered.

The number of letters containing papers of value other than money, as deeds, bills of exchange, drafts, checks, &c., received, registered and returned for delivery to the owners, was 26,610, and the nominal value of the enclosures therein was $7,826,881 68. The number of these letters delivered was 24,053, being 85 per cent.

The number of letters and packages containing photographs, daguerreotypes, and articles of jewelry, was 67,016, of which 53,572 were sent out, (containing, for the most part, photographs and daguerreotypes,) and 42,745, or 80 per cent., delivered.

A large number of packages containing miscelaneous articles, for which no owners could be found, were sold at public auction, the proceeds amounting to $3,543.14.

Abont 2,500,000 dead letters have been destroyed during the year. Of these upwards of 60 per cent. were ordinary business circulars, advertisements of lottery and gift enterprises, notices of corporate societies, and tradesmen's bills; the remainder being composed of letters not signed, or so written as to be unintelligible.

An investigation into the cause of the non-delivery of letters confirms the statement made in the last report, that three-fourths of the whole number fail to reach the parties addressed through faults of the writers, and it has been ascertained that the proportion of letters fully addressed returned from offices where the free delivery is established is less than 3 per cent. From some of these offices returns have been received, in which not a single letter so addressed appears without a satisfactory reason for the non delivery. From 40 to 50 per cent. of dead letters are returned from these offices, and it thus appears that a more careful attention to the details of address on the part of writers, together with a more extensive use of request envelopes, would materially promote the certainty of delivery and greatly diminish the number of dead letters.

POSTAL MONEY-ORDER SYSTEM.

The number of money-order offices now in operation is 766, being 347 more than at the date of the last annual report, and measures have recently been taken to establish 67 additional offices in the Pacific States nad Territories.

The number of orders issued during the year was 243 609, of the value of.....	$3,977,259 28
The number paid was 233,124, of the value of.....	$3,851,839 49
To which is to be added amount of orders repaid to purchasers	52,050 73
Excess of issues over payments....		73,359 06

From the establishment of the system on November 1, 1864, to July 1, 1865, a period of eight months, the orders issued amounted to $1,360,122 52, and the orders paid and repaid to $1,313,578 08. On comparing these amounts with the correspondiug transactions of the last fiscal year, it appears that the business has been almost trebled.

The average amount of each order issued during the year was $16 32.

The receipts and expenditures for the last fiscal year as adjusted and reported by the Auditor, were as follows, viz.:

Receipts:
Fees on orders issued.....		$35,799 98
Premium received on exchaage..		3 08
		$35,803 06
Expenditures:
Commissions to postmasters	$11,432 49
Clerk hire.....	14,910 50
Books and stationery...	1,224 59
Premium paid on draft.	25
Miscellaneous, including furniture and fixtures	563 44
Remittances lost in the mail.....	533 00
Excess of receipts over expenditures		7,138 79
This sum represents the gross amount of revenue derived from the transaction of the money-order business for the past year, and if we deduct therefrom the amount of the deficiency in the receipts as compared with the expenditures during the period of eight months ending July 1, 1865, as stated in the last annual report, viz		7,047 97
There remains the sum of.....		90 82

As the proceeds of the system from its commencement up to the last fiscal year.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In addition to the details of this report, I submit a few suggestions: The condition of all branches of this department is most encouraging. The general plan proposed by my predecessor for re-establishing postal service in the late insurgent States has been, to a large extent, carried out; and efficient service, with economical expenditures, has resulted. Just as rapidly as the condition of the country and the necessities of the people will warrant, new post offices will be opened, and mail service increased.

The surplus of revenues over expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865, was not anticipated for the year ending June 30, 1866. The expense incident to re-establishing mail service in the southern States, where such service bad been interrupted by the rebellion, it was known would increase largely the general outlays of the Department beyond what had been required during either of the preceding four years.

There is no better evidence of national prosperity than the constant increase from year to year of revenues derived from domestic and foreign postages. There is no better evidence of the increasing general intelligence of the American people than that furnished by the loaded mails.

The change in modes of conveyance from carrier pigeons and special messengers, and post riders with billets and small packages and a few letters, to railroads and steamboats, carrying every day hundreds of tons of letters and newspapers and books, all through the length and breadth of the land, is an extraordinary commentary upon the increasing wealth and prosperity of the nation, and the energy and intelligence of the people. The few thousand pounds of postal revenue in Franklin's time for a single year, give place now to fifteen millions of dollars annually, a sum greater than the annual revenues of the federal government during the administration of John Quincy Adams.

This service, under the liberal patronage of the government, has done more to aid in developing the resources of the country than anything else except the cultivation of the soil. It has done more to aid in enlightening in Christianizing the people than anything else, except the spelling-book and Bible. The post office and mail route travel with civilization, and mark its progress as distinctly as the schoolhouse and meeting-house.

It has always been an erroneous theory in the history of the postal service of the United States that it was established or sustained on the principle of wholly defraying its own expenses out of its own revenues; or, in other words, on the principle that it should be self-supporting. It is a great public necessity, to accommodate private citizens, and it will not do to say that no mail route shall be opened, or post office established, until the business on the proposed route or of the proposed office shall pay all expenses.

Large sums of money are paid every year to contractors for carrying mails beyond our frontier, across the central wilderness to the Pacific States; and other large sums are paid for service on lines tributary to the main lines, to accommodate as yet sparse settlements. From these comparatively small returns come back in the shape of postal revenues. Yet these very agencies invite settlement and encourage enterprise in material development, so that there comes back to the people in real wealth almost as many millions of dollars as the government expends thousands in this particular branch of service.

Congress has wisely appropriated five hundred thousand dollars per year to pay for carrying mails from San Francisco to China. There is an excuse, in sending mails, for paying this money to a private company in aid of a great commercial enterprise. This money, so expended, will come back from the China seas in goods and wares and merchandise to our own markets or, in seeking European markets, in transportation paid across the continent.

Whether the people pay in postage stamps for transmission of letters through the mails, or whether they pay by appropriation of public money, the ends sought and the ends attained are the same. While a lavish expenditure of public money is to be avoided, there ought to be a liberal expenditure for extending mail facilities by land and by sea.

In another respect I recommend more liberality. The clerks and employees of the Post Office Department have not been well paid for the services they have performed. The salaries of clerks in the Post Office Department during the four years of war were not increased, while all the expenses of living were more than doubled. The salaries were fixed in times of peace and low prices. They were not raised when war raised prices. Clerks were compelled to run in debt, and, in many cases, their families suffered from want. They worked faithfully and skillfully and honestly in discharging important duties for the government. I submit that they ought to have some reasonable allowance for the past, and an increase of salary in the future.

Clerks in post offices, letter-carriers, and route agents are not paid what they ought to be paid. Honest, industrious men are required for all these duties, and they ought to be paid a fair and living compensation for their labor. Their employment is uninterrupted, except by sickness. The letter-carriers claim peculiar consideration. They travel every day from early in the morning until late at night, in heat and cold, and rain and snow, all through the cities, distributing letters and papers, without compensation enough to pay house rent. I feel that the government ought to pay all these employees better, because they earn more, and because the government can afford to pay more. I plead the cause of all these employees, because it is just to them that I should, and I earnestly ask permission and means to pay them better.

The foreign postal service has grown to such magnitude that increased care and responsibility fall upon those having the direct charge of it; and I respectfully ask that authority be given to appoint a superintendent of foreign mails, and an additional clerk for that branch of the service.

I also recommend that authority be given to appoint a superintendent of the opening and distribution of dead letters.

The law regulating the franking privilege ought, in my opinion, to be amended. I do not think the privilege should be abolished. I think it a necessity for the different departments, as well as for Congress. But great abuses have grown up under it. To avoid frauds, and a misuse of the privilege, I recommend such a change in the law as to require the written signature of the person exercising the privilege upon the matter franked; and to relieve the heads of departments and bureaus of great labor, that a franking clerk be authorized by law for each department of the government, with the right to frank all matter pertaining to the department for which he is appointed.

Respectfully submitted.

ALEXANDER W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General

The PRESIDENT.

HIGHLANDERS' LETTER-POSTING.—Queer scenes occur at the Post Office at Wick, Scotland, especially on Saturday evenings, when hundreds of letters are posted by the Highland fishermen. When the penny postage was first established, the Postmaster had many a hard night's work among the Highlanders, who illustrated their national characteristic by endeavoring to beat down the postage to a halfpenny, alleging that the letter was a little one, and that the Highland Postmaster never charged more than a halfpenny. From the out-stations beyond the daily delivery they would come, and while one would ask if there was a letter for him, he would answer to the interrogatory as to his name, "Och! ye'll see it on the back of the letter;" and on the name being at last communicated and the information that there was no letter for him, Donald often put the poser: "Do you think she will be the mom?" Donald has learned by experience, however; but at present it generally requires four Highlanders to complete the modus operandi of posting a letter. One brings it to the office wrapped up in a piece of paper, a second precedes him and buys a stamp; handing the stamp to a third, he, after various licks and manipulations, gets Her Majesty's head affixed to the letter, and the fourth, after looking into the slit with considerable suspicion, cautiously lets it drop, and the whole four finish the performance by peeping down the slit to see that all is well with their missive. This may be seen almost daily, and especially on Saturday evenings

NEW YORK DECEMBER, 1866

TERMS.—One dollar per year, payable in advance. All communications to be addressed to the Publisher of the UNITED STATES MAIL, New York.

Subscriptions received at any Post office in the United States.

☞ Letters containing remittances for subscriptions, or in reference to the business department of this paper, should be addressed to "Publisher U. S. Mail" and not to the Editor.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
October 25, 1861.

DEAR SIR,—I consider the U. S. MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT a valuable and meritorious publication, useful alike to this Department, to Postmasters throughout the country, and to the public. It is my wish to see it generally circulated among postmasters and others, and I shall with pleasure extend to you every proper facility for enlarging the sphere of its official usefulness, and the range of its circulation. M. BLAIR, Postmaster General.

The following Official Order has also been made by the Postmaster General:

Ordered, That the Assistant Postmasters General, and Chief Clerk of this Department, each cause to be furnished from time to time, for publication in the "United States Mail," all such new orders or regulations of the Department touching the business of the several bureaus as may be of general importance or interest as soon as practicable after the same shall have been promulgated or established.
M. BLAIR, Postmaster General.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington Oct. 13, 1864.

DEAR SIR: I have no hesitation in adding my endorsement to that of my predecessor, Postmaster General BLAIR, to the usefulness of the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," as a medium of communicating correct information to Postmasters and others respecting postal operations, and cheerfully recommend it to the favor and support of Postmasters and other agents of the Department. W. DENNISON.
Postmaster General.

TO J. GAYLER, Esq. Editor U. S. Mail.

☞ Although it is our desire and endeavor that our paper should appear on the first of each month, yet it is sometimes, owing to various circumstances, impossible to secure that result. Important changes in the laws and regulations occasionally occur at such times as to require, for the benefit of our readers, that our issue should be postponed for a few days in order to enable us to lay the details of such changes before them at as early a date as possible, instead of allowing a month to elapse before their publication. Our subscribers will therefore readily understand that a short delay in receiving their papers is sometimes unavoidable, and that when such delay occurs, it is the result of a desire to give them advantage of the latest official information on the postal matters.

Postal Convention with Venezuela.

We are requested to state, that a Postal Convention has been concluded between the U. S. of America and Venezuela, providing for a regular exchange of mails by the ordinary routes of sea transportation, as well by private ships as by American or Venezuelan steam or other mail packets, plying between the sea ports of the two countries.

By the terms of this convention, each country is to levy, collect, and retain its own postage only at certain established rates; thus avoiding the necessity of accounts upon the correspondence exchanged.

The rates of postage chargeable upon letters, newspapers, &c., mailed in the United States and addressed to Venezuela, are as follows, viz:

Upon letters, 10 cents per single rate of half an ounce, prepayment required.

Upon newspapers and other printed matter, the U. S. domestic postage, with one cent added for sea rate on each newspaper—and one cent an ounce added for sea rate on other kinds of printed matter, prepayment required.

Upon letters and other mail matter received in the United States from Venezuela, the U. S. domestic rates of postage, only, are to be levied and collected on delivery.

Circular Limiting Issue of Money Orders.

The following circular has been issued by the Department to P. M.'s at all Money Order Offices:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
MONEY-ORDER OFFICE,
Washington, December 1, 1866.

SIR: The specific object of the money-order system is to afford facilities for the safe transfer, through the mails, of small sums of money, so as to prevent, as far as possible, the loss of money letters, which contain generally but small amounts, and to promote thereby the public convenience.

The maximum of a money-order is expressly limited by law to fifty dollars. Hence it was not intended that this system should assume the functions and interfere with the business of banks and of bankers by furnishing exchange for large sums of money, for which it is not adapted, and by which its operations would be deranged. The spirit and intent of the law is therefore violated by the issue, in one day, to the same person, of several money-orders, amounting in the aggregate to a considerable sum, and all payable at a single office to one individual. Some cases of this kind having recently occurred, the Postmaster General deems it expedient to establish by regulation a limit to the number of such orders which any money-order office is permitted to issue. POSTMASTERS, THEREFORE, ARE HEREBY INSTRUCTED TO REFUSE TO ISSUE, IN ONE DAY, TO THE SAME REMITTER, AND IN FAVOR OF THE SAME PAYEE, MORE THAN three MONEY-ORDERS PAYABLE AT THE SAME POST-OFFICE.

It must be borne in mind that the money-order system is not designed to facilitate the business of the mercantile community, which can, as heretofore, obtain from bankers exchange for large amounts, but its purpose is to afford security to remittere of small sums which might otherwise be sent in letters through the mails.

You will be pleased to acknowledge, without delay, the receipt of the present circular, which you will retain on file in your office for future reference.

By order of the POSTMASTER GENERAL:
C. F. MACDONALD,
Superintendent.

The Postmaster General's Report.

On the first page of this number will be found extracts embracing most of the important portions of the Report of the Postmaster General for the year 1866. We regret our inability to publish it entire at this time, and purpose in our next to give further extracts of interest, especially statistics showing the progress of the resumption of mail service in the lately insurgent States, &c.

The report is one of unusual interest, and presents a satisfactory exhibit of the financial condition, efficiency and progress of the department. The actual excess of expenditures over receipts for the past fiscal year is but $265,093,09. This deficiency—taking into consideration the inevitable decrease in the revenues consequent upon the return of our letter-writing soldiers to their homes, and the re-establishment of many non-remunerative mail routes at the South—is much less than might have been expected; while the issues of stamps from July 1 to November 1 of the current year, give promise of an increase in revenue of over a million dollars.

The length of mail routes has been increased to the extent of 38,351 miles, and the annual transportation, 13,724,420 miles, this increase being principally in the Southern States. By an alteration of the starting points of the overland mail route to California, the time on that route has been materially, and will be still further, shortened. The correspondence with foreign countries has increased more than twenty-five per cent. The preliminary basis of a postal convention with Great Britain has been agreed upon, by which, among other advantages, the excessive rate of letter postage heretofore charged on letters to and from that country is soon to be reduced one-half—that is to twelve cents per half ounce. Liberal postal conventions have also been made with Italy and Venezuela, and negotiations commenced for one with Brazil. An important contract has been concluded with the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. for the performance of a monthly mail service between San Francisco, China and Japan. The number of new post offices established during the year was 1,443; re-opened at the South, 2,778. The business of the money order offices has been almost trebled in amount, and is otherwise proceeding satisfactorily.

Mr. Randall's suggestions at the close of his report are pertinent and judicious. It will be seen that he repudiates the "self-sustaining" theory, and is clearly of opinion that the proper function of the post-office department is to sustain—not itself, but the mail service, and that liberal but judicious expenditure for the extension of postal facilities, though the amount may be in excess of the immediate pecuniary receipts, is not a loss, but a profitable investment, which opinion, we are sure, will be heartily endorsed by all who have gone below the surface in the consideration of the subject. His remarks in support of his recommendation of an increase of the present insufficient salaries of clerks, carriers and route agents will also commend themselves to the approval, not only of those immediately interested, but of all who desire the good of the service, and can see the distinction between stinginess and economy. The change recommended in the law regulating the franking privilege would lead to the most beneficial results; and we hope to see that and the other suggestions of the Postmaster General adopted by Congress at an early day.

POSTAGE ON FOREIGN TRANSIENT NEWSPAPERS.—There is a good old saying, "Many a mickle makes a muckle." We are confident the Post Office Department is entitled to many a "mickle," which, in the course of a year, would make quite a "muckle," and which it might receive if postmasters were careful to collect on delivery the postage due on transient foreign papers. As a general rule, there should be collected on all foreign papers that have on them only a foreign postage stamp, two cents each, or in other words, a foreign postage stamp on a paper does not pay the United States postage, but such postage must be collected on delivery of the paper, at the rate of two cents for each paper. To this general rule the only exception is in papers received by the Prussian closed mail, on which papers, when the postage is paid to destination, the word "paid" is stamped in red ink. By foreign postage stamps we mean the stamps of all nations and countries outside of the United States.

STATE AND COUNTY.—The following is a timely bit of advice, one which we commend to the special attention of all P. M's

Dear Mail: What can be done to remind postmasters that they should be careful to give the County and State in all their communications, especially those of an official character. I am sure if every postmaster was a subscriber to your valuable paper, there would not be a single omission. But at present many head their letters (as for instance) "Franklin," when there are as many "Franklin's" as there are States, and then follows a long and tedious examination of books and papers to find out what "Franklin" the letter comes from. The best way I can think of to remedy this neglect is for every postmaster who subscribes for your paper to see every one in his vicinity who is not a subscriber, and prevail upon him to take it. The admonitions contained therein from time to time would soon brighten up their memories, and letters would be properly headed.

Box

"LIVE STOCK" BY MAIL.—We occasionally note the appearance in the mails of seemingly strange articles. Another instance is furnished us by the clerks in the post office in Covington, Ky. During the last month a package was received at that office, addressed to a well known firm in that city, and mailed at Thibodeaux, La., with the following mark on the package: "Alive and kicking, handle carefully, it must bite." The contents of the package proved to be a "horned frog," which had been captured in one of the lagoons of Mexico, taken to Thibodeaux, and there mailed to Covington, Ky.

Communications.

P. O., INDUSTRIUS, N. Y.

Editor U. S. Mail.—For the members of a fraternity to find fault within and among themselves may be excusable, but to extend their complaints to the "outer world" is generally considered somewhat graceless; and hence I feel it a delicate matter to "hold the mirror up" to some of my brother postmasters, less others, out of us, should see the reflection also. But where I find a brother P. M. too indolent to make himself acquainted with the "Regulations" and thus causing annoyance and loss to others, who have no resource but to depend on him, I cannot but feel indignant. Besides, I am so proud of being a postmaster, it is a position so honorable, so serviceable to the public, (even if its duties are carelessly performed,) and I take so much pride in having my office well conducted, that it annoys me exceedingly to find myself included in the sweeping anathemas that are often hurled at the whole Post Office Department, in consequence of the failure of some matter entrusted to the mails, to reach its destination; therefore, if speaking will do any good, I shall not hesitate to speak. Very many of the causes of such failures can be and are traced to postmasters' neglect of their plain and plainly regulated duties. I have made a few memoranda of such neglect in one respect, and this I propose shall be "my text," for a few words of instruction, and perhaps, remonstrance.

As my office is a separating office, to which the mail matter from and for some twenty or more smaller offices is sent, I have quite a good opportunity of learning how twenty or more postmasters comply with the regulations for "making up mails," and what I learn of that number, I doubt not, will apply to many more. I find one of my neighbors entirely ignores Distributing Offices, others seem to mail to them intermittingly, and I find, generally, that but very few properly direct their wrappers; hence, it sometimes happens that I have to open wrappers to ascertain the destinations of packages. In this way I have become acquainted with an idiosyncrasy of a "brother," a few miles away, who doubtless has a very cosmopolitan mind, and scorns the idea that the Post Office Department of the United States has any limit to its jurisdiction; for to him there are no Distributing Post Offices, either for other States or for foreign countries; indeed, I doubt not but he would bill a letter to the moon, were he to find one in his letter-box directed to that sphere.

My memoranda show no unpaid letter billed to Germany, with 42 cents postage charge, another to Christiana, Norway, Europe, 42 cents charge; another to Chicago, Ill., when at least two D. P. O.'s intervene, due 59 cents; another to Tallahassee, Fla., and one to Trenton, no State indicated—as there are seventeen Trentons in the United States it will be seen that the postmaster's direction on the wrapper was remarkably explicit, and that there was not the slightest chance that letters entrusted to him would reach their destination; besides these, was a registered letter for a firm in Nassau St., New York, billed to Nassau, U. S., and the wrapper directed to Nassau St., N. Y., whereas the letter should have been sent to the postmaster of some D. P. O.

These cases came under my own observations, others have been related, one of which I readily recollect—that of a postmaster who actually registered a letter to a town in Sweden, having a peculiarly tongue-twisting Swedish name, the letter after a while reached its destination, but not till after its non-receipt had been reported to the P. O. Department, and the case referred to a Special Agent for investigation.

Such are some of the "freaks" of some of Uncle Sam's P. M's. Are they the results of ignorance or carelessness? I can hardly assume that any postmaster can be ignorant of the existence of Distributing Post Offices, nor of their purposes, and yet I will assume this, and in the hope that what I write may meet the eye of at least some one postmaster, to whom it will prove a valuable lesson, I will state that certain offices are selected for and called Distributing Offices, (a list of them may be found on the third page of the Mail,) and hence arises two modes of mailing certain letters, called "mailing direct," or "mailing to a D. P. O.", terms which explain themselves. "Every postmaster will mail direct to the place addressed, first, all letters for his own State or Territory; second, all letters for Post Offices in other States and Territories which should not pass through a distributing office on their proper route to the office of delivery. Letters not required by the foregoing provisions to be mailed direct, shall be mailed to the distributing office, through which they should first pass on the proper route to the place of their destination, unless the mailing office be a distributing office," Also, all registered letters, whether for offices within or without the State, that must pass through a distributing office, and also all letters for foreign countries. This is very clear; why then do postmasters bill letters to Germany or Norway? Simply because they will not fit themselves to fill their positions. Having made this assertion, it occurs to me that some postmasters say they do not care for their offices, that the pay is not nearly commensurate with the labor and trouble, and that they retain them only for their neighbors' sakes. I grant that to many offices these remarks will apply, but, I would ask, if your kind heart prompts you to retain the office for the accommodation of your neighbors, and to your own annoyance, why not take a little trouble to learn, and thus increase the accommodation and lessen the annoyance? Don't accommodate your neighbors by sending their letters "kiting" to Germany or the Moon, instead of sending them to the proper D. P. O. If you do not know which is the proper D. P. O. ask some postmaster who does know, and then send your letters accordingly. But there is another caution to be observed: a distinction must be made between the letters for persons living within the delivery of the D. P. O., and those that are intended for other offices; this distinction requires that these two classes of letters be kept separate. The first, or letters for delivery, are to be put in a bundle by themselves, which is called the "package for delivery," and is to be marked or directed with the name of the office only; into this bundle are to be put all registered letters, whether for delivery or other offices, first being enclosed in an envelope and addressed to the Postmaster; the second, or letters to be sent to other offices, are to be put in another bundle called the "D. P. O. package," which is to be directed with the name of the office, and the initials, "D. P. O." in addition. It was my intention to explain the utility of Distributing Post Offices, but my letter is already so long that I will take another opportunity of doing so.

Very respectfully,
NICOTINUS

NEW POST OFFICE AT OGDENSBURG, N. Y.—Work has recently commenced on a new government building at Ogdensburg, N. Y., which is to be devoted in perpetuity to the use of the Post Office, Marine and Internal Revenue Collectors and Assessors, Pension Agent, and the United States Courts, with the necessary rooms for judges, juries, marshal, clerks, &c., &c. The edifice will be 120 feet long by sixty wide, with a well proportioned height, will front on three streets, and when completed will be among the handsomest public structures out of the Capital. Its cost will be about $160,000. It is a much needed improvement, and will add most favorably to the appearance of this thriving frontier town, although it may create misgivings in the minds of their wide awake trans-St. Lawrence neighbors that it is some new fangled fortification, from which, in time of war, mysterious long-range guns can be used en barbette with sure success on every town in Canada, while by some modern hydraulic apparatus, erected in the basement, the St. Lawrence can be pumped dry enough in an hour to pass an army the size of Grant's or Sherman's over, dry shod.

The post office will consist of six rooms and a vestibule. The General Office will be very capacious, and well arranged, and is planned with a view to secure to the public and officials every possible accommodation for the convenience and prompt dispatch of business. The building will be completed, it is expected, within a year, and we have no doubt the warmest friends of the present popular and efficient Postmaster will rejoice at his removal—to the new office.

Postage on American Agriculturist, &c.—N. B. T., W——, Kas.—The "American Agriculturist," being a monthly, and weighing less than 4oz., the quarterly postage is 3cts. The "Rural World," being a semi-monthly, the quarterly postage would be 6cts., if the paper weighs 4oz. or less, and 12cts. if over 4oz.

Unpaid Letters sent to a D. P. O.—J. G., St. M——, Minn.—No account is kept of the unpaid postage if the letter is sent to a D. P. O.

Free Papers to Subscribers.—A. J. M., S——, Pa.—Only weekly papers sent to bona fide subscribers from the office of publication, and only one copy to each subscriber can pass through the mails free, and these only to subscribers living within the county of publication.

Postmaster obliged to Change the Mail.—H. C. H., ——, —It is one of the duties of a postmaster to change the mails.

Sending Way Bill with Registered Letters.—P. M. F—— C——, Cal.—The regulations require an ordinary way bill marked "I. R." to be sent with the package containing registered letters, whether ordinary letters accompany them or not. We hope all postmasters will strictly comply with this, and follow our example in not discussing its utility.

Forwarding Drop Letters. M. Y. S., East E——, N.Y.—Drop Letters, when forwarded, should be charged up to the proper rate of postage.

Sending Letters to a D. P. O.—O. M. W., O——, Mich.—Send the matter referred to through Chicago D. P. O.

Post Office Blanks.—J. L., O——, Cal.—There are three Blank Agencies, each of which supplies certain States and Territories. One of these being at Washington, is under the charge of the First Assistant P. M. General. California is supplied by the agency at New York the proper address of which is, "Post Office Blank Agent at New York, N. Y." Besides the blanks supplied by these agencies, however, there are other blanks which are supplied only by the First Assistant P. M. General. What these are you can learn by applying to that officer for blank "Requisitions for Blanks." form No. 39.

Postage on Printed Bills containing Request to Put up in an Office.—J. S., W——, Pa.—If the "request" is printed, such bills would be subject to printed matter postage; if written, to letter postage.

Franking Privilege.—H. M. J., D——, O., and S. S. H., P—— C——, Pa.—We refer you to our article on this subject in the Mail for September last.

Hours for keeping Post Office Open.—E. F. R. C., H——, Ill.—The regulations require post offices to be kept open "during the usual business hours;" if there are no usual business hours in your village, keep your office open such hours as will accommodate the public.

Rates of Foreign Postage.—H. H. W., C——, Ill.—The recently established rates of 27cts. and 17cts. to Holland, &c., do not abolish the rate of 21cts. via London by Am. Packet. A rate of 18cts. on all letters to Switzerland, via Belgium, has been established, but as yet the steamers by which they are to be conveyed are not running.

Assistant Route Agent.—L——, N. H—The First Assistant P. M. General has the appointment of route agents. Recommendations by your member of Congress and other influential persons would, doubtless, be useful. We do not know what the salary would be on the route you mention, as the salaries vary.

Accounting for Postage—R. K. S., Mt C——, Ill.—The [illegible] for each quarter must be entered in each quarterly account current.

Postage on Weekly and Monthly Publications to News-dealers residing in Montana Territory.—G. O. W., T——, Kas.—Sec. 229 of Regulations confines the privilege of receiving weekly and monthly publications at quarterly rates of postage, to one copy each, received from the regular office of publication, and only by bona fide subscribers.

Mail Carrier Running Irregularly.—G. S. B., J——, N. Y.—You should report the facts of the case to the Contract Office, Inspection Division, P. O. Dep't.

Box Rents.—J. M., A —— C ——, Iowa.—We refer you to an article on this subject in the Mail for last June.

Postmaster's Predecessor accounting for Postage collected Yearly.—W. E. B., H——, Iowa.—All money collected by a retiring postmaster, and not accounted for to the Department, should be paid to his successor.

Returning Mis-directed Stamped Envelopes to the Department.—A. E. P., C——, N. Y.—In order to have mis-directed stamped envelopes redeemed, the whole of such envelopes, and not the stamps only, must be sent, with a special letter, to the Third Assistant P. M. General.

Robbery of Post Office.—J. W., B——, Mo.—" Credit will not be allowed in cases where offices have been robbed of stamps or stamped envelopes." "But this regulation does not refer to claims arising under the acts of Congress for the relief of loyal postmasters who have been robbed by bodies of armed men." See section 182, Regulations of 1866.

Smokers and Loungers in Post Offices.—M. E. C., M——, N. Y.—Postmasters are not obliged to allow smokers and loungers in post offices. The good order and neatness of an office must, however, depend on the postmaster himself, and not on the laws and regulations of the P. O. Department.

Postage on Transient Papers from Canada.—J. R. C., C——, N. Y.—See article in our editorial columns.

Postage to Demerara, British Guiana, &c.—D. C. P., Tomah, Wis.—Ten cents the half ounce is the postage on all letters to foreign countries with which the United States have not postal treaties.

Forwarding Circulars.—L. W. B., So. D——, Mass.—No other mail matter than domestic LETTERS can be forwarded free. See article on this subject in the Mail for September.

Special Agents.—C. W., F——, D Y.—Besides the Special Agents included in our published list, there are others appointed for temporary or special duties.

Letter Addresses.

SHANTOWN POST SPEAKEYETH.

Skedaddle! Skyugle! make manifold tracks—
Take strides most prodigious and many;
Don't stop by the way, foolish questions to ax,
But, Git! for Nor'West Pennsylvany.

Go out to that country that smelloth of Ile,
Find Meadville as quick as you're able;
Provoke (if you can) just the ghost of a smile
At the Repub's Editorial Table.

I've said all I want to, so now just "wake snakes;"
Who it's for, I've neglected to tell,—oh!
Well I reckon this letter is Wm. Breed Drake's,
And the feast as the best—of that fellow.

For T. B. Smith, who's np so high,
Tho' still on earth, he's near the sky.
The business he pursues is this—
He keeps a stereotype "offis,"
So, postman, when you're on your beat,
Find No. 90 Nassau street,
Then many flights of stairs ascend,
You'll find his office where they end.
He's afways pleasant, cheerful, witty—
The kindest man in

NEW YORK CITY.

Miscellaneous Information.

Dead Letters.

In the instructions under the postal laws, UN MAILABLE LETTERS are specified to be—

Unpaid letters for foreign countries, on which prepayment is required by the regulations.

Lettere not addressed, or so badly addressed that their destination cannot be known.

Letters misdirected to places where there are no post offices.

Only such letters as are herein described are, when deposited in any post office, to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office; all others must be dispatched to their destination, charged with the amount of unpaid postage.

When unmailable letters are sent to the Dead Letter Office, the specific reason therefor must be endorsed upon the envelope of each.

These instructions will be strictly followed at all post offices.

For more full instructions relating to dead letters, advertising letters, &c., examine carefully Chap. 35, Regulations of 1866, and Sections 1 and 2, Act of June 12, 1866.

Foreign Letters, &c.

RATE FOR RATING LETTERS TO GREAT BRITAIN, &C.

The attention of postmasters is particularly called to the mode of rating postage upon letters ex changed in the mails between this country and the United Kingdom, which differs only in the rate, and not, as heretofore, in the weight or standard. The maximum standard weight is now half an ounce, and the rate is twenty-four cents; postage to Great Britain and Ireland, therefore, is as follows, viz.:

One rate (24 cents) for a single letter not exceeding ½ oz. in weight.

Two rates (48 cents) when over ½, but not exceeding 1 ounce.

Three rates (72 cents) when over 1, but not exceeding 1½ ounces, &c., &c.

Thus, a letter to Great Britain, weighing 4½ onnces, should be paid $2.16, being chargeable with nine rates. All part paid letters to foreign countries are treated as wholly unpaid, and the amount paid lost to the sender.

Lettere to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many casee, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Lettere can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore, decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at itspleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursnance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1865, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to thia country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of anch postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the eame is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and if charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

When the United States officiel postage enries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to he collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any question as to prepbyment, by this simple criterion.

Domestic Postages.

The law requires postage on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or, (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per hall ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established, the rate is 1 ct.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

RATES OF LETTER POSTAGE BETWEEN OFFICES IN THE UNITED STATES, AND TO AND FROM CANADA AND OTHER BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES

To and from Canada and New Brunswiek, 10c. per ½ oz., irrespective of distance.

To and from other British N. Am. Provincee.

for distance not over 3,000 miles. ..... 10 cts.
For any distance over 3,000 miles..... 15 "

For every additional half ounce, or fraction of a half ounce, an additional rate is charged. Prepayment is optional on all letters for the British North American Provinces and Newfoundland, to which prepayment is compulsory.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material, (not in cases,) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter—viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Photographic Albums are chargeable with book postage—four cents for each four ounces, or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the U. S.:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz..... 6 cts.
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.. 12 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.. 18 "
Monthly, not over 4 oz..... 3 "

Quarterly, not over 4 oz..... 1 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 2 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 3 "

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begine at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the p. m. must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribere for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications, the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packagee to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspeppers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of news papers, magazines and periodicals to regular subscribers) sent via Overland Mail, is to be charged at letter postage rates.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, and scions,) the postage to be pre-paid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the new Post Office Law, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows—"The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two onnces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the seperate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspepers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (excepbills and receipts for subscriptions) in, or to write or print anything, after its publication, upon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, is illegal, and subjects such printed matter, and the entire package of which it is a part, to letter postage.

Any word or communication, whether by printing, writing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper of a newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the persou to whom it is to be sent, and the date when subscription expires, subjects the package to letter postage.

ADVERTISEMENTS

TO POSTMASTERS.

THE undersigned respectfully solicits attention to his system of keeping, rendering and collecting Newspaper and Box accounts. He offers it as the result of twelve years' experience in the difficulties, vexations and uncertainties of keeping these accounts in accordance with Postal Law and Regulations, so well understood and painfully realized by Postmasters and their assistants.

The author is confident that in this system will be found a most valuable auxiliary, and one long needed in this perplexing branch of

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO.

What a glorious Institution is Christmas! What a realization of bright anticipations come with it! Saints and sinners celebrate it, the old and young revel in its illimitable liberties. Dignity bends, misanthropy mellows, avarice grows liberal—and juvenility is king.

Happy meetings, greetings, geese and turkey eatings are the salient features of the occasion—but underlying all these are scores of other things which make young hearts leap with new life, and old ones swell with sympathetic delight. Of course every one is not blessed with cherubs of his own, and therefore, if he requires the services of Santa Claus to pay tribute to somebody else's—he may or he may not make a hit. Some of your bachelor friends are in this category, and essay to continue popular with the grown folks, by tickling the fancy of the little ones—and by a skilful purchase of the most extraordinary and indescribable things in the noisy toy line sometimes succeed. I made the attempt and failed. I received an invitation and accepted it, to spend this eighteenth century-old holiday with an esteemed friend and his wife who are blessed with a family of the John Rogers proportions, and before going I purchased a supply of surprises for the young ones. In the way of fish horns, rattles, drums, squeaking birds and beasts, but the sequel showed that I was unfortunate in the selection of my Christmas gifts, for the infernal uproar created by the combined and continued exertions of seven pairs of arms and seven pairs of lungs, varying from one to ten years old so discomfitted Berrypebble and Chudd, two rich rural relatives of the family, that they left hurriedly, and in very bad temper. Of course I did not anticipate anything of this kind, and it had the effect to spoil the general appetite for a magnificent dinner. I said all I could, and did all I could to retrieve myself but "Ma and Aunt Thinwin" would not be smoothed down, and I secretly resolved to retire as soon as I could do so with an air of plausibility, and as luck would have it the auspicious moment soon arrived. An alarm of fire in the immediate neighborhood collected a great crowd, and taking advantage of the excitement I left, and repairing to my own domicile, I spread out my stock of creature comforts, lit my segar, sat down before the fire and gave way to reflection.

At first regret for being the unintentional cause of marring the enjoyments of my friend's family was paramount, but I soon began to think I was not so much to blame after all, and thus gradually reassuring myself I took higher ground, and in a little while I convinced myself that I was the injured instead of the injuring party. I had made the fledgelings happy, and that was precisely what I designed to do; and if nervous gold-bearing Arcadian cousins saw fit to return to the bowels of the land on account of a little innocent infantile clamor, it was no reason why I should chafe about it. I know from experience that it is perfectly impossible to please everybody. The kindest actions are regarded with suspicion by some. Benevolence is looked upon as money put out at usurious interest, Philanthropy, only a cloak worn by Ambition to secure notoriety, popularity and position, and the very best intentions are often thwarted by people, on the "dog in the manger" principle, who will not be benefitted themselves, nor allow any one else to be if they can help it. The only course therefore to pursue under such circumstances, is the one which ensures the greatest personal gratification, and in such case, selfishness is commendable.

Now the good nature which prompted me on Christmas day to good deeds, is the same which impels me to give good words to post office people through your columns from time to time, and if through your efforts, and the efforts of your correspondents, they are not shamed or persuaded into the proper performance of their duties, it must be owing entirely to the obtuseness of their heads or the perverseness of their hearts, neither of which are desirable or popular qualities. For instance, in one of my letters I spoke kindly and warningly to postmasters, and told them to look to the security of their offices. Have they done so? I have noticed in the papers lately several post office burglaries in different parts of the country, and it is fair to presume the U. S. Mail was regularly sent to some of these sufferers. Did they read it? Doubtful. Why, I am surprised that these affairs do not oftener occur, for it seems to me from the observations I am able to make during my peregrinations about the country, that P. M's. offer though the carelessness with which they conduct their official duties, a premium to burglars and robbers to "break in and steal," so that something can be covered up, or accounted for. Or as fu-eurance Companies sometimes do, by permitting persons to effect a policy on their property to a greater extent than its worth, thus holding out inducements to them to fire their own premises. I don't think the size of an office, or the extent of its business, is to be taken in consideration when the question of saleto is involved. One letter should be as carefully guarded as one hundred, and the official who jeopards it because it is a small trust, will not be very careful or anxious about a large one.

From some cause or other, dogs are rarely found about post offices. Now, whether they are too vigilant or too scarce owing to the high price of sausages, I can't say, but it is a fact, that it is very rare to find so safe and yet so cheap a sentinel in government employ. Again, I understand that but few officials sleep in post offices; of course I can't tell whether it is true or not, but if it is, I presume it is owing to the fear of being carried, while asleep, to some lonely spot along with other mail matter, and cut open and scattered around promiscuously: for I am sure no one who has the courage to face the multitude from behind a rampart of boxes and drawers, and to say most savage things sometimes, would have the least fear of being carried away by less than nine or ten great, tall, black masked midnight marauders.

And then after all, perhaps it is not just the place to pass the night—post offices are generally such open places, that one cannot enjoy oneself with his friends without being seen—one's own room is the best place. If this should meet the eye of any official Berrypebble or Chudd and it annoys them, I can't help it.

MONS. TONSON.

POST OFFICE AWAY UP IN VERMONT.

Dec. 20, 1866.

Editor U. S. Mail.—The article in the Dec. No. of the Mail by "NICOTINUS" has stirred within me a latent disposition to find fault with officials generally, and some postmasters in particular.

I fully agree with "NICOTINUS," that ignorance and carelessness are neither sufficient excuse for the many blunders daily perpetrated by postmasters.

The man who assumes the duties of postmaster has no right to be ignorant of them, yet many postmasters appear to think it unnecessary to post mark letters, or deface the stamps upon them, notwithstanding the explicit instructions of the Postmaster General to postmark all letters plainly with the name of the office and State; also, thoroughly deface the stamps, under penalty of being reported by the postmaster at the office of delivery, with a strong intimation that such neglect is no trifle. But pray tell us how postmasters at the office of delivery are to report delinquents, when they insist upon daubing a little printers' ink upon letters instead of a plain postmark, and make a motion with a defacing stamp at random, oftener defacing the address than the stamp? I ask how is the postmaster at the office of delivery to report them, inasmuch as he has no right to open the letters, and finds nothing outside to indicate that they were ever inside of a post office, and can only guess it from the fact that they came in the mail.

"Mistakes will occur in the best regulated families," but there is no excuse except laziness for pitching a batch of letters into a mail bag in the manner I have mentioned, (and without wrappers too), while postmasters at the office of delivery have to open and distribute mails with defacing stamps in hand, and do the work of some dozen lazy fellows, as I have done, while an impatient crowd is waiting outside, and the postmaster is mentally perpetrating profanity, (if given to the habit), vowing all the while he would, if he could only delineate these postmarks, report those fellows before he slept.

I have long threatened to give vent to my feelings in this matter, and as I said, "NICOTINUS" stirred me up to "duty;" and now, Mr. Editor, I feel better, or should if I could be assured that all these lazy, (yes—that's the word—lazy) careless and ignorant postmasters and clerks would read this and remember it.

There is another subject upon which I wish to say a word, being incited thereto by "NICOTINUS," when he says, he "doubts not he (the careless P. M.) would roll a letter to the moon, were he to find one in his letter box directed to that sphere." I have no doubt some postmasters would pitch the moon itself into the bag without wrapper or postmark, if it only had a two-cent stamp "on to" it. When will postmasters learn that dry goods, tailors' shears, fur collars, &c., &c., are subject to letter postage? Probably many of them never.

I have received several packages of the several kinds I have mentioned within a few months, with a two-cent stamp upon them, when if a P. M. at the mailing office knew his duty as he ought, and did it, I should not be troubled with the scolding I invariably receive from the persons addressed, when I call for the extra 25 or 50 cents postage, accompanied with the remark, "I should think the P. M. who mailed it ought to know, and I suppose he has no right to send it if it wasn't right." I think so too.

The reader will bear in mind that these packages are too large to put in any office box, and must of necessity be delivered to the official in person.

Now, Mr. Editor, I know all these delinquents who read the Mail, (and I presume many of them do), have read hints upon these matters many times, and have read the laws and regulations too, and yet heed them not.

If disposed, please insert this in next number of the Mail; if not, please pick your flint and try again, perhaps they will heed it.

A POSTMASTER.

P. O. INNUBIBUS, N. Y.

December, 1866.

Editor U. S. Mail.— I proposed in my last to say something on the use of "Distributing Offices." It can be summed up in a few words: Increased security and celerity in the transmission of mail matter from one State to another, especially if the two States be far distant from each other. Hence I consider it an imperative duty for every Postmaster to adhere to the Regulations for "Making up the Mails," (chapter X of Reg. of 1866) and to learn the various D. P. O's. to which he should send mail matter. Sometimes there is a choice. I cannot better illustrate this than by narrating the experience of a brother P. M., related to me as we sat chatting, one evening, over post office matters, and blowing that "cloud," which I allow, whether in the public or private rooms of my office, only during those hours not "the usual business hours of the place." My brother P. M., said he had taken charge of a self running office some two years before, where, of course, he had found matters at "sixes and sevens," a good deal of "fogyism" and things behind the age generally. A wagon load of sacks, some of them half rotten, a peck or two of locks, some useless iron rust, and waste paper ad libitum, make a few items of his discoveries. Within the delivery of this office there lived a gentleman who had considerable correspondence with the west, particularly Wisconsin and Minnesota—by the way, as a man without a name is about as difficult to imagine as a pitcher without a handle, I will call the gentleman by the distinguished name of Brown, and that he may not be confounded with others of the name, he shall have a given name of Dunn, Dunn Brown, Esq; and to keep my narrative within limits, I will confine his correspondence to one gentleman residing at St. Pauls whose name shall be the equally distinguished name of Green, Knott Green, Esq., of St. Pauls. The postmaster shall be known as P. M., and thus the three persons of the story will be introduced by name. One of Dunn Brown's standing complaints against the Post Office Department, was that letters to Knott Green were from twenty-four to thirty-six hours longer on the route than those from him. Dunn Brown could not understand it, and his understanding and dissatisfaction were still further increased, by the discovery that if his letters were sent to New York though some two hundred and fifty miles east, they reached St. Pauls sooner than if sent directly westward. Accordingly, whenever he mailed a letter to Knott Green, he personally requested that it should be sent "via New York," "Via New York?" P. M. would say to himself; "nearly three hundred miles east before starting westward—either I or the Department are greatly in error" and he set to work to find which. He found that a person could mail a letter for Milwaukeee, for instance, remain at home twenty-four hours, and then reach Milwaukee in time to tell his correspondent that, in some six or twelve hours, he might expect a letter from him, mailed twenty-four hours before he left his place of residence. How is this? was a very natural question, but a little inquiry solved it. In a few words, the postal facilities had not kept pace with the age. "Once upon a time," before certain Rail Roads were, the "distributing office through which certain letters should first pass on their proper route" &c., was Buffalo, but the opening of new lines of railway had opened new routes of travel and postal service postmasters; had not been as sharp as commercial men, and hence advantage had not been taken of these new routes of postal service to the extent that should have been. To make my story short, the Cleveland office was found to be the D. P. O. on the direct route, inasmuch as the route agents on the Erie Railway make up a bag for Cleveland, which they put on the express train a few miles west of the office to which P. M. sent all his mails for separation, and that this bag reached Cleveland some ten or twelve hours sooner that letters by the same agent would reach Buffalo. P. M. said to himself, "Why should my western letters be sent miles out of the way to Buffalo, and by way trains, when they can be sent a more direct way and by express trains, why should I put grist in one end of my bag, and stones in the other, because others did before me?" So he took down the Regulations to see if he had authority to send to Cleveland D. P. O. instead of to Buffalo D. P. O.: he read, "Letters not required by the foregoing provisions to be mailed direct, shall be mailed to the distributing office through which they should first pass on the proper route to the place of their destination." As he could find no instructions to send by any parucular route he considered he had as good authority to send to the Cleveland D. P. O. as to New York D. P. O. He did this and the result was a decrease in the time required for Dunn Brown's letters to reach Knott Green, some very handsome compliments from Dunn Brown, who, by the way, is a wealthy and influential man, and satisfaction generally that the town had a live postmaster.

Now, Mr. EdRor, I do not know that postmasters have authority to select the route by which to send letters, I do not know that they have not such authority, and therefore I would not advise them to make any radical changes, without permission of the department, but I would advise them to keep at least "one eye open," and in these days of multiplied and multiplying railroads, to be continually on the watch, to learn if the transmission of mail matter can in any way be facilitated and made more expeditious, and when they find it can, to obtain the consent of the Department to make the necessary changes. In this way a great deal can be done to popularize the Post Office Department, and to facilitate business and social operations.

Very truly Yours,

NICOTINUS.

P. O. CORPUS CHRISTI,

NOV. 22, 1866.

Editor U. S. Mail.—To-day came the Mail for November. I opened it to glance at it, and had to read it all before I could lay it down. I don't see how any P. M. can do without the Mail; next to my "Postal Laws and Regulations" I prize it, and it helps to make those plain.

In illustration and proof of your article on the "Post Office vs. the Express," I give you this fact:—Not long since I ordered a few hundred dollars of Internal Revenue Stamps. If they had been sent by mail, registered, the postage would have been twenty-seven cents, and they would have come, as do postage stamps, with the letter announcing that they were sent. That letter came Sept. 12, saying the stamps were forwarded by express. Oct. 14, one month and two days afterward, the stamps came all safe with a charge of $2.50, specie. The experiment has not given us a vivid sense of the superiority of the Express over the "old slow-coach P. O."

A word and a fact in regard to the safety of the P. O. This office was re-established in March, but no contract service was established till September. The mail came and went, as we could send it—in open boats—at first, in common paper sacks, by unsworn men, or boys, as we could find any one to take it. We sent hundreds of dollars of money, and we have lost in all this exposure only one dollar sent to New York. Every number of the principal N. Y. papers also came safely since the office was opened. The Express could have done no better.

POSTMASTER.

The New-York Post Office.

In the Washington correspondence of the New York Daily papers of Jan. 9th, appears the following intelligence:

"The Secretary of the Interior and Acting Postmaster General Skinner have approved the report of the commission heretofore appointed to select a site for a building for a Post Office and for the accommodation of the United States courts in the city of New York. They recommend an additional appropriation of $1,500,000 for the erection of a building for the purpose mentioned. An urgent necessity, they say, exists for early action, and they are of opinion, that economy and policy require that the United States should be the proprietors of the buildings in the city of New York, appropriated to such important public uses. The report enclosed from the commission says, that upon investigation it was ascertained that the average amount of outgoing and incoming mails had increased in less than twelve years from ten tons to ninety and one hundred tons a day; that the present Post Office building was totally unfitted for and inadequate to the present wants of the postal business, and that a building fitted to accommodate it and the business of the United States courts, would require a space of land equal to from twenty-five to thirty city lots. It was also apparent that a location should be procured in which streets were wider than those upon which the present Post Office is situated, the latter being too narrow to permit large mail wagons to be turned in them without using the side-walks on one of the sides of those streets. Only one definite response was received to the proposals the commission invited—namely, from Smith Cleft, relative to the sale of St. John's Park. This property, located near the Hudson river, was considered to be so far removed from the central part of the city as to be unfitted for the purposes proposed. The commission, for the reason stated at length, recommend that the United States accept the offer of the Corporation of the city of New York to sell to it the portion of the City Hall Park, in area 65,259 square feet, for half a million of dollars, for the purpose of erecting thereon a city Post Office and rooms for the courts of the United States and for the necessary offices connected therewith. These documents were to-day transmitted to the House of Representatives."

A Row About a Postage Stamp.

The following incident which a French exchange brings us as having taken place in Paris, is so good, and contains such a capital moral for the edification of people, prone to find fault with the Postmasters, that we translate it with pleasure:

The widow Richard is an old lady addicted to making "bulls," and is of a piece with the good woman who poured out the coffee to feast upon the grounds. It was a blunder something of this character she has just committed, for which she has come to answer at the police office

The cause of the hubbub had occurred in one of the city post offices of Paris, where the clerk, whose duty it was to attend to prepaid letters, was suddenly accosted by a woman who rushed in in great trepidation. This woman was the widow Richard.

"Sir," she exclaimed, in a voice trembling with anger, "how does it happen, I should like to know, that when one has prepaid the postage on a letter, the person to whom it is sent is made to pay for it again?"

"How it happens, madam?" cried the clerk, "why it don't happen at all."

"Well, I say it does happen, and what's more, that it happened to-day—there!"

"And I tell you again that it is impossible that it should be so."

"But it is a person of my aquaintance to whom I wrote yesterday, and whose letter I prepaid, who says she had to pay for it too. She was furious about it, and I don't wonder she was; for I wrote to her concerning my own affairs, and she had to pay the postage. It's downright robbery, I say!"

And thereupon the widow kicked up such a rumpus that it was found to be necessary to call in a policeman and take her before a magistrate. Instead of pacifying Madam Richard, this proceeding nearly threw her into the last degree of exasperation. Although the officer requested her to assume a proper line of conduct, the widow persisted in her fury, and stamped and screamed most uproariously.

"To be told, too, that I don't know what I have done with it!" she cried.

"Done with what?" inquired the magistrate.

"The receipt," answered the widow; "the receipt which proves that I prepaid the letter." So saying, she fumbled in all her pockets.

"There, she exclaimed suddenly, "I've got it! Here it is!"

And she exhibited triumphantly to the magistrate—what can you imagine it was? a postage stamp! The poor lady had taken it as a receipt for the money she had paid to the clerk, and had treasured it sacredly instead of pasting it upon the letter!

The blunder was duly explained to her amid the laughter of the spectators. She promptly acknowledged her fault, and regretting she had given way to her anger, begged the Court to deal leniently with her. She pleaded her ignorance as the cause of the storming and abuse of which she stood convicted.

The Court took the culprit's general good conduct into consideration, as well as her contrition, and fined her 16 francs only.

[However ridiculous this piece of French Partingtonism may seem to the reader, he can rest assured that scarcely a week passes at any P. O. in this country without some absurdity like it occurring, for which the poor P. M. is roundly berated, without enjoying the satisfaction of seeing the blunderers punished for their perverseness.] Comic Monthly.

TO J. GAYLER, ESQ., Editor U. S. Mail.

☞ Although it is our desire and endeavor that our paper should appear on the first of each month, yet it is sometimes, owing to various circumstances, impossible to secure that result. Important changes in the laws and regulations occasionally occur at such times as to require, for the benefit of our readers, that our issue should be postponed for a few days in order to enable us to lay the details of such changes before them at as early a date as possible, instead of allowing a month to elapse before their publication. Our subscribers will therefore readily understand that a short delay in receiving their papers is sometimes unavoidable, and that when such delay occurs, it is the result of a desire to give them advantage of the latest official information on the postal matters.

Notice to Postmasters.

Reduction of Postage to the West Indies.

We are requested to state that, on and from the 1st of January 1867, a reduction will take place in the postage upon letters and newspapers, conveyed by British Packet, or partly by British and partly by U. S. Packet, from this country to any foreign port in the West Indies, and that, in consequence of such reduction, the rates of postage, to the places hereinafter named, will be as follows, viz:

Upon letters for Guadalonpe, Hayti, and Martinique, via England, 29 cents per single rate of half an ounce, and upon newspapers, 4 cents each, prepayment required.

Upon letters for Porto Rico, Jamaica, and other West India Islands, not British (except Cuba) by British mail via Havana, 18 cents per single rate of half an ounce, and upon newspapers 4 cts. each, prepayment required.

Postage to the West Indies, Central and South America, &c., by French Mail via New-Orleans.

We are requested to state that an arrangement has been made with the General Post Department of France, for the exchange of mails by means of the new line of French Mail Packets, established between Havana and New Orleans, running in connection with the French line of Packets conveying mails between St. Nazaire and Vera Cruz.

Under this arrangement the New Orleans Post Office will make up mails for, and receive mails from the agents of the mails embarked on board these French packets, to comprise not only correspondence to or from France, Algeria, and countries to which France serves as an intermediate point, but also, letters for Cuba, Mexico Hayti, Porto Rico, St. Thomas, Venezuela, United States of Colombia, Guadalonpe, Martinique, French Guiana English Guiana, Jamaica, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Grenada, Trinidad, Dutch Guiana, Marquesas Island, Low Islands, Society Islands, Bolivia, Chili, Ecuador and Peru.

The French packets of the branch line from Havana to New Orleans, leave Havana on the 6th of each month, on the arrival at that port of the packet which left St. Nazaire (France) on the 16th of the preceding month, and will arrive at New Orleans on the 9th; returning, will leave New Orleans on the 13th, to arrive at Havana on the 16th, in time to make connection with the steamers from Vera Cruz for St. Nazaire.

The postage charges upon letters sent and received by this route via New Orleans, are as follows, viz:

For or from Guadaloupe, Martinique, French Guiana, English Guiana, Jamaica, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Grenada and Trinidad, 13 cents per single rate of half an ounce, prepayment optional, which is in full to destination.

For or from Dutch Guiana, 14 cents per single rate, prepayment optional, which is also in full to destination.

For or from Marquesas Island, Low Islands, and the Society Islands, 37 cents per single rate, prepayment optional, which is in full to destination.

For or from Cuba, Mexico, Hayti, Porto Rico, St. Thomas, Venezuela and the United States of Colombia, 10 cents per single rate, prepayment required upon letters sent, (being in full to ports of debarkation), and prepayment optional upon letters received.

For or from Bolivia, Chili and Ecuador, 34 cents per single rate, prepayment required, in full to ports of debarkation and embarkation on the Pacific.

For or from Peru, 22 cents per single rate, prepayment required, in full to ports of debarkation and embarkation on the Pacific.

The postage upon letters sent to or received from France and Algeria, by this line, is 15 cents per single rate of ½ ounce, prepayment optional.

The Postmasters' Almanac for 1867.

As farmers, lawyers and the members of various trades and professions are annually supplied with almanacs, devoted in part to their various interests, and containing hints and instructions appropriate to each month, it has occurred to us that the members of the postal fraternity might, perhaps, find use for a few brief memoranda of a similar kind. Predictions as to weather and eclipses being out of our sphere, we shall not attempt them, but confine our suggestions to matters strictly pertaining to postal duties.

JANUARY.—Begin this month, and the year, by resolving to endeavor to make your office in the future a model one for neatness, good order, attention to the wants of the public and the requirements of the Postal Laws and Regulations. This is a good month in which to begin to postmark letters plainly—and the practice might as well be continued through the year.

FEBRUARY.—Burglars may visit the post office during this month. If so, they will probably arrive during the night; it will, therefore, be advisable that a clerk should sleep in the office, provided with a revolver, in order to meet and entertain them. If that is not practicable, a good watch dog may perhaps answer the purpose. If they do not come this month, don't be discouraged, but keep up the above preparations until next February.

MARCH.—There can be no better month than this in which to stop the practice of allowing bundles of books, clothing, (not addressed to soldiers) tobacco, &c., to be mailed at your office prepaid at less than letter rates. Begin to charge letter postage on all such articles, and having once begun, it will not be worth while to stop.

APRIL.—A most excellent month for omitting to send by the mail going west any letters directed east, or any north which are directed south, and vice versa. This is a bad month for allowing letters to leave your office with the stamps not properly cancelled.

MAY.—During this month it will be very improper to leave the post office locked up during two or three hours in the middle of the day while you are absent at dinner, or engaged in private business. This month is a very favorable one in which to see that you and your clerks do not detain, beyond the proper time, letters bearing requests to "return if not called for" with in a certain number of days.

JUNE.—This month offers a first rate opportunity for looking over your account of newspaper postage and taking precautions against the delivery of newspapers to subscribers unless the quarterly postage is prepaid. If you have any trouble in arranging your newspaper account systematically, write for assistance (with remittance) to Tryon or Stone, whose advertisements appear in the Mail.

JULY.—A very appropriate month in which to declare your independence by refusing to violate your official oath at the request of personal friends in allowing them to occupy boxes rent free or to send half a dozen business circulars in one envelope for two cents postage. If you or any of your clerks have been in the habit of puffing cigar or pipe smoke through the delivery window, you could not choose a better time for ceasing to do so.

AUGUST.—This month is as good a time as any for establishing and enforcing a rule by which all "outsiders" shall be forbidden to handle or inspect mail matter in your office, or to assist in sorting or delivering the mail. Registered letters should not be delivered during this (or any other) month except to persons you know to be authorized to receive them.

SEPTEMBER.—Notice the number marked on the wrapper of your copy of the Mail for this month. If you find that your term of subscription has expired, or nearly so, don't fail to remit the next years subscription by first mail. Don't send a registered letter "direct" when a Distributing Post Office intervenes on the route between your office and their one to which the letter is addressed.

OCTOBER.—Special Agents will be likely to visit post offices during this month, and may possibly desire to trace registered packages of Stamps which are reported missing. It is therefore considered "lucky" for postmasters at separating offices to have their record of such packages in good order for inspection about this time, according to Section 183 P. O. Regulations.

NOVEMBER.—This is a fine month for assuring yourself that no person is employed by you as deputy or clerk who has not taken the official oath required by the Regulations: also for reading and following the instructions contained in Chapter XI. Regulations of 1866.

DECEMBER.—This being the last month of the year, it is has been your practice to postpone making up your mail until you hear the whistle of the train by which it is to be despatched, and then tumbling the letters helter-skelter into the pouch, without tying, wrapping or directing, it will now be a capital time to make up your mind that you have done so for the last time. Should you have any doubts as to the soundness of this advice, consult the route agent. During this month advise all brother P. M's whom you meet to subscribe for the Mail, if they have not already done so.

N. B.—All the above hints and prophecies will apply as well to one month as another.

Aid for the South.

Since the close of the war, many benevolent societies and individuals have been active in furnishing relief to those of the Southern people who stood in need of assistance, a work which meets the approval and deserves the co-operation of our countrymen of all sections. Another class of persons have also been equally active in tendering aid to the South; we refer to those who, by means of tempting circulars and advertisements, offer to relieve the pockets of their Southern fellow-citizens of superfluous cash by soliciting investments in lottery tickets and "Gift enterprise certificates." We understand that the entire South has been flooded by these rascals with their lying "confidential" circulars, offering prizes of "at least $5000" for $10, elegant gold watches "valued at $50, $100, up to $450" for two or three dollars, rich jewelry for next to nothing, &c. &c. The operations of these vermin at the North and West have not proved very profitable of late; but the restoration of postal facilities at the South opens a new field for the exercise of their thieving trade of which they have not been slow to avail themselves. We have so often exposed their tricks in these columns that we can only spare space now to advise Southern postmasters to pay no attention to requests from any quarter to furnish "lists of the names of persons receiving letters" at their respective post offices, and also to lose no opportunity of warning all persons against investing money in any lottery, gift enterprise, "benefit distribution" or other such schemes, however tempting the inducements, or however religious, moral or respectable the newspaper may be which, by publishing the advertisements of these scamps, becomes their hired accomplice in fraud and swindling.

Obituary.

On the 29th ult., Mr. GEORGE A. KELLINGER, who for nineteen years past had been conected with the New York Post Office, died at his residence in Brooklyn. Mr. Kellinger for many years previous to his death was Assistant Superintendent of the Foreign Letter Department of the New York Post Office, and was a most faithful and capable officer, as well as an estimable and genial gentleman. At a meeting of the superintendents, officers and clerks of the Post Office, held on 31st ult., the following resolutions were passed:

Whereas, The recent death of our companion and friend, George A. Kellinger—removing from among us as it does one equally useful and respected in his official capacity as he was beloved for his personal and social qualities—seems to call for some expression on our part of the sense of bereavement with which that sad event has impressed us; therefore,

Resolved, That by his demise we—who have, during a long association with him, daily found reason to accord him our esteem as a correct and efficient officer, and our admiration and regard as an unselfish and courteous social companion and a faithful friend—have experienced a loss which we cannot contemplate without a grief which the recollection of his many amiable qualities serves but to deepen, and which, we feel sure, is shared by all who were privileged to know him.

Resolved, That while we shrink from obtruding upon the sacredness of the grief into which his death has plunged those bound to him by nearer and tenderer ties than we, and while we are deeply sensible of the utter inadequacy of any human consolation in such a calamity, we cannot refrain from tendering to them the assurance that the sympathy of each one of us is with them in their affliction, and that the memory of him they mourn shall ever be cherished among us.

Resolved, That we will attend the funeral of our departed friend in a body, and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to his family.

JAMES KELLY, Chairman.

J. W. NORTON, Secretary.

POSTAL MAPS.—During a recent visit to the Department at Washington, we called at the office of the Topographer, U. L. Nicholson, Esq., and found him engaged in superintending the completion of two sheets of maps, exhibiting the post offices and mail routes of the New England States, which will soon be ready for publication. They have been prepared with great care—an ingenious arrangement of the colors and forms of the lines which represent the routes indicating the class and frequency of the service performed on each. These first issues will be followed by others, and the maps will be of great use and value not only to the Department, but to the public who will have an opportunity of purchasing them.

☞ A bill has been introduced into Congress authorizing the Postmaster General to establish and operate certain telegraph lines between the principal cities, to be available for use by the public at moderate rates, as well as by the government. The bill has been referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and the proposition meets with the favor of the press—among others, strangely enough, some of the papers which have advocated the abolition of the post office, and leaving the mails to the care of "private enterprise," are rejoicing at the prospect of terminating the "telegraph monopoly" by the means proposed in the bill.

NEW BRASS MAIL LOCK.—A new and improved brass mail lock has been adopted by the Department, and has been supplied to all "Brass Lock Post Offices." The use of the old brass lock is of course, to be discontinued.

[Subscribers will greatly oblige us, and often save time and trouble, if they will, before sending us inquiries to be answered in this column, consult the various standing articles in the Mail under the heads of "Miscellaneous Information," "Domestic Postages," &c., &c., for information on the subject in regard to which they are in doubt. We receive a great number of questions, answers to which could readily be found by attending to this request.]

Postage on Specimen Copies of Newspapers, &c.—N. J. P.—F—B—, Tenn.—1. The postage on specimen copies of newspapers should be prepaid at transient rates, but if they should pass through the mails unpaid, postage at transient rates should be collected at the office of delivery. 2. No account should be kept of prepaid postage. 3. If you have no internal revenue stamps to put on your bond, you must get them. 4. If you cannot weigh a package of papers on your P. O. scale, weigh it on another scale, or divide the package in two or more parts, weigh each, and add the weights together, the weight of the wrapper must be included. 5. A sworn mail carrier may carry the mail, in a locked pouch, on other than the regular contract days, but no one else. 6. Application for a semi-weekly mail must be made to the Contract Office, Washington, D. C. 7. The post office cannot be moved to the other side of the county line without the consent of the P. M. General. 8. Postage is charged upon the weight of the letter before the stamp is affixed.

Postage to Vancouver's Island.—M. M. B., C——, Me.—Prepayment of postage to Vancouver's Island is optional.

Forwarding Registered Letters.—J. H. G. B——, N. Y.—Registered Letters when forwarded, should be registered, and a memorandum of the order to forward should be attached to the account of Registered Letters Received.

Postage on "Dress Goods."—F. K., N——, Ind.—Dress Goods should be charged at letter postage. See Sections 215, 221, 222 and 245 of the Laws of 1866.

Ordinary Post Bill with Registered Letters sent to a Railway Post Office.—C. E. S., G—— P——. Ill.—An ordinary post bill marked with the number of registered packages should always be sent with such registered packages, no matter to what office they are sent.

Disposition of Letters addressed simply to an Office.—H. L., E——, Pa.—Such letters should be sent to the Dead Letter Office, endorsed with the reason for so doing.

Free Papers to Subscribers.—J. H., E—— O.—Only weekly papers sent to bona-fide subscribers from the office of publication, and only one copy to each subscriber, can pass through the mails free, and these only to subscribers living within the county of publication. But they may be sent to a post office in an adjoining county, provided it is the post office at which the subscriber regularly receives his mail matter.

Postage to India.—H. M. P., M——, Vt.—The rate of postage to India will be found under the title "East Indies." We will take this occasion to say to you and to other postmasters, who have a difficulty in consulting the Table of Foreign Postages, that the name by which a country may be commonly designated, is not always the one to be found in our Table.

Postmasters replying to Inquiry for Missing Letters.—M. M. S., N— Y—, N. Y.—It would be but courteous in a postmaster to make such a reply, if a stamp accompany the letter of inquiry, but as to being a duty, we have a doubt. The proper way to insure a reply is to have your postmaster make an "official inquiry."

Boxes.—W. W., W——, Iowa, and A. F. R., C— C—, Ind.—Boxes are the private property of a postmaster, and pass by sale from one to another, the same as any other private property. It stands to reason, however, that a postmaster cannot sell to individuals boxes to be used as post-office boxes for a term of years, or for any term beyond his continuance in office; and by the act of July 1, 1864, postmasters are required to account to the P. O. Department for box rents. See Sections 92 of Laws, and Chapter 42 of Regulations—Edition of 1866; also, article on the subject in the June number of the Mail.

Rules for adjusting Salaries of Offices of the Fifth Class.—Z. J. W., W— V—, N. Y.—Salaries are adjusted on the basis of the amount of postage stamps canceled, money collected for postage, box rents and other items, whereby money is received on account of the Department, such as the sale of refused papers, &c.

Keeping order in a Post Office during the opening of a mail.—J. L., S——, Pa.—A postmaster is not only allowed to preserve order in his office at all times, but should do so, although there is no express postal law to this effect. Preserving order is always allowable, though the means by which it is done may vary.

Resignation of Assistant P. M.—C. S. H., P——, Ky.—Your "Deputy," or Assistant, being appointed by yourself, his resignation need only be tendered to you, and not to the Department. In appointing another, you will apply to the First Assistant Postmaster General for a copy of the official oath, (Blank. No. 40,) and after the new Assistant has sworn and subscribed it before a Justice of the Peace, he will be competent to enter on his duties.

Letters to Paymaster General, &c.—H. M. G. L——, Ind.—1. Letters from any person to the Paymaster General, on official business, are entitled to pass free in the mails, whether marked "official business," or not. See Sections 124, (paragraph 4,) and 139, Regulations of 1866. 2. By Section 1, Act of June 12, 1866, "prepaid and free letters shall be forwarded from one post office to another, at the request of the party addressed, without additional charge for postage." This supersedes Sec. 290 P. O. Laws, published 1866.

Lottery and other Swindles.—R. P., A——, Miss., (and all other Southern P. M.'s.)—ALL the lottery and gift enterprise circulars issued at the North, and now extensively mailed to the South, are humbugs and swindles. Have nothing to do with them, and advise all your neighbors and acquaintances to do likewise.

THE PRODUCTION OF POSTAGE STAMPS, which in France only amounted in 1849 to 19,000,000, increased in 1865 to 414,000,000, and will reach 450,000,000 this year. England prints 800,000,000, annually.

ATMOSPHERIC POST SERVICE.—There is a good deal of talk in several of the European capitals, and likewise some discussion here on the subject of transmitting packages by atmospheric pressure.

In Paris the proposition is seriously entertained to establish direct communication between one of the leading hotels and the general post-office by means of a subterranean tube through which despatches and parcels will be conveyed upon the atmospheric principle. The channel itself may be termed a "pneumatic tube," and the propelling power, the "atmospheric motor."

Mail-carrying in Olden Time.

As the late Mr. Holbrook's interesting work—Ten years among the Mail Bags—is out of print, but few of our readers can have read the following sketch, which we extract from it:

In the early annals of our country, many instances of mail robbery are found, some of which occasioned the display of great intrepidity and daring, as the perusal of the following pages will show.

While the country was yet thinly settled, and the mails were transported on horseback, or in different kinds of vehicles, from the gig to the stage-coach, often through extensive forests, which afforded every facility for robbery, the office of the stage driver or mail carrier was no sinecure. Resolute men were required for this service, who on an emergency could handle a pistol as well as a whip.

Some thirty or forty years ago, a mail-coach ran in the northern part of the state of New York, through the famous "Chateaugay woods." The forest was many miles in extent, and common fame and many legends gave it the reputation of a noted place for freebooters and highwaymen.

One morning the stage driver on this route had occasion to examine his pistols, and found, instead of the usual charge that they were loaded with wheat bran! A daring villain had, through an accomplice, thus disarmed the driver, preparatory to waylaying him. He drew the charges, cleaned the weapons, and carefully loaded them with powder and ball.

That afternoon he mounted his stage for his drive through the Chateaugay woods. There was not a passenger in his vehicle. Whistling as he went, he "cracked up" his leaders, and drove into the forest. Just about the centre of the woods a man sprang out from behind a tree, and seized the horse by the bit.

"I say, driver," said the footpad, with consummate coolness, "I want to take a look at that mail."

"Yes, you do, no doubt, want to overhaul my mails," replies the driver; "but I can't be so free, unless you show me your commission. I'm driver here, and I never give up my mails except to one regularly authorized."

"O, you don't eh! well, here's my authority," showing the butt of a large pistol partly concealed in his bosom. "Now dismount and hear a hand, my fine fellow, for you see I've got the documents about me."

"Yes, and so've I," says the driver, instantly leveling his own trusty weapon at the highwayman.

"O! you won't hurt nobody, I guess; I've seen boys playing agger before now."

"Just drop those reins," says the keeper of Uncle Sam's mail bags, "or take the consequences."

"O! now you're jokieg, my fine lad! but come, look alive, for I'm in a hurry, it's nearly night."

A sharp report echoed through the forests, and the disciple of Dick Turpin lay stretched up on the ground. One groan and all was over. The ball had entered his temple.

The driver lifted the body into the coach drove to the next stopping place, related the circumstances, and gave himself up. A brief examination before a magistrate resulted in his acquittal, and highwaymen about the Chateaugay woods learned that pistols might be dangerous weapons, even if they were loaded with wheat bran, provided they were in the hands of one who knew how to use them.

DON'T BE IN A HURRY.—Some postmasters, having read, in the Postmaster General's report, that the postage between this country and Great Britain would doubtless soon be reduced to twelve cents per half ounce, have taken time by the forelock and made the reduction "on their own hook," sending letters for England, Ireland &c., to New York D. P. O. half paid. The postage still remains at the old rate of 24 cents per half ounce, however. When the reduction takes place, all interested will be distinctly and promptly notified.

THE oldest journal in Germany, and one of the oldest in the world, has just disappeared. The Postzeitung (Post Office Journal), published at Frankfort, was established in 1616, and consequently had to describe the operations of the Thirty Years' War. The journal was tolerated by Wallenstein, but has been suppressed by Bismark.

Only such letters ae are hereiu described are, when deposited in any post office, to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office; all others must be dispatched to their destination, charged with the amount of unpaid postage.

When unmailable letters are sent to the Dead Letter Office, the specific reason therefor must be endorced upon the envelope of each.

For more full instructione relating to dead letters, advertising lotters, &c., sxamine carefully Chap. 35, Regulatious of 1866, and Sections 1 and 2, Act of June 12, 1866.

RULE FOR RATING LETTERS TO GREAT BRITAIN, &C.

The attention of postmasters le particularly called to the mode of rating postage upon letters exchanged in the mails between this country and the United Kingdom, which differs only in the rate, and not, as heretofore, in the weight or standard. The maximum standard weight is now half an onnee, and the rate is twenty-four cents; postage to Great Britain and Ireland, therefore, is as follows, viz.:

One rate (24 cents) for a single letter not exceeding ½ oz. in weight.

Two rates (48 cents) when over ½, but not exceeding 1 ounce.

Three rates (72 cents) when over 1, but not exceeding 1½ ounces, &c., &c.

Thus, a letter to Great Britain, weighing 4½ ounces, should be paid $2.16, being chargeable with nine rates. All part paid letters to foreign countries are treated as wholly unpaid, and the amount paid lost to the sender.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepaymen of postage is comphlsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore, decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countriee.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postel Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rata of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addreseed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents, per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursnance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the seme is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bille. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any question as to prepayment, by this simple criterion.

Domestic Postages.

The law requires postege on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or, (on official business) to the chiefe of the executive departmente of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stemps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official lettere to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postege on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

To and from Canada and New Brunswick, 10c. per ½ oz., irrespective of distance.

To and from other British N. Am. Provinces.

for distance not over 3,000 miles.	10 cts.
For any distance over 3,000 miles	15 "

For every additional half ounce, or fraction of a half ounce, an additional rate is charged. Prepayment is optional on all letters for the British North American Provinces except Newfoundland, to which prepayment is compulsory.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Dagnerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postege by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material, (not in cases,) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter—viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Photographic Albums are chargeable with book postage—four cents for each four ounces, or fraction thereof.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent by the publieher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the U. S.:

Quarterly,	not over 4 oz.		..	1 "
"	over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.		..	2 "
"	over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.		..	3 "

Quarterly postege cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postege received by the p. m. must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postege, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications, the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packagee to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent le made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly ratee, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postege to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or conteining a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazines and periodicals to regular subscribers), sent via Overland Mail, is to be charged at letter postage rates.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cte.; over six and not over nine, 6 cte.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapere, handbills and poeters, book manucripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, printe, engravinge, sheet music, blanks, flexible pattarne, samplee and eample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representeticns of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, and scions,) the postage to be pre-paid by etampe, ie, on one package to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3; 1863, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows—"The weight of packages of seede, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ende as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postege. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seede, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provincee, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United Btates.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stampe. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular enbscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (except bills and receipts for subscription) in, or to write or print anything, after its publication, upon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, is illegal, and subjects each printed matter, and the entire package of which it is a part, to letter postage.

Any word or communication, whether by printing, writing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper of a newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the person to whom it is to be sent, and the date when subscription expires, subjects the package to letter postege.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOTICE TO POSTMASTERS.

The delay in filling orders for Tryon's System for Post Office Accounts has been occasioned by the exhaustion of the first issue; a second edition is now ready for delivery, and orders will receive prompt attention.

THE undersigned respectfully solicits attention to his system of keeping, rendering and collecting Newspaper and Box accounts. He offers it as the result of twelve years' experience in the difficulties, vexations and uncertainties of keeping these accounts in accordance with Postal Law and Regulations, so well understood and painfully realized by Postmasters and their assistants.

The author is confident that in this system will be found a most valuable auxiliary, and one long needed in this perplexing branch of official duty. The advantegee of it are, its simplicity, certainty, celerity, and cheapness. It is in exact and full accordance with the requisitions of Postal Law, and renders compliance with the regulatione of the Department in regard to these accounts, and their Quarterly Return, easy, certain, and with little comparative cost of time and labor.

The blank forms are on folio sheets of the usual size of Post Office blanks, and are arranged to embrace a period of four years.

From ten to fifteen sheete are sufficient to last that period for offices of the Fifth and Fourth classes, and will be sent together with a copy of the explanations, directions and examples, by mail, post paid, as follows:

For Ten Sheets	$1 50.
For Fifteen Sheets	2 00.

After which Postmasters ordering in quantities of from Ten to Twenty sheets will be furnished by mail, post paid, at the rate of $8.00 per 100 sheets.

Over this quantity, for large offices, an additional amount, to cover Postage, will be required. Offices of the 4th class should order not less than fifteen sheets; larger offices more according to amount of business.

Those soliciting sample sheets are informed, that a correct idea of the system can be formed only by the explanations and directions which with the blank sheets comprise the work, and can be sent only as advertised.

The blank form for Postage Receipts on inferior paper will be furnished in sheets to those ordering them, at the rate of $4.00 per 100 sheets, comprising about 1000 Receipts. Postege paid on orders not exceeding 25 sheets.

To Postmasters ordering the work, a Fac Bimile Specimen in manuscript of the manner of arranging the accounts, will be sent on receipt of twenty-five cents additional to cover letter postage, envelope, &c.

The following in a letter from the Postmaster at Lincoln, Mass., is one of many similar expressions received, showing how general is the feeling of a want I have endeavored to supply:

"The keeping accounts in our small offices is a great source of perplexity, and if your system is what you think it, you have conferred a great blessing upon Country Postmasters."

In reply to which and all similar communications I would say, that after experiencing all the perplexities and mortifications to which Postmasters and their assistants are subject in collecting and keeping accounts of Newspaper postages and Box rents according to postal Regulations, this system was devised; and for three years last past has been in use in my office, and subject to constant revision and correction as the various exigencies and difficulties presented themselves, until its adaptation to every class of offices, and every requirement and difficulty was supposed to be met.

The work is issued in the cheapest possible form, that its adoption may be very general.

WILLIAM TRYON.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

TO THE BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES.

Cape Breton, Pr'e Edward's Island, and Nova Scotia. To Newfoundland prepayment required. To Canada and New Brunewick, 10c. per ½ os., any distance.

* 10 cents when not over 3,000 miles from the line of crossing.
* 15 cents when dietance exceeds 3,000 miles. Prepayment optional.

Steamers of the Cunard line sail from Boston twice each month, touching at Halifax, and when letters are sent by that conveyance for Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward's Island, the U. S. postage is 6 cents the single rete, to be prepaid. The inland rate is collected on delivery. On newspapers by this route, the postage is two cents each.

Newspapers and periodicals published in the United Statee and sent to regular subscribers in the British North American Provinces, or published in those Provinces and sent to regular subscribers in the United Statee, are obargeable with the regular prepaid prepaid quarterly rates of United States postage to and from the line; which postage must be collected at the office of mailing in the United States on matter sent, and at the office of delivery in the United States on matter received. In like manner, such matter, if transient, is chargeable with the regular domestic transient printed matter rates to and from the line, to be collected at the office of mailing or delivery in the United States, as the case may be. Editors, however, may exchange free of expense.

REGISTRATION OF LETTERS.

Valuable letters for Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen or Hamburg line via New York, or by the Prussian closed mail via New York and Boston, as also letters addressed to Great Britain and Canada, will be registered on the application of the person posting the same, in the same manner and on the same terms as those deliverable in the United States, provided that the full postage chargeable thereon to destination, together with a registration fee of twenty cents on each letter to Great Britain or Ireland, and five cents on each letter to the other places mentioned above, is prepaid at the mailing office. Such letters should be mailed and forwarded to the respective United Statee exchange offices in the same manner as domestic registered letters are mailed to thoee offices.

RULE OF RATING LETTERS, ETC.

Letters addressed to Great Britain and Ireland are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, a single rate being charged for each half ounce, &c.

Letters in the mail to France are to be charged with single rate of postage, if not exceeding the weight of one quarter ounce; double rate if exceeding a quarter, but not exceeding half an ounce; and so on, an additional rate being charged for each quarter ounce or fractional part of a quarter ounce. Letters addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Bamburg, and the British North American Provinces, are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an ounce. Postmasters, should be careful, where the postage is prepaid, to collect the proper amount. They should be particular to notice the route indicated on the envelopes of letters, and to collect postage accordingly. Letters mailed at some offices, marked "via England," or "via Prus'n closed mail," for a German State, are frequently taken upon the prepayment of Bremen rates, and those marked "via Bremen," at Prussian closed rates, &c.

RULE OF RATING LETTERS GOING VIA FRANCE.

In the case of letters to be forwarded in the British mail for transmission from England via "Marseilles," the French postage is rated at 6 cente the quarter ounce, except on letters for Java, China, Labuan, Borneo, Japan, the Moluccas and Philipine Islands, which are rated at eight cents per half ounce, and except, also, on letters for Syria and Tuais, by French packet, when the single French rate is 12 cents per quarter ounce.

The rates by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz.: Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey, in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent via Suez, countries beyond seas, via France, other than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibralter, Hong Kong, Java, Mauritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia, (except Belgrade,) Shanghai, Singapore and Spain. The limit of prepayment to Spain, Portugal and Gibralter, is Behohia; to Servia, (except Belgrade,) Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria;" the frontier of Turkey and Austria; to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries via Suez, the seaports of the Indies, or of the sea of China to which their English packets ply; and to places beyond seas, other than those designated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of destination.

RATES ON PAMPHLETS, MAGAZINES, ETC.

On pamphlets and magazines, to or from the West coast of South America, the United Statee postage is four cente; and to or from all other foreign countries, (except Great Britain, Belgium, and the German States, via Bremen or Hamburg mail,) two cts. per 4 oz. or fraction thereof, to be collected in all cases in the United States.

Newspapers and periodicals to foreign countries (particularly to the continent of Europe) must be sent in narow bands, open at the sides or ends; otherwise they are chargeable with letter postage.

ROUTES OF TRANSMISSION, ETC.

To prevent mistakes at the exchange offices, it is desirable that the particular routes by which letters are to be forwarded from the United States to Europe, should be distinctly written on the covers. Letters intended for transmission in the open mail to England, should bear the direction "open mail via England;" if for transmission in the French mail, they should be directed, "via France in French mail;" if for transmission by closed mail to Prussia, they should be directed "via Prussian closed mail;" if for transmission in the closed mail to Belgium, they should be directed "via Belgian closed mail;" and if for transmission by the New York and Bremen line to Bremen, or by the New York and Hamburg line to Hamburg, they should be directed "via Bremen," or "via Hamburg."

It is important that letters addressed to Germany and other European countries, via France, where the single rate per quarter ounce is 21 cents, should be plainly marked to be sent via France; otherwise they may be missent in the open mail to Liverpool by United States packet, the 21 cent rate per half ounce being also chargeable on letters thus forwarded.

AND

VOL. VII, No. 5. NEW YORK. FEBRUARY, 1867. WHOLE No. 77.

THE TRAVELLING POST-OFFICE.

BY HESBA STRETTON.

Many years ago, I was engaged as a clerk in a Travelling Post-office running along the line of railway from London to a town in the Midland Counties, which we will call Fazeley. My duties were to accompany the mail-train, which left Fazeley at 8.15 P. M., and arrived in London about midnight, and to return by the day mail leaving London at 10.30 the following morning; after which I had an unbroken night at Fazeley, while another clerk discharged the same round of work; and in this way each alternate evening I was on duty in the railway post-office car. At first I suffered a little from a burry and tremor of nerve in pursuing my occupation while the train was crashing along under bridges and through tunnels at a speed which was then thought marvellous and perilous; but it was not long before my hands and eyes became accustomed to the motion of the carriage, and I could go through my business with the same despatch and ease as in the post-office of the country town where I had learned it, and from which I had been promoted by the influence of the post office surveyor of the district, Mr. Huntingdon. In fact, the work soon fell into a monotonous routine, which, night after night, was pursued in an unbroken course by myself and the junior clerk, who was my only assistant; the railway post-office work not having then attained the importance and magnitude it now possesses.

Our route lay through an agricultural district containing many small towns, which made up two or three bags only; one for London; another perhaps for the county town; a third for the railway post office, to be opened by us, and the enclosures to be distributed according to their various addresses. The clerks in many of these small offices were women, as is very generally the case still, being the daughters and female relatives of the nominal postmaster, who transact most of the business of the office, and whose names are most frequently signed upon the bills accompanying the bags. I was a young man, and somewhat more curious in feminine handwriting than I am now. There was one family in particular, whom I had never seen, but with whose signatures I was perfectly familiar,—clear, delicate, and educated, very unlike the miserable scrawl upon other letter-bills. One New Year's eve, in a moment of sentiment, I tied a slip of paper amoog a bundle of letters for their office, upon which I had written, "A happy New Year to you all." The next evening brought me a return of my good wishes, signed, as I guessed, by three sisters of the name of Clifton. From that day, every now and then, a sentence or two as brief as the one above passed between us, and the feeling of acquaintance and friendship grew upon me, though I had never yet had an opportunity of seeing my fair unknown friends.

It was towards the close of the following October that it came under my notice that the then Premier of the ministry was paying an autumn visit to a nobleman, whose country seat was situated near a small village on our line of rail.

The Premier's despatch box, containing, of course, all the despatches which it was necessary to send down to him, passed between him and the Secretary of State, and was, as usual, intrusted to the care of the post-office. The Continent was just then in a more than ordinarily critical state; we were thought to be upon the verge of an European war; and there were murmurs floating about, at the dispersion of the ministry, up and down the country. These circumstances made the charge of the despatch box the more interesting to me. It was very similar in size and shape to the old fashioned work-boxes used by ladies before boxes of polished and ornamental wood came into vogue, and, like them, it was covered with red morocco leather, and it fastened with a lock and key. The first time it came into my hands, I took such special notice of it as might be expected. Upon one corner of the lid I detected a peculiar device scratched slightly upon it, most probably with the sharp point of a steel pen, in such a moment of preoccupation of mind as causes most of us to draw odd lines and caricatured faces upon any piece of paper which may lie under our hand. It was the old revolutionary device of a heart with a dagger piercing it; and I wondered whether it could be the Premier, or one of his secretaries, who had traced it upon the morocco.

This box had been travelling up and down for about ten days, and, as the village did not make up a bag for London, there being very few letters excepting those from the great house, the letter-bag from the house, and the despatch-box, were handed direct into our travelling post-office. But in compliment to the presence of the Premier in the neighborhood, the train, instead of slackening speed only, stopped altogether, in order that the Premier's trusty and confidental messenger might deliver the important box into my own hands, that its perfect safety might be insured. I had an undefined suspicion that some person was also employed to accompany the train up to London, for three or four times I had met with a foreign-looking gentleman at Euston square, standing at the door of the carriage nearest the post-office car, and eying the heavy bags as they were transferred from my care to the custody of the officials from the General Post-office. But though I felt amused and somewhat nettled at this needless precaution, I took no further notice of the man, except to observe that he had the swarthy aspect of a foreigner, and that he kept his face well away from the light of the lamps. Except for these things, and after the first time or two, the Premier's despatch-box interested me no more than any other part of my charge. My work had been doubly monotonous for some time past, and I began to think it time to get up some little entertainment with my unknown friends, the Cliftons. I was just thinking of it as the train stopped at the station about a mile from the town where they lived, and their postman, a gruff matter-of-fact fellow,—you could see it in every line of his face,—put in the letter bags, and with them a letter addressed to me. It was in an official envelope, "On Her Majesty's Service," and the seal was an official seal. On the folded paper inside it (folded officially also) I read the following order: "Mr. Wilcox is requested to permit the bearer, the daughter of the postmaster at Eaton, to see the working of the railway post-office during the up-journey." The writing I knew well as being that of one of the surveyor's clerks, and the signature was Mr. Huntingdon's. The bearer of the order presented herself at the door, the snorting of the engine gave notice of the instant departure of the train, I held out my hand, the young lady sprang lightly and deftly into the car, and we were off again on our midnight journey.

She was a small, slight creature, one of those slender little girls one never thinks of as being a woman, dressed neatly and plainly in a dark dress, with a veil hanging a little over her face and tied under her chin; the most noticeable thing about her appearance being a great mass of light hair, almost yellow, which had got loose in some way, and fell down her neck in thick, wavy tresses. She had a free, pleasant way about her, not in the least bold or forward, which in a minute or two made her presence seem the most natural thing in the world. As she stood beside me before the row of boxes into which I was sorting my letters, she asked questions, and I answered as if it were quite an every-day occurrence for us to be traveling up together in the night mail to Euston-square station. I blamed myself for an idiot that I had not sooner made an opportunity for visiting my unknown friends at Eaton.

"Then," I said, putting down the letter-bill from their own office before her, "may I ask which of the signatures I know so well as yours? Is it A. Clifton, or M. Clifton, or S. Clifton?" She besitated a little, and blushed, and lifted up her frank, childlike eyes to mine.

"I am A. Clifton," she answered.

"And your name?" I said.

Agnes." Then, as if anxious to give some explanation to me of her present position, she added, "I was going up to London on a visit, and I thought it would be so nice to travel in the post office to see how the work was done, and Mr. Huntingdon came to survey our office, and he said he would send me an order."

I felt somewhat surprised, for a stricter martinet than Mr. Huntingdon did not breathe; but I glanced down at the small, innocent face at my side, and cordially approved of his departure from ordinary rules.

"Did you know you would travel with me?" I asked, in a lower voice; for Tom Morville, my junior, was at my other elbow.

"I knew I should travel with Mr. Wilcox," she answered, with a smile that made all my nerves tingle.

"You have not written me a word for ages," said I, reproachfully.

"You had better not talk, or you'll be making mistakes," she replied, in an arch tone. It was quite true; for, a sudden confusion coming over me, I was sorting the letters at random.

We were just then approaching the small station where the letter-bag from the great house was taken up. The engine was slackening speed. Miss Clifton manifested some natural and becoming diffidence.

"It would look so odd," she said, "to any one on the platform, to see a girl in the post-office car! And they could n't know I was a postmaster's daughter, and had an order from Mr. Huntingdon. Is there no dark corner to shelter me?"

I must explain to you in a word or two the construction of the car, which was much less efficiently fitted up than the travelling post-offices of the present day. It was a reversible car, with a door at each right-hand corner. At each door the letter-boxes were so arranged as to form a kind of screen about two feet in width, which prevented people from seeing all over the carriage at once. Thus the door at the far end of the car, the one not in use at the time, was thrown into deep shadow, and the screen before it turned it into a small niche, where a slight little person like Miss Clifton was very well concealed from curious eyes. Before the train came within the light from the lamps on the platform, she ensconced herself in this shelter. No one but I could see her laughing face, as she stood there leaning cautiously forward, with her finger pressed upon her rosy lips, peeping at the messenger who delivered into my own hands the Premier's despatch-box, while Tom Morville received the letter-bag of the great house.

"See," I said, when we were again in motion, and she had emerged from her concealment, "this is the Premier's despatch-box, going back to the Secretary of State. There are some state secrets for you, and ladies are fond of secrets."

"O, I know nothing about politics," she answered, indifferently, "and we have had that box through our office a time or two."

"Did you ever notice this mark upon it," I asked,—"a heart with a dagger through it?" and, bending down my face to hers, I added a certain spooney remark, which I do not care to repeat. Miss Clifton tossed her little head, and pouted her lips; but she took the box out of my hands, and carried it to the lamp nearest the further end of the car, after which she put it down upon the counter close beside the screen and I thought no more about it. The midnight ride was entertaining in the extreme, for the girl was full of young life and sauciness and merry humor. I can safely aver that I have never been to an evening's so-called entertainment, which, to me, was half so enjoyable. It added also to the zest and keen edge of the enjoyment to see her hasten to hide herself whenever I told her we were going to stop to take up the mails.

We had passed Watford, the last station at which we stopped, before I became alive to the recollection that our work was terribly behindhand. Miss Clifton also became grave, and sat at the end of the counter very quiet and subdued, as if her frolic were over, and it was possible she might find something to repent of in it. I had told her we should stop no more until we reached Euston-square station, in London; but to my surprise I felt our speed decreasing, and our train coming to a stand-still. I looked out and called to the guard in the car behind, who told me he supposed there was something on the line before us, and that we should go on in a minute or two. I turned my head, and gave this information to my fellow-clerk and Miss Clifton.

"Do you know were we are?" she asked, in a frightened tone.

"At Camden-town," I replied. She sprang hastily from her seat, and came towards me.

"I am close to my friend's house here," she said, "so it is a lucky thing for me. It is not five minutes' walk from the station. I will say good by to you now, Mr. Wilcox, and I thank you a thousand times for your kindness."

She seemed flurried, and she held out both her little hands to me in an appealing kind of way, as if she were afraid of my detaining her against her will. I took them both into mine, pressing them with rather more ardor than was quite necessary.

"I do not like you to go alone at this hour," I said, "but there is no help for it. It has been a delightful time to me. Will you allow me to call upon you to-morrow morning early, for I leave London at 10.30; or on Wednesday, when I shall be in town again?"

"O," she answered, hanging her head, "I dont know. I'll write and tell mamma how kind you have been, and, and—but I must go, Mr. Wilcox."

"I don't like your going alone," I repeated.

"O, I know the way perfectly," she said, in the same flurried manner, "perfectly, thank you. And it is close at hand. Good by!"

She jumped lightly out of the carriage, and the train started on again at the same instant. We were busy enough, as you may suppose. In five minutes more we should be in Euston-square, and there was nearly fifteen minutes' work still to be done. Spite of the enjoyment he had afforded me, I mentally anathematized Mr. Huntingdon and his departure from ordinary rules, and, trusting Miss Clifton forcibly out of my thoughts, I set to work with a will, gathered up the registered letters for London, tied them into a bundle with the paper bill, and then turned to the corner of the counter for the despatch-box.

You have guessed already my cursed misfortune. The Premier's despatch-box was not there. For the first minute or so I was in nowise alarmed, and merely looked round, upon the floor, under the bags, into the boxes, into any place into which it could have fallen or been deposited. We reached Euston-square while I was searching, and losing more and more of my composure every instant. Tom Morville joined me in my quest, and felt every hig which had been made up and sealed. The box was no small article which could go into little compass; it was certainly twelve inches long, and more than that in girth. But it turned up nowhere. I never felt fearer, fainting than at that moment.

"Could Miss Clifton have carried it off?" suggested Tom Morville.

"No," I said, indignantly but thoughtfully, "she could n't have carried off such a bulky thing as that, without our seeing it. It would not go into one of our pockets, Tom, and she wore a tight-fitting jacket that would not conceal anything."

"No, she can't have it," presented Tom. "Then it must be somewhere about." We searched again and again, turning over everything in the car, but without success. The Premier's despatch-box had gone, and all we could do at first was to stand and stare at one another. Our trance of blank dismay was of short duration, for the car was assailed by the mail messengers from the General Post Office, who were waiting for our charge. In a stupor of bewilderment we completed our work, and delivered up the mails; then once more we confronted one another with pale faces, frightened out of our seven-senses. All the scrapes we had ever been in (and we had had our usual share of errors and blunders) faded into utter insignificance compared with this. My eye fell upon Mr. Huntindon's order lying among some scraps of waste paper on the floor, and I picked it up, and put it carefully, with its official envelope, into my pocket.

"We can't stay here," said Tom. The porters were looking in inquisitively: we were seldom so long in quitting our empty car.

"No," I replied, a sudden gleam of sense darting across the blank bewilderment of my brain; "No, we must go to head-quarters at once, and make a clean breast of it. This is no private business, Tom."

We made one more ineffectual search, and then we hailed a cab and drove as hard as we could to the General Post-office. The secretary of the Post-office was not there, of course, but we obtained the address of his residence in one of the suburbs, four or five miles from the City, and we told no one of our misfortune, my idea being that the fewer who were made accquainted with the loss the better. My judgement was in the right there,

We had to knock up the household of the secretary,—a formidable personage with whom I had never been brought into contact before,—and in a short time we were holding a strictly private and confidental interview with him, by the glimmer of a solitary candle, just serving to light up his severe face, which changed its expression several times as I narrated the calamity. It was too stupendous for rebuke, and I fancied his eyes softened with something like commiseration as he gazed upon us. After a short interval of deliberation, he announced his intention of accompanying us to the residence of the Secretary of State; and in a few minutes we were driving back again to the opposite extremity of London. It was not far off the hour for the morning delivery of letters when we reached our destination; but the atmosphere was yellow with fog, and we could see nothing as we passed along in almost utter silence, for neither of us ventured to speak, and the secretary only made a brief remark now and then. We drove up to some dwelling enveloped in fog, and we were left in the cab for nearly half an hour, while our secretary went in. At the end of that time we were summoned to an apartment where there was seated at a large desk a small spare man, with a great head, and eyes deeply sunk under the brows. There was no form of introduction, of course, and we could only guess who he might be; but we were requested to repeat our statement, and a few shrewd questionss were put to us by the stranger. We were eager to put him in possession of everything we knew; but that was little beyond the fact that the despatch-box was lost.

"That young person must have taken it," he said.

"She could not sir," I answered, positively, but deferentially. "She wore the tightest-fitting pelisse I ever saw, and she gave me both her hands when she said good by. She could not possibly have it concealed about her. It would not go into my pocket."

"How did she come to travel up with you in the car, sir?" he asked, severely.

I gave him for answer the order signed by Mr. Huntingdon. He and our secretary scanned it closely.

"It is Huntingdon's siguature, without doubt," said the latter. "I could swear to it anywhere. This is an extraordinary circumstance!"

It was an extraordinary circumstance. The two retired into an adjoining room, where they staid for another half-hour, and when they returned to us their faces still bore an aspect of grave perplexity.

Mr. Wilcox and Mr. Morville," said our secretary, "it is expedient that this affair should be kept inviolably secret. You must even be careful not to hint that you hold any secret. You did well not to announce your loss at the Post-office; and I shall cause it to be understood that you had instructions to take the despatch-box direct to its destination. Your business now is to find the young woman, and return with her not later than six o'clock this afternoon to my office at the General Post-office. What other steps we think it requisite to take, you need know nothing about; the less you know, the better for yourselves."

Another gleam of commiseration in his official eye made our hearts sink within us. We departed promptly, and, with that instinct of wisdom, which at times dictates infallibly what course we should pursue, we decided our line of action. Tom Morville was to go down to Camden-town, and inquire at every house for Miss Clifton, while I—there would be just time for it—was to run down to Eaton by train, and obtain her exact address from her parents. We agreed to meet at the General Post-office at half past five if I could possibly reach it by that time; but in any case Tom was to report himself to the secretary, and account for my absence.

When I arrived at the station at Eaton, I found that I had only forty-five minutes before the up-train went by. The town was nearly a mile away, but I made all the haste I could to reach it. I was not surprised to find the post-office in connection with a bookseller's shop, and I saw a pleasant, elderly lady seated behind the counter, while a tall, dark-haired girl was sitting at some work a little out of sight. I introduced myself at once.

"I am Frank Wilcox, of the railway post-office, and I have just run down to Eaton to obtain some information from you."

"Certainly. We know you well by name," was the reply, given in a cordial manner, which was particularly pleasant to me.

"Will you be so good as give me the address of Miss Anne Clifton in Camden-town?" I said.

"Miss Anne Clifton?" ejaculated the lady.

"Yes. Your daughter, I presume. When went up to London last night."

"I have no daughter Anne," she said. "I am Anne Clifton; and my daughters are named Mary and Susan. This is my daughter Mary."

The tall dark-haired girl had left her seat, and now stood beside her mother. Certainly she was very unlike the small golden-haired coquette who had travelled up to London with me as Anne Clifton.

"Madam," I said, scarcely able to speak, "is your other daughter a slender little creature, exactly the reverse of this young lady?"

"No," she answered, laughing; "Susan is both taller and darker than Mary. Call Susan, my dear."

In a few seconds Miss Susan made her appearance, and I had the three before me,—A. Clifton, S. Clifton, and M. Clifton. There was no other girl in the family; and when I described the young lady who had travelled under their name, they could not think of any one in the town—it was a small one—who answered my description, or who had gone on a visit to London. I had no time to spare, and I hurried back to the station, just catching the train as it left the platform.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO.

If any of your patrons, or any other man, feel disposed to find fault with the liberal distribution of snow and ice during the last sixty days, it must be owing, in my judgment, entirely to a distaste for winter sports. To be sure, everybody cannot skate, but everybody can try, and while some, by perseverance, become perfect masters of the situation, others are disgusted and surfeited with the thumps and bumps inflicted on the head and angles, and go ashore fully satisfied that they have "enough pork for a shilling." Again, there are those who cannot appreciate the "tintinnabulation that so musically wells from the bells, bells, bells," when folks go out a sleighing. Cold noses, cold feet and cold fingers are more dreaded by them, than flood, fire or famine, and the idea of a tip-over and douche into a snow bank almost causes their eyes to start like stars from their spheres.

I must admit that skating is not one of my accomplishments. Each succeeding attempt to perfect myself in this branch of high art, convinced me that if I expected to locomote safely on the ice, I must wear my skates elsewhere than on my feet, so I never graduated; but as for sleighing, I love it dearly. How it delights me to sit behind a mettlesome pair of steeds, as they almost fly over the snow, with good company, and well wrapped up, and to > Hear the sledges with their bells, silver bells,

> What a world of merriment their melody foretells.
> As they tinkle tinkle, tinkle,
> In the icy air."

hy Jove, it is glorious, and can only be compared to a sail in a taut yacht, as she scuds before a free wind.

The last storm, however, was a little too much of a good thing. It laid an embargo on wheels and runners, and fastened me up in an out-of-the-way place, (where, judging from the fare, Lent and fast days alternate perpetually—) and made me break an engagement, which I know sadly disappointed two persons at least, and slightly vinegar'd my temper, but this unusual weakness I attribute entirely to smoked herring and baked beans, the tri-daily subsistence of the only "Travelers' Rest" in the locality; nor was my condition improved much by sleeping in a frightfully cold room, sandwiched between two monster feather beds, upon which, judging from the aroma, the winds of heaven had not been permitted to blow since the fall of Fort Sumpter, for the infernal heat of the feather oven drove me out, and the oippling and eager air drove me back, and I spent the entire night in freezing and thawing. Bulwer makes Claude Melnotte say, "Joy cometh with the morning"—the idea must have been suggested to the distinguished author by going through the same ordeal I did. I left the place very early in the morning on horseback, as the road was six miles distant (for I would have preferred death in a snowdrift, to remaining there another day), which I succeeded in reaching, but I was obliged to lead my horse half the way through snow banks deep enough to take in horse and rider, unless their weight was divided. I rejoiced with exceeding great joy when the station loomed up, and putting the horse in charge of the station keeper, as per instructions, I hurried to an invitingl hotel close by, where I meekly ordered breakfast for two, and I assure you I acted worthy of the occasion, to which, I am confident, a somewhat astonished Milesian servant girl could testify. Upon inquiring, I learned no train from either direction had passed, and rumor had it that none would be able to run during the day, so I philosophically contented myself, after my festive repast by taking a seat at one of the parlor windows and gazing out over the pale cold landscape at the grotesque and weird shapes the fierce winds of the day before, had quaintly and fantastically modeled out of the snow. I was thus occupied for some time, when my attention was attracted by the entrance of a lady of stately appearance garbed in sables, holding by the hand a beautiful little girl apparently about ten years old. She approached and sat down so close, as to slightly disconcert me, for I am naturally very bashful and the blood flew to my face until the deep red suffused it, but I soon recovered myself, and after an effective clearing of the throat, I felt entirely competent to venture a remark, which, singular as it may appear, bore some relation to the prevailing weather. This oral effort broke the ice, and we were soon engaged in a social chat. Before she left I learned from her that a near relative of hers was a Route Agent, and that this was his week off duty, but he felt so much solicitude about the mail service on his route on account of the confusion and detention of railway trains, that he had gone to render all the assistance in his power to help to secure the safe y and despatch of mail mattar—I confess this information somewhat astonished me, for from what little I have heard and know, a pretty fair proportion of post office officials are decidedly averse to the performance of extra official duties. Route Agents there are who do not even devote the time allotted them to do duty, but take advantage of a provision of the postal regulations, allowing them to use a substitute under certain circumstances, which they interpret to mean when they please, or all the time, as the case may be, without the knowledge or consent of anybody. Of course it is not to be expected that one of the non-commissioned should be familiar with the complex duties of traveling post-offices, but it strikes me that a man who absents himself without good and sufficient reason, and confides his trust to a substitute who is perhaps both inefficient and unworn, is totally unworthy, and should be weeded out, as a warning to neophytes, and as a compliment to the good and faithful. Postmasters along some routes ought to know when the proper agent is on duty and when he is not; but in some instances the changes are so frequent, that there is no possibility of forming an acquaintance, or else there are so many personal friends of the agent in the car that it appears almost like a trespass on his part to speak familiarly, or to throw his mail into the car where there is danger of hitting some one in the crowd, or of breaking up a social party. And just here I would like to ask: is it possible for a route agent to do his work properly, safely, and correctly with friends to the right of him, friends to the left of him, and friends in his rear, and all jabbering away like paroquets? I need not wait for a reply—echo answers promptly, emphatically and loud enough to be heard all over—"No." The new law giving increased compensation is highly creditable to its orginator, and it is to be hoped in its application, such discrimination will be used, as to prevent any but the deserving from participating in its benefits. The Route Agent who left his perhaps cozy home to perform extra duty is only one of many, possibly, who would have done the same thing, but I cannot help but think that any man who takes such deep interest in the mail service, under such circumstances, whether he belongs in a post-office, or a post-office car, is entitled to the highest consideration of the Department, and the gratitude of the public, and his opposite, the opposite.

POST OFFICE INSPECTORS OFFICE,
Montreal, January 19, 1867

To the Editor of of the U. S. Mail. Dear Sir: I learn through your columns of the death of Mr. GEORGE KELLINGER, of the New York Post-office. Whilst his confreres have so fittingly expressed their feelings on the loss of this estimable gentleman, I would beg to be allowed to say that there are Post-office officials also in Canada by whom Mr. Kellinger's untimely decease is much lamented. By virtue of his position in the Foreign office Branch, the agents of the Canadian Department in charge of British Mails had, for many years, been accustomed to be brought into personal relations with Mr. Kellinger, and I have long known that these representatives of our Department always received from the gentleman who has now passed away a pleasant and kindly co-operation in the performance of their duties.

Yours very respectfully
ENWIN F. KING.
Post-office Inspector.

Medals to Discharged West Virginia Soldiers.

The following Resolution, having been passed by Congress and approved by President, is now a law. The medals referred to, when enclosed in envelopes bearing the frank of the Adjutant General of the State of West Virginia, will be allowed to pass free through the mails.

Be it Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: That the Adjutant General of the State of West Virginia is hereby authorized to distribute through the mails, free of postage, to the honorably discharged soldiers of West Virginia, and to the relatives and friends of those who were killed or died of wounds or disease while in the service, certain medals furnished by the Legislature of that State, and in such case the envelope enclosing the same shall be franked by such Adjutant General in the mode prescribed by the Postmaster General.

Approved, January 14, 1867.

The New Registry System.

The Postmaster General has caused to be prepared, and will soon issue to Postmasters, new Regulations concerning the registration of valuable letters. These regulations embody important changes in the present mode of registration, and will, it is believed, render the system much more effective and satisfactory than it has been heretofore. The plan contemplated by the new Regulations is as follows:

All post offices are to be supplied by the Department with envelopes of a peculiar character and appearance, called "Registered Package Envelopes." These are of large size, made of stout Manilla peper, and marked with two broad red stripes passing lengthwise across the upper and lower portions of the face and back, leaving the intervening space for the address, and also with proper spaces for postmarks and numbers. The word "REGISTERED" appears in lerge letters on the face. All registered letters, when mailed, must be enclosed in one of these "Registered Package Envelopes" by the mailing postmaster, and the envelope postmarked and numbered. These envelopes are in all cases to be mailed without wrapping or tying.

Registered letters are never to be sent "direct" when a Distributing Post Office intervenes between the mailing office and the office of destination, (except in the case of offices which exchange through brass locked ponches,) whether going within the state where mailed or not. No attention is to be paid to any request to "mail direct" where to do so would involve neglect of this regulation.

The registered letter bill and return bill are to be sent from the mailing office together, and in the same mail which conveys the registered letter or letters to which they refer. The bills to be enclosed in the usual franked envelope, directed to the P. M. at the office to which the registered letters are to be sent, and placed among the ordinary letters.

At every post office the P. M. or at least one clerk must be at all times prepared to make affidavit that any registered letter mailed there, and concerning which inquiry is made by a special agent or other officer, was properly enclosed in a "registered package envelope" placed in a locked pouch, and sent forward by the proper route.

At every post office the P. M. or at least one trusty clerk must be present at the opening of every arriving mail pouch, and take charge of all "registered package envelopes" which may be contained therein, keeping a record of their numbers, postmarks and addresses. Postmasters at separating offices are to be required to keep a record of the numbers, postmarks and addresses, all registered package envelopes passing through their offices, and also of all registered packages of postage stamps and stamped envelopes. Route Agents and Railway P. O. Clerks are required to keep a similer record, and to obtain receipts for all registered matter from the person to whom it is transferred by them, in all cases where practicable. Proper books and blanks for keeping these records will be furnished to all route agents, railway P. O. clerks and Postmasters at separating offices, and at all offices where pouches containing matter for other offices are opened.

The above are the principal features of the new registry system. Full instructions, with the necessary blenks, registered package envelopes, &c., will be issued by the Department at an early day. Until official notice is given of the time for the new regulations to go into operation, postmasters will of course continue to register according to the plan heretofore in use. We urge upon all postmasters, in advance, however, the necessity of a strict and careful adherence to the requirements of the new regulations when they shall appear. It is the intention of the Department to hold all postmasters, route-agents, &c., to a rigid accountability in this matter. The regulations are easily understood, and ignorance will not, therefore, be considered any excuse for their violation or neglect, which will be regarded as a serious offence, rendering the delinquent liable to removal from office. It is to be hoped, however, that all connected with the service will carefully study and follow these regulations, which, if properly carried out, will, we believe, render the American registry system superior to that adopted by the postal department of any other country.

The Ethics of Advertising.

If the proprietor of a swindling "gift enterprise," a mock-auction shop or a faro-bank were to make a proposition to the editors or publishers of Fiddler's Weekly, or the Daily Triumvir, to the effect that those eminently respectable individuals should, for a large pecuniary consideration, stand all day at the entrance to his establisbment and solicit the passers-by to enter and be fleeced, nobody can entertain any doubt as to the manner in which so impudent an offer would be received. The sanctum of the editor or the counting room of the publisher would ring with loudest indignation at the insult. "Be off, thou rascal! Depart, thou graceless scamp! How darest thou approach us with so infamous proposal? Is a respectable journalist a dog that he should do this thing? Knowest thou not thet we are the advance guard of the army of Progress—the chroniclers and beralds of Civilization? And dost thou think, oh brazen caitiff, to hire us as touters and stool-pigeons to aid thy cozening tricks? Vanish! ere we summon our bootmaker's handiwork to assist thine exit, or even a worse thing come upon thee!"

And very meet and right this outburst of virtuous anger would be. The insolent varlet would richly deserve it—and more. But is there absolutely no excuse for his conduct—can no shadow of apology be found for him? "Let's pray for the puir De'il," said a kindly old Scot et a religious meeting during which every hopeful snbject of prayer had already been mentioned: "Let's pray for the puir De'il—nachody prays for the puir De'il." The swindler, like the "puin De'il," is the enemy of the human race—few or none pray for, while countless thousands curse him; and we must admit that he is worthy of all execration. Bnt peradventure a good word may be said even for him, in this matter. Let us try:

The swindler is not usually a person in whom the intellectual and moral qualities bave been largely developed. Phrenologically speaking, certain of his organs—as Acquisitiveness, Caution, Secretiveness—are abnormally large, but accompanied by a total absence of Benevolence, Conscientiousness and Reverence. He is no transcendentalist—he "don't see" the Good, the True, the Beautiful, nor the Ideal—though spelled with the biggest of capital letters. He understands, and believes in, substantial, tangible things; and especially does he believe in money—or, as he would probably express it, in "stamps"—and in their power of procuring whatever he may need either for the satisfaction of his personal wants or to assist bim in "beating the flats," which is his term for cheating credulous members of society. His moral sense is of course of the bluntest; he is incapable of making nice distinctions in matters of ethics, or of distinguishing that shadowy line which dividides respectable from disreputable complicity in roguery. And so, doubtless, in his coarse, practical way, he bas, before visiting the office of Fiddler's Weekly or of the Daily Triumvir for the purpose of making the offensive proposition we have supposed above, argued to himself somewhat thus, though probably in different language: "The editors and proprietors of these highly respectable sheets are, I perceive, willing, for a cash consideration, to ellow their columns to be made use of by dishonest persons for the purpose of inserting therein false and delusive statements (in the form of advertisements) concerning certain lotteries—otherwise known as 'gift enterprises,' 'prize concerts,' etc., etc., and other villainous schemes, to the end that the subscribers and readers of the said highly respectable sheets may be cheated, plundered, swindled, hnmbugged, defranded and robbed—the editors and proprietors aforesaid well knowing that such statements (in the form of advertisements) are false and delusive, and that their object is the cheating, plundering, etc., of their said subscribers and readers. Now, while I have no doubt that these gentlemen—the editors and proprietors before mentioned—have in some wey succeeded in proving to themselves and satisfying their—what's-his-name?—consciences—that, though they are thus hired and take wages for printing and circulating a large number of lies, concocted with the object of dishonestly obtaining other people's money, they can in no way be held morally responsible for the consequences of such an ect, or be justly considered as 'pals' or accomplices in the thefts which they thus assist in committing—though I have no doubt of this, yet it occurs to me thet, since they are willing to do this, for hire and wages, they may be willing to go just a little further (of course being well paid for it) in the same direction, and give me their personnl assistance in a business way by attending at the entrance of my faro bank or bogus lottery shop, and urging upon gentlemen from the country who may chance to be passing, the advantages of engaging in combat with the tiger—represeuting it as a harmless and healthful as well as profitable recreation—or the certainty of drewing a fet prize in my 'gift enterprise' by investing in tickets for the same. Such an arrangement would be of mutuel advantage; and though the popular prejudice against such an occupation is rather strong, yet I think I mey venture to propose it to those who ere willing to engage in what appears to me to be a very similar business. At all events, I'll try it."

But it is dangerous work, writing such sophistries as these, even though put into the mouth of an imaginary individual. When we began, it was with the full intention of completely demolishing the rascal's attempt to justify his audacious proceeding—to turn his specious arguments inside out by showing how an editor or proprietor who knowingly permits his newspapers to be made use of by unprincipled traders upon the credulity of its readers to further their schemes of fraud, essentially differs, in a morel point of view, from the vulgar accomplice who engages the attention of a victim while the principal skilfully abstracts the watch or pocket-book; how absurd is the theory that e newspaper or its conductors should he held to any sort of responsibility for the consequences of printing advertisements of whatever nature in its columns, so long as they are paid for; in short what a great gulf of difference yawns between tweedle-dum and tweedle-dee: but we are obliged humbly to confess that the special pleading of the rogue we have quoted above has not been without its effect upon our own mind. Grave doubts begin to obtrude themselves, and will not be banished, whether the unscrupulous dog may not be more than half right, after all? And if he is, what follows? Are "all these honorable men" to be placed on a moral level with those odious "accessaries before the fact?" who figure in the indictments for larceny on file in the District Attorneys' offices? Like Frankenstein, we are affrighted by the spectre we have ourselves created. We must drop the subject ere we are "led into expressions which we might hereafter regret," and leave the argument of our friend the swindler to be answered by those whom it most nearly concerns.

DEATH OF SPECIAL AGENT WALLER.—We regret to be obliged to record the death of ABRAHAM BRADLEY WALLER, Esq., which occurred on the 26th ult., at his residence near Newark, Delaware, after a lingering illness. Mr. Waller had for many years most ably filled the office of Special Agent of the Post Office Department. At the time of his death he was in his 67th year, and he leaves a widow and seven children to mourn the loss of a most devoted and affectionate husband and father. His funeral took place on the 30th ult., and was attended by many gentlemen connected with the Department, and a large number of other friends. In our next we hope to publish a more extended notice of the character and services of the deceased, than we are able to print at this time.

[Subscribers will greatly oblige us, and often save time and trouble, if they will, before sending us inquiries to be answered in this column, consult the various standing articles in the Mail under the heads of "Miscellaneous Information," "Domestic Postages," &c., &c., for information on the subject in regard to which they are in doubt. we receive a great number of questions, answers to which could readily be found by attending to this request.]

Registered Letter Receipts.—A. P., P——, Kan.—It is not necessary to state in a registered letter receipt, the amount of money contained in a registered letter.

Mail Carriers.—A. G. R., H——, Mich.—A mail carrier can he compelled to carry the mail only at such times as are specified in his contract. Of course this does not apply to orders made by the Postmaster General, in accordance with the contract.

Letters addressed to a Post Office only.—B. R., R——, Ill.—Letters addressed o a post office only, as for instance "R— P. O., Ill.," are evidently intended to be opened at that office. Should it, however, prove that any such letters were incorrectly addressed, they should be enclosed to the proper person.

Claim Agent Franking to Paymaster General.—M McK, L—— G——, O.—See section 124 of Regulations of 1866, also, article on this subject in The Mail for September, 1866.

Return Registered Letter Bills, &c.—E. W. F., M—— M——, N. H.—1. Return registered letter bills need not be sent with the Quarterly Returns, but should be kept on file in the office for, at least, two years. 2. No separate account need at present be kept of Registered Letters sent and received, other than that required to be kept on the sheets furnished by the Department for that purpose. A new registry system will shortly be in operation.

Freedmen of Color holding office of Postmaster, &c.—T. J. H., I—— S——, Ga.—The restriction on persons of color carrying the mail has been removed, and we presume they are eligible for postmasterships.

Refusel to prepay full postega, &c.—G. E. P., R——, N. H.—1. If e person refuses to prepay full postage on a letter, you should refuse to receive it. The law does not contemplate allowing a person to knowingly partly prepay postage. 2. Wrap your letters, and send them to the D. P. O. through which they would first pass on the proper route to their destination.

Refolding Newspapers.—O. P. H., L——, N. Y.—Postmasters are expected to put all mail matter for box-holders, in the proper boxes, if possible. The obligation to refold newspapers in order to get them into boxes, is, however, scarcely one of Post Office Regulations; so long as e postmaster satisfies the public in the delivery of papers, it matters but little whether he refolds them or not.

Opening Letters not "exactly" addressed.—M. W., So. N——, Conn.—Some judgment should be used by postmasters in deciding whether a letter belongs to a party bearing a similar name to that on the letter. If, as is often the case, there is but little doubt that a mistake in a number or the spelling of a name has been made, the postmaster should request the party to open the letter in his presence. There is no authority whatever for a postmaster to open a letter not addressed to himself, unless there be such a request endorsed on the letter.

Postage on Regular Paper.—J. M. J., H——, Vt.—A subscriber who has paid yearly postage on a newspaper, need not pay a second time at another office to which he has ordered the publisher to send the paper to him. He should however exhibit a receipt for the postage to the postmaster.

Postage on Mechanics Tools.—P. M., P——, Fla.—You did right in collecting unpaid postage at letter rates, on a Mechanics tool, even though it was wrapped so yon could see what it was.

Additional Stamp on stamped Envelopes.—I. G., St. M——, Minn.—By putting an ordinary stamp on a stamped envelope, you do not destroy the value of the latter.

Postmaster charging himself with the amount of cancelled stamps.—M. G. C., T——, Tex.—Postmasters should not charge themselves with the amount of stamps cancelled, but with the amount of stamps received from the Department.

Commission for delivery of County Newspapers.—G. H. S., H——, N. Y.—No commission is now allowed for delivering County papers, the extract you send is wrong from beginning to end.

Correction of Error in Quarterly Returns.—O. S., A——, Wis.—The instructions for the "General Account" may be found in Chapter XXIV, page 106, of Regulations of 1859, and in Chapter XXXI, page 57, of Regulations of 1866. Both these chapters contain the section referred to.

Dead Letters.

Letters not addressed, or so badly addressed that their destination cannot be known.

Letters misdirected to places where there are no post offices.

Only such letters as are herein described are, when deposited in any post office, to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office; all others must be dispatched to their destination, charged with the amount of unpaid postage.

When unmailable letters are sent to the Dead Letter Office, the specific reason therefor must be endorsed upon the envelope of each.

These instructions will be strictly followed at all post offices.

For more full instructions relating to dead letters, advertising letters, &c., examins carefully Chap. 35, Regulations of 1866, and Sections 1 and 2, Act of June 12, 1866.

RULE FOR RATING LETTERS TO GREAT BRITAIN, &C.

The attention of postmasters is particularly called to the mode of rating postags upon letters exchanged in the mails between this country and the United Kingdom, which differs only in the rats, and not, as herotofore, in the weight or standard. The maximum standard weight is now half an onnse, and the rate is twenty-four cents; postege to Great Britain and Ireland, therefors, is as follows, viz.:

One rate (24 cents) for a single letter not exceeding ½ oz. in weight.

Two rates (48 cents) when over ½, hnt not exceeding 1 ounce.

Three rates (72 cents) when over 1, but not exceeding 1½ ounces, &c., &c.

Thus, a letter to Great Britain, weighing 4½ ounces, shonld he paid $2.16, being chargeable with nine rates. All part paid letters to foreign countries are treated as wholly unpaid, and the amount paid lost to the sender.

Letters to forsign countries, where prepaymen of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid ars sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opensd and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no donbt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can he registered in the United States for Great Britein and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Anstrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore, decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussiau closed mail, and to Canada, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postel Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents eaoh, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must hs mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postege on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents, per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must he prepsid or none. Part prepaymcnts ars not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United Stetes; hnt it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all posteges due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prnssia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. This amount to he collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, ths difference should he entered in the account of Maile Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Nswepapers of small size, issued lese frequently than ones a week, may be sent in packages to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapere and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishere, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to he prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containng a fictitioue statament thereof, muet not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of news papers, magazines and periodicals to regular subscribers sent via Overland Mail, is to be charged at letter postage rates.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in wsight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handhills and poeters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, hlanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample carde, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cnttings, bulbs, roots, and scions,) the postage to be pre-paid by stemps, is, on one package to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d Instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking out ths word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows—"The weight of packages of seeds, cnttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at lettar rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printad matter, and all other mail matter except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cnttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except npon the separate payment of postege npon each separate matter at the established rates.

Exchange newspapers and periodicals cannot be remailed without being chargeahls with postage.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries hordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collectad on delivery at the prepaid rata. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular snbscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at ths delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (except bills and receipts for subscription) in, or to write or print anything, after its publication, npon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, is illegal, and subjects such printed matter, and ths entire package of which it is a part, to letter postage.

Any word or communication, whether by printing, writing, marks or signs, npon the cover or wrapper of a newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the person to whom it is to he sent, and the date when snbscription expires, subjects the package to letter postage.

It is in exact and full accordance with the requisitions of Postal Law, and renders compliance with the regulations of the Department in regard to these accounts, and their Qnarterly Return, easy, certain, and with little comparative cost of time and labor.

The hlank forms are on folio sheets of the nsual size of Post Office blanke, and are arranged to embrace a period of four years.

From ten to fifteen sheets are sufficient to last that period for offices of the Fifth and Fourth classes, and will be sent together with a copy of the explanations, directions and examples, by mail, post paid, as follows:

UNITED STATES MAIL

AND

POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. VII, No. 6. NEW YORK, MARCH, 1867. WHOLE No. 78.

THE [illegible]KELLING POST-OFFICE.

(Concluded.)

At the appointed hour I met Morville at the General [illegible]fice; and threading the long passages of [illegible]ecretary's offices, we at lenght found ourselves anxiously waiting in an anteroom, until we were called into his presence. Morville had discovered nothing, except that the porters and policemen at Camden-town station had seen a young lady pass out last night, attended by a swarthy man who looked like a foreigner, and carried a small black portmanteau.

I scarcely know how long we waited. It might have been years; for I was conscious of an ever-increasing difficulty in commanding my thoughts, or fixing them upon the subject which had engrossed them all day. I had not tasted food for twenty four hours, nor closed my eyes for thirty-six. while, during the whole of the time, my nervous system had been on full strain.

Presently the summons came, and I was ushered, first, into the inner apartment. There sat five gentlemen round a table, which was strewed with a number of documents There were the Secretary of State, whom we had seen in the morning, our secretary, and Mr. Huntingdon; the fourth was a fine-looking man, whom I afterwards knew to be the Premier; the fifth I recognized as our great chief, the Postmaster General. I was an august assemblage to me, and I however; but my head was dizzy, and my throat parched.

"Mr. Wilcox," said our secretary, "you will hear these gentlemen again the circumstances of the loss you reported to me this morning."

I laid my hand upon the back of a chair to steady myself, and went through the narration for the third time, passing over sundry remarks made by myself to the young lady. That done, I added the account of my expedition to Eaton, and the certainty at which I had arrived that my fellow-traveller was not the person she represented herself to be. After which, I inquired with indescribable anxiety if Mr. Huntingdon's order were a forgery?

"I cannot tell, Mr. Wilcox," said that gentleman, taking the order into his hands, and regarding it with an air of extreme perplexity. "I could have sworn it was mine, had it been attached to any other document. I think Forbes's handwriting is not so well imitated. But it is the very ink I use, and mine is a peculiar signature."

It was a very peculiar and old-fashioned signature, with a flourish underneath it not unlike a wine-handle, with the lash caught round it in the middle; but that did not make it the more difficult to forge. as I humbly suggested. Mr. Huntingdon wrote his name upon a piece of paper, and two or three of the gentlemen tried to imitate the flourish, but vainly. They gave it up with a smile upon their grave faces.

"You have been careful not to let a hint of this matter drop from you, Mr. Wilcox?" said the Postmaster-General.

"Not a syllable, my lord," I answered.

"It is imperatively necessary that the secret should be kept. You would be removed from the temptation of telling it, if you had an appointment in some office abroad. The packet-agency at Alexandria, Egypt, is vacant, and I will have you appointed to it at once."

It would be a good advance from my present situation, and would doubtless prove a stepping-stone to other and better appointments; but I had a mother living at Fazeley, bedridden and paralytic, who had no pleasure in existence, except having me to dwell under the same roof with her. My head was growing more and more dizzy, and a strange vagueness was creeping over me.

"Gentlemen," I muttered, "I have a bedridden mother whom I cannot leave. I was not to blame, gentlemen." I fancied there was a stir and movement at the table, but my eyes were dim, and in another second I had lost consciousness.

When I came to myself, in two or three minutes, I found that Mr. Huntingdon was kneeling on the floor beside me, supporting my head, while our secretary held a glass of wine to my lips. I rallied as quickly as possible, and staggered to my feet; but the two gentlemen placed me in the chair against which I had been leaning, and insisted upon my finishing the wine before I tried to speak.

"I have not tasted food all day," I said, faintly.

"Then, my good fellow, you shall go home immediately," said the Postmaster-General; "but be on your guard; Not a word of this must escape you. Are you a married man?"

"No, my lord," I answered.

"So much the better," he added, smiling. "You can keep a secret from your mother, I dare, say. We rely upon your honor."

The secretary then rang a bell, and I was committed to the charge of the messenger who answered it; and in a few minutes I was being conveyed in a cab to my London lodgings. A week afterwards, Tom Morville was sent out to a post-office in Canada, where he settled down, married, and is still living, perfectly satisfied with his position, as he occasionally informs me by letter. For myself, I remained, as I desired, in my old post as travelling-clerk until the death of my mother, which occured some ten or twelve months afterwards. I was then promoted to an appointment as a clerk in charge, upon the first vacancy.

The business of the clerke in charge is to take possession of any post-office in the kingdom, upon the death or resignation of the post-master, or when circumstances of suspicion cause his suspension from office. My new duties carried me three or four times into Mr. Huntingdon's district. Though that gentleman and I never exchanged a word with regard to the mysterious loss in which we had both had an innocent share, he distinguished me with peculiar favor, and more than once invited me to visit him at his own house. He lived alone, having but one daughter, who had married, somewhat against his will, one of his clerks,—the Mr. Forbes whose handwriting had been so successfully imitated in the official order presented to me by the self-styled Miss Anne Clifton. (By the way, I may here mention, though it has nothing to do with my story, that my acquaintance with the Cliftons had ripened into an intimacy, which resulted in my engagement and marriage to Mary.)

It would be beside my purpose to specify the precise number of years which elapsed before I was once again summoned to the secretary's private apartment, where I found him closeted with Mr. Huntingdon. Mr. Huntingdon shook hands with unofficial cordiality; and then the secretary proceeded to state the business on hand.

"Mr. Wilcox, you remember our offer to place you in office in Alexandria?" he said.

"Certainly, sir," I answered.

"It has been a troublesome office," he continued, almost pettishly. "We sent out Mr. Forbes only six months ago, on account of his health, which required a warmer climate, and now his medical man reports that his life is not worth three weeks' purchase."

Upon Mr. Huntingdon's face there rested an expression of profound anxiety; and as the secretary paused he addressed himself to me.

"Mr. Wilcox," he said, "I have been soliciting, as a personal favor, that you should be sent out to take charge of the packet agency, in order that my daughter may have some one at hand to befriend her, and manage her business affairs for her. You are not personally acquainted with her, but I know I can trust her with you."

"You may, Mr. Huntingdon," I said warmly. "I will do anything I can to aid Mrs. Forbes. When do you wish to start?"

"How soon can you be ready?" was the rejoinder.

"To-morrow morning."

I was not married then, and I anticipated no delay in setting off. Nor was there any. I travelled with the overland mail through France to Marseilles, embarked in a vessel for Alexandria, and in a few days from the time I first heard of my destination set foot in the office there. All the postal arrangements had fallen into considerable irregularity and confusion; for, as I was informed immediately on my arrival, Mr. Forbes had been in a dying condition for the last week, and of course the absence of a master had borne its usual results. I took formal possession of the office, and then, conducted by one of the clerks, I proceeded to the dwelling of the unfortunate postmaster and his no less unfortunate wife.

It would be out of place in this narrative to indulge in any traveller's tales about the strange place where I was so unexpectedly located. Suffice it to say, that the darkened, sultry room into which I was shown, on inquiring for Mrs. Forbes, was bare of furniture, and destitute of all those little tokens of refinement and taste which make our English parlors so pleasant to the eye. There was, however, a piano in one of the dark corners of the room, open, and with a sheet of music on it. While I waited for Mrs. Forbes' appearance, I strolled idly up to the piano to see what music it might be. The next moment my eye fell upon an antique red morocco work-box standing on the top of the piano,—a work-box evidently, for the lid was not closely shut, and a few threads of silk and cotton were hanging out of it. In a kind of dream,—for it was difficult to believe that the occurrence was a fact,—I carried the box to the darkened window, and there, plain in my sight, was the device scratched upon the leather: the revolutionary symbol of a heart with a dagger through it. I had found the Premier's despatch-box in the parlor of the packet-agent of Alexandria!

I stood for some minutes with that dream-like feeling upon me, gazing at the box in the dim obscure light. It could not be real! My fancy must be playing a trick upon me! But the sound of a light step—for, light as it was, I heard it distinctly as it approached the room—broke my trance, and I hastened to replace the box on the piano, and to stoop down as if examining the music, before the door opened. I had not sent in my name to Mrs. Forbes, for I did not suppose that she was acquainted with it, nor could she see me distinctly, as I stood in the gloom. But I could see her. She had the slight slender figure, the childlike face, and the fair hair of Miss Anne Clifton. She came quickly across the room, holding out both her hands in a childish, appealing manner.

"Oh!" she wailed, in a tone that went straight to my heart, "he is dead! He has just died!"

It was no time then to speak about the red morocco work-box. This little childish creature, who did not look a day older than when I had last seen her in my travelling post-office, was a widow in a strange land, far away from any friend save myself. I had brought her a letter from her father. The first duties that devolved upon me were those of her husband's interment, which had to take place immediately. Three or four weeks elapsed before I could, with any humanity, enter upon the investigation of her mysterious complicity in the daring theft practised on the government and the post-office.

I did not see the despatch-box again. In the midst of her new and vehement grief, Mrs. Forbes had the precaution to remove it before I was ushered again into the room where I had discovered it. I was at trouble to hit upon any plan by which to gain a second sight of it; but I was resolved that Mrs. Forbes should not leave Alexandria without giving me a full explanation. We were waiting for remittances and instructions from England, and in the mean time the violence of her grief abated, and she recovered a good share of her old buoyancy and loveliness, which had so delighted me on my first acquaintance with her. As her demands upon my sympathy weakened, my curiosity grew stronger, and at last mastered me. I carried with me a netted purse which required mending, and I asked her to catch up the broken meshes while I waited for it.

"I will tell your maid to bring your work-box," I said, going to the door and calling the servant. "Your mistress has a red morocco work-box," I said to her, as she answered my summons.

"Yes, sir," she replied.

"Where is it?"

"In her bedroom," she said.

"Mrs. Forbes wishes it brought here." I turned back into the room. Mrs. Forbes had gone deadly pale, but her eyes looked sullen, and her teeth were clenched under her lips with an expression of stubbornness. The maid brought the work-box. I walked, with it in my hands, up to the sofa where she was seated.

"You remember this mark?" I asked. "I think neither of us can ever forget it."

She did not answer by word, but there was a very intelligent gleam in her blue eyes.

"Now," I continued, softly, "I promised your father to befriend you, and I am not a man to forget a promise. But you must tell me the whole simple truth."

I was compelled to reason with her, and to urge her for some time. I confess I went so far as to remind her that there was an English consul at Alexandria, to whom I could resort. At last she opened her stubborn lips, and the whole story came out, mingled with sobs and showers of tears.

She had been in love with Alfred, she said, and they were too poor to marry, and papa would not hear of such a thing. She was always in want of money, she was kept so short; and they promised to give her such a great sum—a vast sum—five hundred pounds.

"But who bribed you?" I inquired.

A foreign gentleman who [illegible] she had met in London, called Monsieur Bonnard. It was a French name, but she was [illegible] sure that he was a Frenchman. He talked [illegible] her about her father being a surveyor in the post-office, and asked her a great number of questions. A few weeks after, she met him in their own town by accident,—she and Mr. Forbes; and Alfred had a long private talk with him, and they came to her, and told her she could help them very much. They asked her if she could be brave enough to carry off a little red box out of the travelling post-office, containing nothing but papers. After a while she consented. When she had confessed so much under compulsion, Mrs. Forbes seemed to take a pleasure in the narrative, and went on fluently.

"We required papa's signature to the order, and we did not know how to get it. Luckily he had a fit of the gout, and was very peevish; and I had to read over a lot of official papers to him, and then he signed them. One of the papers I read twice, and slipped the order into its place after the second reading. I thought I should have died with fright; but just then she was in great pain, and glad to get his work over. I made an excuse that I was going to visit my aunt at Beckby, but, instead of going there direct, we contrived to be at the station at Eaton a minute or two before the mail-train came up. I kept outside the station door till we heard the whistle, and just then the post man came running down the road and I followed him straight through the booking-office, and asked him to give you the order, which I put into his hand. He scarcely saw me I just caught a glimpse of Monsieur Bonnard's face through the window of the compartment next the car, when Alfred had gone. They had promised me that the train should stop at Camden-town if I could only keep your attention engaged until then. You know how I succeeded."

"But how did you dispose of the box?" I asked. "You could not have concealed it about you; that I am sure of."

"Ah," she said; "nothing was easier. Monsieur Bonnard had described the car to me, and you remember I put the box down at the end of the counter, close to the corner where I hid myself at every station. There was a door with a window in it, and I asked if I might have the window open, as the car was too warm for me. I believe Monsieur Bonnard could have taken it from me by only leaning through his window, but he preferred stepping out, and taking it from my hand, just as the train was leaving Watford.—on the far side of the carriages, you understand. It was the last station, and the train came to a stand at Camden-town. After all, the box was not out of your sight more than twenty minutes before you missed it. Monsieur Bonnard and I hurried out of the station, and Alfred followed us. The box was forced open,—the lock has never been mended, for it was a peculiar one,—and Monsieur Bonnard took possession of the papers. He left the box with me, after putting inside it a roll of notes. Alfred and I were married next morning, and I went back to my aunt's; but we did not tell papa of our marriage for three or four months. That is the story of my red morocco work box."

She smiled with the provoking mirthfulness of a mischievous child. There was one point still, on which my curiosity was unsatisfied.

"Did you know what the despatches were about?" I asked.

"O no!" she answered; "I never understood politics in the least. I knew nothing about them. Monsieur did not say a word; he did not even look at the papers while we were by. I would never, never, have taken a registered letter, or anything with money in it, you know. But all those papers could be written again quite easily. You must not think me a thief, Mr. Wilcox; there was nothing worth money among the papers."

"They were worth five hundred pounds to you," I said. "Did you ever see Bonnard again?"

"Never again," she replied. "He said he was going to return to his native country. I don't think Bonnard was his real name."

Most likely not, I thought; but I said no more to Mrs. Forbes. Once again I was involved in a great perplexity about this affair. It was clearly my duty to report the discovery at headquarters, but I shrank from doing so. One of the chief culprits was already gone to another judgment than that of man; several years had obliterated all traces of Monsieur Bonnard; and the only victim of justice would be this poor little dupe of the two greater criminals. At last I came to the conclusion to send the whole of the particulars to Mr. Huntingdon himself; and I wrote them to him, without remark or comment.

The answer that came to Mrs. Forbes and me in Alexandria was the announcement of Mr. Huntingdon's sudden death of some disease of the heart, on the day which I calculated would put him in possession of my communication. Mrs. Forbes was again overwhelmed with apparently heart-rending sorrow and remorse. The income left to her was something less than one hundred pounds a year. The secretary of the post-office, who had been a personal friend of the deceased gentleman, was his sole executor; and I received a letter from him, containing one for Mrs. Forbes, which recommended her, in terms not to be misunderstood, to fix upon some residence abroad, and not to return to England. She fancied she would like the seclusion and quiet of a convent; and I made arrangements for her to enter one in Malta, where she would still be under British protection. I left Alexandria myself on the arrival of another packet-agent; and on my return to London I had a private interview with the secretary. I found that there was no need to inform him of the circumstances I have related to you, as he had taken possession of all of Mr. Huntingdon's papers. In consideration of his ancient friendship, and of the escape of those who most merited punishment, he had come to the conclusion that it was quite as well to let bygones be bygones.

At the conclusion of the interview I delivered a message which Mrs. Forbes had emphatically intrusted to me.

"Mrs. Forbes wished me to impress upon your mind," I said, "that neither she nor Mr. Forbes would have been guilty of this misdemeanor if they had not been very much in love with one another, and very much in want of money."

"Ah!" replied the secretary, with a smile, "if Cleopatra's nose had been shorter, the fate of the world would have been different!"

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO.

My age is not tender, nor is my nature a delicate one by any means, but that ride through the snow-drifts, spoken of in my last letter, told seriously on my constitution and structure, and came pretty near playing hob with the nasal and pectoral functions thereof, and kept my eyeballs afloat for days in the ebb and flow of a sea of sympathetic tears. Ingoldsby describes one of his characters as being

> " Stout of limb,
> But his cough was short, and his eyes were dim;
> And he wore green "specs" with a tortoise-shell rim,

I would have answered to that description at any time within the last three weeks—but a quiet conscience, and the tender nursing of a cherished friend, has brought me round, and I will soon be able to go forth again. For I do love to travel: it throws me into such a variety of societies to which, happily, I can adapt myself; and being an elderly and benevolent-looking gentleman, I seldom fail to fall into desirable company. I am dignified with the grave, laugh with the gay, share sorrows with the sad, and crack jokes (sometimes) with the wicked. I receive mysterious secrets with the most confiding look, and give counsel with a magisterial air; not unfrequently I am made the umpire in domestic difficulties, (of course I am regarded as an old "pater-familias,") and my opinion is often asked in matters of patrimony and matrimony, and I invariably decide in a way to benefit all parties. Sometimes I feel like "hauling off and laying up in ordinary," but the desire to keep moving grows too strong to resist, and the old gentleman is soon on the wing again. And yet, I can hardly he persuaded that I am growing old, although when I look back, I miss many who, greener in their years, and as firm in their health, have gone to the "stilly land," and the recollection of their once familiar faces has become dim and faded.

Old Father Time hath dealt leniently with me, I must admit, and heaven and my good genius have shielded me more than once from death by flood and fire and steel. I have suffered from the baleful influences of a tropical climate; I have endured the blood-freezing blasts of the remote north; on the boundless prairies of the West I have slept many a night with nothing but the starry canopy for a covering, and, the whooping of Indians or the howling of wolves for my lullaby; and on the bosom of the mighty deep, I have stood on the quivering deck, when the sea, lashed to fury by the mad winds, has piled mountain waves above, and shrwed yawning gulfs beneath me; and on that same erewhile raving, boisterous ocean, I have been rocked to sleep as gently as maternal love sways to placid slumbers her cradled jewels. These experiences benefitted instead of injuring, and made me the mild and even-tempered man I am, and taught me to love my neighbor as myself, which I do regardless of sex.

I did not intend to let the current of my thoughts run exactly in this direction when I started, but every heart hath its confessional, and as the "pleasing rhetorick" of thy editorial eye suits me, I make yon my father confessor, and grow garrulous. I have no unpardonable sins to avow, no crimes to acknowledge, no cherished revenge to own, no very recent blighted hopes to weep over. I have had so far my share of life's vicissitudes; have enjoyed and suffered my full modicum of life's pleasures and life's annoyances. I have laughed where others would have wept, and have lived long enough to cultivate charity towards all; and to regard the vast multitudes of humanity as so many anxious travelers towards a common goal, in no particular one of whom I feel an interest above another, provided (and now comes my confession) they are not connected with post-offices. And just here, my mind reverts to my lost love-letter of years long gone, which at one blow, turned my life into one of single blessedness (?) and made me an uncompromising enemy to post-office carelessness, negligence and inefficiency. Had that letter reached its destination, I no doubt would have soon been one of the marriedest of men, and by the aid of a dutiful wife, become the dictatorial head of a house, or an unresisting Caudle. But the last link was broken, the last word was spoken, she thought I was jokin', and married another.

The office where my letter went astray was kept in a store where three or four clerks had access to the boxes, only one of whom was sworn. This was years ago, when post-offices were scarce, and common schools were scarcer, and when a good deal less official efficiency was expected; but the thing is worse now than it was then. Carelessness has kept pace with mental cultivation and increased postal facilities. I have no doubt you could to-day find very many post-offices kept in stores, where unsworn proprietors, clerks and customers equally divide the duties, if not the responsibilities; and if letters are not lost, or do not get astray, it is more by good luck than good management.

Many persons of means and influence seek and secure the appointment of postmaster, who have no idea of performing the duties, but merely to benefit some (reciprocating in some way) shopkeeper, who furnishes a nook in an out-of-the-way rear corner of his establishment, for the transaction of postal business. There is no doubt about it being a benefit, for every body goes to the post office, and many new customers are made by the judicious display of wares, temptingly spread out on either hand along the approach to the delivery-window, or door rather; but the trust is regarded as an important one, only from a mercenary point of view—"'Tis true, 'tis pity, pity 'tis, 'tis true." At some points where the business is very limited, there can be no objection to a post-office being kept in a store, if it is kept properly, and in strict accordance with official regulations; but, as a business man, I do not like to see important offices in such places; I think it's all wrong; but if such things must be, and drapers, and grocers, and druggists, and booksellers, and jewelers will insist upon being postmasters, or acting postmasters, let them for mercy's sake draw the charmed circle of official sanctity round the place devoted to government uses; and allow no one, no matter how near and dear to them, to cross the line, or to touch a thing inside, unless they are duly qualified, according to law, and gifted with intelligence enough to know the importance of the obligation imposed upon them; and let these offices be considered confessionals, where hopes and fears, joys and sorrows, wants and wishes can be told or imagined, without being echoed through the whispering galleries of the outside world. Broken hearts and broken hopes make food for themselves fast enough without the aid of officious caterers.

MONS. TONSON.

The Italian Post Office.

From Frances Power Cobbe's works on Italy we gather the following information concerning the recent improvements in postal matters in that country:

The postoffice service has been vastly improved and relieved from government espionage. In the "good old times" of Bomba and Bomhalino, at Rome, and throughout Italy generally, every difficulty that could be devised, short of absolute prohibition, was "prudently" laid in the way of epistolary correspondence. Railroad and postal facilities are among the most active of democratic agencies in these days, and his Holiness and the other despotic princes of Italy were wise in their generation in refusing to encourage them. Outside of the Papal States, everywhere throughout the kingdom of Italy, there are now abundance of offices and pillars for letters, letter-carriers, and the proper machinery of the post. Special conveniences are even given for the transmission of local newspapers by the issue of stamps worth only one centesimo (the fifth of a cent); the general postage throughout the kingdom for letters being fifteen centsimo. or a cent and a half. It is admitted, also, that persons losing letters have a right to make complaints—an immense step for Italy!—and the strictest engagements are given on the part of the government that all correspondence is sacred and free from examination.

But, with all these improvements, the postal system of Italy is still very far behind the English and American systems, both as regards rapidity of transmission and perfect safety of delivery. Our clerks could hardly, with impunity, fail to find a pile of letters that had been in the office for many weeks, or to destroy others for the sake of making a stamp album. They do so in Italy yet. It is rather desirable to be forewarned that a rare American stamp on your letter will probably ensure its being stopped at the post-office. Report says that the wives of certain postmasters in Italy have the richest albums in Europe.

"The General Account."

The subject which heads this article occasions much perplexity to Postmasters, and we do not think we can better occupy our space than by a few suggestions in regard to it.

The "General Account" is not even known by some, while by others it is confounded with the Quarterly Accnunt Current, and hence, in either case, any reference to it by the Department occasions a good deal of embarassment and perplexity. Like many another matter, it is very simple when understood. It is intended, as may be inferred by the name, to be an account of the general transactions of the office, for no specified time—in this respect being opposed to the Quarterly account, which embraces only certain accounts for the quarter for which it is rendered. The General Account may be said to take the place of the Ledger of the Merchant. It may be kept in a simple form, applicable to small offices, as follows:

Provide an ordinary Casb Book, with a dollar and cent column on eacb page; open your account by heading across the first two pages,—"A—— B——, P. M. nf X—— in acc't with P. O. Dep't." On the left hand page enter all sums due by you to the Department and not embraced by the various items of the Quarterly Account Current, and at the end of each quarter the balance due, as shown by the Quarterly Account Suppose, for instance, you have been notified that there was an error in a previous quarterly account, and that you owe the Department say $2.25. You are not allowed to enter this amount in your next quarterly account, but it must be entered on the left hand page on your "General Account," and may be done as follows: "To error in quarterly accouut for quarter ending———$2.25."—Suppose again yon have been instructed by the Department to collect a draft for $100.00 on some neighboring postmaster: when yon have collected this money, you enter the amnunt nn the debtor (left band) side of your General Account as follows: "To Am't of Draft on P. M. of ——, $100.00." These two items, with the balance shown to be due by your Quarterly Account, will show yon what you owe the Department. We now turn to the Creditor (right hand) side of the Accnunt. On this side yon enter all claims against, or payments on account of, the Department, not embraced in the items of theQuarterly account, and also all errors in your favor in a previous Quarterly acconnt. When you are called upon to pay over all moneys due by yon to the Department, yon have but to toot up both sides of this General Account, and the difference will show how much yon owe the Department. When yon pay this, enter the amount on the Creditor side of the Accnunt, and then your account will balance, and be settled np to that time. It must then commence again. In this way your General Account may run on an indefinite time, as yon are only to settle it when called upon by the Department. And it may incinde the balances shown to be due by more than one Quarterly Accnnnt Current. Bnt it must be distinctly understood, that the fact that yon have not been required to settle the General Account is no excuse for not promptly forwarding the entire Qnarterly Returns as soon after the end of a qnarter as possible.

CAUTION TO ROUTE AGENTS.—The recent abstraction of a package of letters from a mail car on the Reusallaer and Saratoga Railroad by some one who was permitted to ride therein—and for which offence a former employee of that road is now nnder arrest on suspicion of having committed the crime, it is to be hoped will act as a warning to Route Agents on all roads hereafter. The Mail Agent on this road is no more guilly of an infraction of a pnsitive and nnqualified order of the Department prohibiting any one but authorized persons from riding ln mail cars, than scores nf others on nther roads; and it may be as well to say to them briefly that this robbery (although it is surprising that such things bave not occured freqnently) must be notice enough to keep attentinn fixed on, and have respect paid to, Section 508, Chap. 43, P.O. Reg., and if not, our impression is that but one more order will be issued to offenders, and that will be to hand over their abused trust to more faithful and efficient gentlemen. Postmasters who may be acquainted with Route Agents to whom a hint nn this subject would be useful, will do well to call their attention to the facts mentioned above.

TO EX-POSTMASTERS.—Some of our nld subscribers, who are no longer connected with the postal service, and whose snbscription has expired, may still continne in receive the Mail, on account nf our not having been notified to stop it. Many Ex-P stmasters, still retaining their interest in postal matters, have renewed their subscriptions; but such of them as wish it discontinued will please notify us on receipt of this number, enclosing the amount now due.

☞ The mail coach from Denver was robbed on the 15th of January, near Living Spring, by a party of highwaymen, deserters from Fort Morgan, on Junction Station, and who were completely equipped for life nn the road.

Once upon a time, people in this country used to be very sensitive as to what was thought, said and written about us, our "institntions," habits and customs by the book and newspaper writers nt the "mother country." But that time has gone by, and we don't imagine that many among us of the present day feel called upon to get "rlled" on reading either the severest criticism nr the most condescending approval of things American which the British editor or author may see fit to write and publish. So we don't suppose any of our readers will "get mad" on reading this extract from that lofty nld tory publication, Blackwood's Magazine. One of its contributors, who appears to have recently honored this degenerate land with a visit, in an article discoursing of "American Women and Children," discloses to the "shuddering" contemplation ot the "respectable parents" nf Europe this dreadful picture of the dangerous confidence which American fathers and mothers seem to place ln the honor of their daughters:

The unmarried girl of nineteen or twenty, living with her father and mother, has as much freedom of locomotion, companionship, amusement, as her brother of the same age. She accepts invitations and pays visits on her own account, and does not think it at all necessary to ask permission of her elders. Sometimes she has the privilege of the latch-key if she stays out late at the theatre Still oftener she has the privilege, if she choses to exercise it, of her own private box or pigeon-hole at the post-office of the town where she resides, where she can have her letters addressed, and whither by a "Ladies' Entrance," where no profane male can intrude, she can resort when she pleases and unlock her box from the outside, and take away her letters without observation. The merchants, bankers, and lawyers of the town, for a small annual payment, have their private letter-boxes, and why not she? To young women at the susceptible age, only half educated, and whose favourite reading is the trashy novels that are reprinted from the English penny papers, or that appear for the first time in American periodicals of the same character—novels in which there cannnt be too much love, or seduction, or bigamy, or murder, tor the prevalent taste of a class—the post-office system offers a facility for clandestine correspondence which no respectable father or mother on the European side of the Atlantic would think of without a shudder, if it were proposed to give our young women a similar privilege. The young unmarried girls of Europe, living with their parents, can, if they earnestly set about it, carry on a secret correspondence with persons of the other sex, but they cannot do it easily. They must take the neighboring pastrycook or stationer into their confidence; but in America the confidence of no third party is necessary. If a boy can receive letters, why not a girl? The demos is of no sex; and young and old, men and women, fathers, mothers, and children, are all mashed and brazed in one mortar of republican equality.

In some countries "on the European side of the Atlantic" they manage these things better. Lovers (except "eligible parties" provided at the proper time by the judicious parent) are not obtainable through post office or other means, until after marriage.

The Foreign Mail.

ANOTHER WEEKLY MAIL DAY.—IMPORTANT TO MERCHANTS AND CORRESPONDENTS.—The Postoffice Department has made arrangements by which mails will be forwarded from this country to Europe and from Europe to the United States on one additional day of each week, on and after Tbursday, the 21st inst., when a vessel of the Bremen line will leave New York with the extra mail, and nn and after the 2d of April (Tuesday), when the new arrangement goes into effect, from Sonthampton, England. After the dates abovementioned, Thursday will be the regular sailing day of tbe Bremeu steamship line from New York, and on Tuesdays the vessels will touch at Southampton on their return.

This change will increase the number of Enropean mails to three every week—which makes the matter especially important to the shipping and importing interests of the country.

The Nortb German Lloyd (Bremen) line, throngb whose action this plan is carried into effect, is composed of new and excellent vessels all fast and safe, and now more than ever deserving of public confidence and support—especially since the change described was made by the company, as we are informed, at the solicitation of the United States government, against the apparent interest of the line in the carriage of passengers and freight.

☞ In the Bedford (Pa.) Inquirer we find recorded the death, on 1st of December last, of a veteran Mail Carrier named Jacob Graft at the advanced age of nearly ninety-nine years. The acconnt states tbat tbe deceased had been a resident of Somerset county for upwards of sixty years. He was the first man that carried a mail from Pbiladelphia to Pittsburg by this ronte, carying it on horseback from point to point, and consuming about two weeks in making a trip.

DUCKS AND DRAKES.—The "Ladies' Window" clerk at a post office in Vermont, hearing the usnal "rap rap" which announced the presence of an applicant for a letter, on going to the window, fonnd there a Mr. Drake. "Next window, If yon please, Mr. Drake: this department is exclusively for Ducks."

☞ FRANCIS AND LOUTREL'S Ink for Postmarking and Stamp-cancelling, which they advertise in another column, we know to be a good article, baving seen it in daily use for some years past.

LOOK OUT FOR THEM.—"Jason H. Tuttle, Bevans, N. J.," and "Clark, Webster & Co., 52 Broadway, New York," are swindlers, who are sending circnlars and tickets through the mails in relation to fraudulent "gift enterprises" and "drawings." Postmasters will do well to advise all persons who desire to mail or register letters, or send money orders to these rascals, to save their money fnr some better investment.

Answers to Correspondents.

[Subscribers will greatly oblige us, and often save time and trouble, if they will, before sending us inquiries to be answered in this column, consult the various standing articles in the Mail under the heads of "Miscellaneous Information," "Domestic Postages," &c., &c., for information on the subject in regard to which they are in doubt. we receive a great number of questions, answers to which could readily be found by attending to this request.]

Averaging the Amount of Sales of Stamps and Stamped Envelopes.—R. R. P., L——, Pa.—The amount of sales for one quarter should be taken as a basis, in ordering stamps, allowing a margin for increase of business.

Foreign papers containing writing.—N. W. R., R——, Pa.—Foreign papers, containing writing, should be charged with letter postage at the proper Foreign rates, and sent to the Dead Letter Office if not taken out.

Paying over moneys due the United States, &c.—L. P., H——, O.—If the order or draft requires you to pay the balance due on that quarter only, you should retain what may be due on previous quarters. Why no demands are made for the quarterly proceeds of your office we cannot say. Possibly the drafts have been issued but not presented.

Marking and Rating Stamps.—C. L. S., W. C——, N. Y.—Probably your letter was not received. Try again.

Letter endorsed "Burn this if not called for in 10 days," &c.—D. H. S., M——, Ill.—A postmaster has no right to burn a letter, even if endorsed as above. 2. If a short-paid letter comes to your office unbilled, there is no objection to putting on it a sufficient amount in stamps, cancelling them, and making no entry in the Account of Undercharges. 3. The change of location in a postoffice cannot be determined by ballot.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter in the Territories.—S. S., T. P——, Col.—The rate of letter postage on transient printed matter applies to all the territory included between the western boundary of Kansas and the eastern boundary of California. No particular mail route is specified either in the Law (Sec. 259) or Regulation (Sec. 229) on the subject. All such matter carried by mail between those points is chargeable with letter rates.

Franking to a Member of Congress.—W. B., R. M——, O.—See Chapter XV. of Regulations of 1866, and article on this subject in the Mail for September 1866.

Postage on Newspaper Manuscript.—A. C. B., W. N. H.—Newspaper Manuscript is chargeable with letter postage. It is only book manuscript that is chargeable with postage at printed rates. This has been clearly decided by the Department.

Postmasters Affixing Stamps to Letters.—J. D. P. N——, N. Y.—It is no part of the duty ot a postmaster to affix stamps to letters; if he does it at all, it must be considered as done through courtesy.

Postage on Drop letters, &c.—W. S. G., S——, Ill.—1. Postage on Drop letters where there is a free delivery is two cents, where there is not, one cent. 2. Mail matter passes free to Congressman. See reply above on Franking privilege. 3. Your question as to "gaining credit" we cannot understand. State it more clearly. 4. Request and return letters are not chargeable with postage as being returned.

Settling the General Account.—W. H. W., S——, ——.—The General Account is settled whenever required by the Department.

Letters marked Paid, but not bearing a Postage Stamp.—W. W., F——, Ind.—Such a letter, if arriving regularly in the mail pouch, should be considered as having had the postage prepaid.

Postage on Medicines.—H. P., S—— B——, N. Y.—Postage on medicines must be charged at letter rates. See Section 245, of Laws of 1866.

Inability to open a Lock upon a Pouch, &c.—E. P., W——, O.—If the difficulty arises from a defective key, you should apply to the next post office on the route, the postmaster of which is authorized to take the packages addressed to your office, and send them to you in a sealed package, until you can procure a new key. No provision is made in the regulations for locks being ont of order; we suppose however if the fault is in the lock, so that no key will open it, it would be allowable to cut the staple which fastens tbe strap to the bag, bnt never to cut the strap. The bag can be repaired after the staple is cut. See Sec. 429 of Regulations. To cut a strap is not only a violation of duty as a citizen, but an inexcusable violation of official duty. See Chapter XXXVIII, Regulations of 1866.

Established Salary.—A. L. M., P——B——, Wis.—This is one of the questions we cannot answer, even if it were proper for us to do so, as a full knowledge of the circumstances is required.

Payment of Draft.—J. G., G—— R——, Iowa.—You will have to take, or send at your own risk, to the postmaster having the draft on you, the money to pay it. It is not incumbent on him to direct you as to the means by which you should send it.

Obtaining Increase of Salary.—B. F. B., N——, Ill.—In this case we can only advise you to apply to the Postmaster General, with a statement of facts. See Section 29 of Laws of 1866.

Closing the doors of a Post Office while opening a Mail.—You have a right to close the doors of your office while opening a mail. Postmasters should extent to the public all the courtesy compatible with a discharge of their duties; a like courtesy sbould, bowever, be extended to them. Closing tbe dnors might subject orderly persons to mucb inconvenince while waiting, and therefore to prevent disorder in your onter room, try a little "law:" make a complaint of "disorderly conduct" before some justice, and if you keep cool and manage properly, you will soon bave order grow out of disorder.

Postage to Guadaloupe &c.—C. C. C., N—— P——, Me.—1. If no particular route is specified, letters for Guadaloupe are sent via St. Tbomas, the postage by that route being 18 cents. 2. For reply to question on Franking Privilege see above. 3. Postmasters are required to postmark letters, but not newspapers or other unsealed matter.

Receipts of an Office less than the Salary.—C. H. S., P—— B——, Ky.—Where the receipts of an office are less than tbe Salary assigned, the postmaster will be paid by Special Draft. But in such cases "Postmasters should at once explain to the First Ass't P. M. General, why their nffices do not pay expenses."

Money Order Clerks.—S. D. K., D——, N. Y.—Money Order Clerks are employed by postmasters, and not by the Department.

Forwarding Request Letters.—D. McN., W——, Pa.—If the person addressed has not requested bis letters should be forwarded to him, you should return the Request letter according to endorsement.

Postage tn and from Great Britain, &c.—R. P., L——, Va.—The postage on unpaid letters from Great Britain is 24 cents, and as this is payable in specie, the premium on gold on the day the letters arrive in the United States, is added, and you have the option of paying 24 cents in specie, or in currency with the premium added. See "Collections in Coin," under the head of "Miscellaneous Information," on the Third Page. The 19 and 21 cent marks on foreign letters have no reference to the postage, but are made at the exchange offices to facilitate the accounts between the two countries. 30 cents the single rate will sufficiently prepay to Hong Kong.—It should be understood that Hong Kong being a British possession, a distinction must be made between that place and other parts of China when consulting our Foreign Postage Table.

Postage on Daily Paper delivered in the place where published.—The Department has decided that "A Postmaster is not required to receive newspapers printed in his town and deliver them to subscribers; but should he receive and deliver them no charge can be made for so doing—unless it is in a large city, where carriers are employed, then a contract should be made under Section 535 of Laws of 1866." And it is only weekly papers that can pass free through the mail to subscribers living within the county of publication.

Age at which a lady can be permitted to hold a Post Office.—M. C., S——, Ind.—A lady must be of legal age and unmarried to be elegible to appointment as postmaster.

Postage on Pamphlets and Periodicals to Great Britain.—P. O. Clerk, R——, Wis.—Such postage is as follows: not exceeding 2 oz. 2 cents, over 2 and not exceeding 3 oz., 12 cents, over 3 and not exceeding 4 oz., 16 cents, over 4 oz. and up to 16 oz. 4 cents each additional oz. or fraction thereof, above the first 4 oz.

Post Office Balances.—F. S., K——, Iowa.—We cannot tell why P. O. balances are not made to weigh a ½ oz. To remedy the want of such we would recommend that you provide a ½ oz. weight, and when you wish to weigh a letter, where the standard weight is ½ oz., to put this weight on the balance with the letter, you can then tell whether the letter exceeds a ½ oz.

Route Agents receiving Letters.—T. J. & V. Q——, Ill.—Sec. 470 of Regulations of 1866 requires Route Agents "to receive letters written after the mail has closed, and all way letters prepaid by stamps, and to direct them to the proper office for delivery or distribution."

Making up Quarterly Returns, by Outgoing and Incoming Postmasters.—J. R. L., P—— N. J.—Each Postmaster makes up Returns for the part of the quarter he was postmaster, and in such return accounts for all moneys received by him for that quarter, on account of the P. O. Department. Moneys received for succeeding quarters, such as for box rents or newspaper postage paid yearly, should be paid by the outgoing to the in-coming P. M., who should account for the same quarterly.

☞ L. HEMPSTEAD, Route Agent on the Shore Line R. R from New Haven to New London, was the fortunate recipient, of a magnificient present, a few days ago, in the shape of a valuable gold watch and chain, from the postoffice and railway people at New Haven. A good time, and interchange of felicitous remarks were prominent features of the occasion, and the well merited compliment to an efficient official reflects great credit on the good taste, liberality and appreciative discrimination of the donors.

Miscellaneous Information.

Dead Letters.

In the instructions under the postel laws, UNMAILABLE LETTERS are specified to be—

Letters not addressed, or so badly addressed that their destination cannot be known.

Letters misdirectad to places where there are no post offices.

Only such letters as are herein described are, when deposited in any post office, to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office; all others must be dispatched to their destination, charged with the amount of unpaid postage.

When unmailable letters are sent to the Dead Letter Office, the specific reason therefor must be endorsed upon the envelope of each.

For more full instructions relating to dead letters, advertising letters, &c., examine carefully Chap. 35, Regulations of 1866, and Sections 1 and 2, Act of June 12, 1866.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepaymen of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES. When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any question as to prepayment, by this simple criterion.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore, decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents, per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at itspleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

Applications for these stamps should be made to the Appointment office.

Postmasters ntoffices, the gross receipts of which are less than $75 per annum, if they use rating stamps must obtain the same at their own expense.

Letter balances, npon the like application, are furnished to offices which collect in postages $75 a year.

United Stntes Exchange Offices for Foreign Mails.

Boston is an office of Exchange for British, French, Prussian and Belgian Mails.

Philadelphia and Portland are offices of Exchange for British and French Mails.

Baltimore, Chicago and Detroit are offices of Exchange for British and French Mails.

Domestic Postages.

The law requires postage on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or, (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established, the rate is 1 ct.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material, (not in cases,) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter—viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Photographic Albums are chargeable with book postage—four cents for each four ounces, or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

Postage on Daily Papers to subscribers when prepaid quarterly or yearly in advance, either at the mailing office or office of delivery, per quarter, (three months).. 35 cts.

Six times per week,	"	"	..	30 "
For Tri-Weekly,	"	"	..	15 "
For Semi-Weekly,	"	"	..	10 "
For Weekly,	"	"	..	5 "

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the U. S.:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz.		6 cts.
"	over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	12 "
"	over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	18 "
Monthly, not over 4 oz.		3 "
"	over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	6 "
"	over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	9 "
Quarterly, not over 4 oz.		1 "
"	over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	2 "
"	over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	3 "

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the p. m. must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications, the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four onnces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of news papers, magazines and periodicals to regular subscribers) sent via Overland Mail, is to be charged at letter-postage rates.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, and scions,) the postage to be pre-paid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over 1 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking ont the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows—"The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open edes or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (except bills and receipts for subscription) in, or to write or print anything, after its publication, upon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, is illegal, and subjects such printed matter, and the entire package of which it is a part, to letter postage.

Any word or communication, whether by printing, writing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper of a newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the person to whom it is to be sent, and the date when subscription expires, subjects the package to letter postage.

TO OR FROM GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND, IN UNITED STATES AND BRITISH MAILS.—Newspapers two cents each without regard to weight; pamphlets and periodicals, two cents each if not weighing over two ounces, and four cents an ounce or fraction of an ounce if exceeding two ounces; which is the United States postage only; but pamphlets weighing over eight onnces, or periodicals weighing over sixteen ounces, are chargeable with letter postage. France in like manner collects its own postage on all kinds of printed matter, whether sent or received.

A POST OFFICE STORY.

BY "WHO THE DICKENS."

"What will not woman, when she loves?"—Byron.
And man too.—W. T. D.

Antony lost the empire of Rome for love; and Henry the VIII. snubbed the Pope for the same reason. And in the days of "bluff king Hal," nf wife-loving memory, papes were popes. With such illustrious examples, not to mention hundreds of others more or less illustrious, scattered along the stream of time, it is not a matter of surprise that the hero of the following atory should, in an excess of amatory ardor, run the risk of a fine, "not exceeding five hundred dollars, and imprisonment not exceeding twelve months"—for so runs the statute, "If any person shall take any letter or packet, not containing any article of valne, or evidence thereof, out of a post office, or shall open any letter or packet which shall have been in a post office, or in custody of a mail carrier, before it shall have been delivered to the person to whom it is directed, with a design to obstruct the correspondence, to pry into another's business or secrets;" &c.

Before I go further with my "owe true tale," as I will indulge in a few personal explanations; not, indeed, to gratify personal vanity, but because I am well aware that readers, generally, like to know something nf a writer's history. I think in this case this desire will be stronger than usual, from the similarity of my name to that of one nf England's greatest authors. Merely premising that my parents had been married several years before I made my appearance, I will account for my rather singular given names in this wise: Upon a certain day—no matter how many years ago—my father was made aware that there was a "fuss in the family"—very unusual in his quiet, methodical household. And when, in due time, I was placed in his arms, he gazed at me for some moments with a mixture of satisfaction and astonishment depicted on his features, but without a word of welcome. At last, his mingled feelings found expression, and in tones between interrogation and exclamation he said, "Who the dickens!" These were the first words of greeting from my father; and they so amused my mother who lay in an adjoining room, eagerly listening for the welcome that would greet me, that she afterwards insisted they should be my name. I learned this, and much more of my babyhood, from the kind-hearted, matronly Hibernian importation who had been engaged some months previously, as "child's nurse"—recommended by her years, her good character, and her dozen or more personal experiences—the good creature having, by dint of a rather vociferous urging of her claim, secured the right of introducing me to my father, never had a very clear idea of my mother's property in me, and sometimes even went so far as to throw out doubts as to which of the two might claim the credit of maternity in my case—probably on the principle of the mooted question: "Which is the mother of the chick—the hen that lays the egg, or the one that hatches it?"

During my early boyhood, my worthy father found especial pleasure in proclaiming his relationship to the great Dickens across the waters, tracing back their common ancestry to two brothers, who "came in with the Conqueror." This he did until I was some twelve years old, when I fell violently in love with a very fascinating female relative of some twenty summers, who made my parents a lengthy visit. Under the influence of my passion, I perpetrated something like a "sonnet to my mistress' eyebrow," which childish effusion resembled a true sonnet about as nearly as an Irish jack resembles an English thorough-bred. But my fond, proud parent saw in it the dawning of a brilliant genius; and from that day he dropped all claim to relationship with the "Dickens" aforesaid, lest at some future time it might be a "millstone" on my own literary fame. I must confess, I never had my father's weakness for relationships, especially if they depended on tracings through a long chain of ancestry; for I have always found in these long chains some links of very doubtful genuineness, and others of very doubtful reputation and respectability. In them one is sure to run against a gallows or a felon's cell, or a disregard of the marriage ceremony, or some such trifle, which would be very disagreeable in the present, involving the necessity for a great deal of gilding, which the dust and rust and mnst and mould of the past seem to render unnecessary. I have always been content to know that my mother's wedding-finger was encircled by a massive, plain gold ring, and that for more than a year previous to my birth my father had not been "without the four seas."

And now, hoping my readers will pardon this long digression, I will resume my story. And yet, at the very outset, I must again revert to myself, so far as to say that at one time of my life I was employed as assistant, or general clerk, in an office where a part of the business was the detection of violators of the law, more especially of the "Postal Laws and Regulations." In order that the acts of my principal in such matters might have the warrant of the law, there was detailed from the police force of the city, an officer who was subject to his call in all cases where arrests were to be made, or the authority of the police force needed in any way. In was in this way that, though not really a part of the force of our office, this officer in question was a daily visitor, and I became well acquainted with him. I was sitting in the office alone, one morning, with not little to do. There were no calls, and my principal (whom by the way, as names are handy things, I will call Mr. O.) had not arrived, although it was full two hours past his usual time, when the officer I have mentioned entered, followed by a tall, rather stout young man, somewhere between twenty-one and twenty-five years of age. A certain ease in his manner, and style in his dress, divested my mind of the suspicion that he accompanied the officer in any other relation than that of friend, till the former, putting his usual query: "Where's Mr. C.?" and receiving in reply the answer that he had not yet arrived, the young man rather carelessly remarked, "Well, I'll call in again," A very quiet, but decidedly firm "I'd rather you would wait," on the part of the officer, excited a suspicion that the other was in custody, and I immediately received in my mind what cause were being "worked up," with which it was likely he could be connected. In a few moments I recollected that, the day previous, two persons had called, one of them to complain that a letter addressed to him had been fraudulently obtained from his employer's box by a certain party, whom he named; the other was the clerk who generally called for the letters, and who was in some way connected with the difficulty. To satisfy my curiosity, I wrote on a slip of paper, "Is he in custody?" and handed it to the officer. An affirmative nod of the head convinced me that I was right in my surmise respecting the case. As however I had had nothing to do with it, and the little I knew of it I had learned by "keeping my ears open," I did not feel warranted in saying anything, but concluded to wait till Mr. C. put in his appearance, although the surmise that there was a lady in the case," gave a zest to it that added to my impatience to learn more of our prisoner. It was one of those murky, rainy days, when one feels dull and heavy, and allows procrastination to indulge, undisturbed, in its thieving propensities. I was, therefore, glad to find an interest in studying the features and personnel of the young man, and listening to the desultory, interrupted conversation between him and the officer. The more I studied, the more firmly I became convinced that a deeper than a mercenary motive had actuated him in the step that had led to his arrest.

An hour or more passed, and still Mr. C. did not make his appearance, and as there seemed a prospect that I would be called on to take some active part in the matter, my interest deepened. I commenced turning in my mind the various modes of action which the case presented, when I was startled by the admission, by the object of my study, that he had not only taken the letter, opened it and made a copy, but, that after doing so, he himself had delivered it to the person to whom it was directed. There was a boldness and daring in this, which overcame my passive study, and caused mother Eve to assert her rights. I turned squarely to him and said:

"Do I understand that you not only admit taking the letter and opening it, but that you carried it to Mr. B. himself?"

"Yes."

"Do you know the penalty for this?" and I opened the statute book and pointed to the section already quoted. He read it; then, with a quick, nervous movement rose from his seat, took a few steps about the room, and seated himself, saying, very coolly:

"It does look a little black, but I carried my point."

The ice was broken; it was not difficult to maintain the conversation.

"How did you get the letter?" I asked.

"I bought it of the boy who got the letters from the box."

"Bought it! Allow me to ask what you paid for it?"

"I paid him ten dollars."

"Do you know that the boy denies positively that you got the letter from him?"

"Nevertheless it is true; I bought it of him, and paid him ten dollars for it."

"Did you know the boy had the letter at the time?"

"I did; for I had been watching the box for some time, and saw the letter put in it. It was from a young lady, with whom my relations are such, that I did not consider she was at liberty to correspond with other gentlemen, without my knowledge. I suspected, however, that she was doing so, and wished to satisfy myself, before I charged her with it. Accordingly, when I saw the letter in the box, my suspicions were confirmed, and I determined to possess it. I waited till the boy received all the letters, and then offered him, at first, five dollars for the letter in question; he refused; I then offered ten; the temptation proved too strong; he gave me the letter, and I gave him two five dollar bills—I would have given fifty dollars had it been necessary. I found the letter contained an invitation to accompany the lady to a party the next evening. My possession of it enabled me to foil this arrangement, and accompany her myself, as was my right. You may judge, my companion was not a little surprised, when, at that party, she met attending on another lady, the gentleman whom she had invited to attend on her. On our return to her home, I charged her with having written such a letter, and requested her to tell me what it contained. She replied: "As you are so smart as to find out that I have written to Mr. B., you had better be smart enough to find out what I wrote."

"I have been smart enough," I answered, "here is a copy of your letter," and I handed the copy to her. It is unnecessary to tell you more; I have told you so much, because I think my case is not an ordinary one; had that letter contained a million of dollars, I would not have touched a dollar. And now I am ready for the "five hundred dollars fine, and the two years imprisonment."

By this time it had become very evident that Mr. C. would not be in the office that day, and as there was hardly two hours before the courts would close, it became necessary for me to decide on one of three steps: to take the responsibility of making a complaint myself, or of dismissing the young man, or make a trip some three miles, in disagreeable weather, to find Mr. C., and learn his wishes. I judged the last to be the wisest. Mr. C's replies were, that he had no complaint to make, as it was evidently not a post office case—the matter being narrowed down to a question of veracity between the prisoner and the clerk who called at the post office; but the officer had better take the prisoner to the complainant, and confront the two.

What followed I learned from the officer, and will be told in a few words. Charges and counter-charges were made, the holder of the box would not admit that his boy could possibly be dishonest, and more than intimated that, as the prisoner had avowedly been guilty of one crime, he was less entitled to belief than his clerk, whom he had known and trusted for years. Still there was something about the prisoner's demeanor, which carried conviction to the officer that he spoke the truth, and being himself somewhat of a chivalric and devoted (to the sex) turn of mind, his sympathies were enlisted in his favor, and, seeing but little probability that the belligerents would come to terms, he insisted that he should be directed to dismiss the prisoner, or that a formal complaint should be made before a magistrate.

Up to this time, the prisoner evidently had, in the language of the turf, the "inside track." The only chance, therefore, for the complainant to obtain a balm for his wounded feelings, was to follow the alternative presented by the officer. Accordingly, the four proceeded to the Police Court, where a complaint was made for an offence against the State law.

"I've got none."

"Then I can't entertain your complaint, sir."

The matter began to have a comic appearance, and became a farce, as a complaint before a United States officer, for an offence against the postal laws, met with a similar fate, and the now discharged prisoner sarcastically and loudly whispered to the other, "Do you want anything more of me?"

Is that all? the reader will say, yes, that is all; I promised you "A Post Office Story." But there is a moral—two morals, in fact—one that might instruct young ladies and gentlemen of the amorite persuation; this, however, I can not "point," having never yet—and there is gray in my hair—recovered from that juvenile attack, which relieved me from the literary downdranght of relationship to the great Dickens, whose name is a genial, sparkling "House hold Word," but afforded me no experience. The other moral—instructive to holders of post office boxes—I can "point;"—Dishonesty is not confined to post office clerks, and more than half the trouble hy losses of letters occurs before or after they have been in custody of the Post Office Department; and employers should be certain there are no "beams" about their own stores, before they attempt to find "motes" in post offices.

ARRESTED AND HELD TO BAIL.—"Clark, Webster & Co., 62 Broadway," whom we honored with a notice in our last month's paper, were arrested, on the 8th ult., in the person of the principal "manager" and some sixty persons employed by him in folding, directing and preparing circulars for the mail by sacks full.

"Clark, Webster & Co.," proved to be purely fictitious, and Mr. Manager proved to be the scamp who, under various names, has conducted several swindling enterprises. He had entered on the present one on a gigantic scale, and expected to make a "good thing" of it (for himself). But the police stepped in and ruthlessly disappointed him in his "great expectations." He was very indignant at his arrest, and quite anxious to know where he should get redress. But a night in the Tombs changed his anxiety for redress into deeper anxiety to escape punishment. We say again, avoid all "gift enterprises," and all schemes promising for a dollar to give you more than a dollar's worth.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO.

Many people are such implicit believers in first impressions, that a single glance at a strange face firmly fixes in their minds an indelible estimate of the character of its owner. They do not stop to study the color of the hair, the capacity of the brow, the expression of the eye, the style of the nose, the quality of the mouth, or the shape of the chin; but a brief stare at the countenance in its entirety indicates to them, they believe, with a flash, the mental, moral, and physical qualities of the wearer; and an ideal judgment is pronounced, which no subsequent events can remove. In this way the most erroneous predilections and prejudices are created, and the love or the hatred which thus springs into existence at first sight, has, most generally, a brief and bitter ending.

This, in my opinion, is all wrong. By this rule many a great heart is excluded from mutually elevating communion with its peers, on account of a plain face, while its place is allowed to be filled by a "handsome picture," behind which there is neither soul, intelligence or sentiment.

Of course, the face has something to do with the formation of our opinion of strangers; but not in repose. The soul, speaking through the eyes, and the mind through the mouth, denote the temper, education and cultivation of every individual—learned and unlearned—and a clear conscience, and a heart free from envy, hatred, or uncharitableness, will make the homeliest face handsome, when engaged in good works, or instructive, practical, or amusing conversation.

Now, I do not want to be understood as intimating that a pretty face is objectionable or detrimental in either man or woman: I rather think it decidedly becoming in the latter—or at least I did think so nearly half a century ago, when I belonged to the great army of unsceptibles, and I don't know but I think so still—but beauty, you know, is only "skin-deep," and soon wears off when the excitement of pursuit is forgotten in possession, and when distance has called in her loan of enchantment to the view—or in plainer terms, when connubial bliss has lost its novelty.

sang the gentle Keats; but I opine he did not mean human beauty, or if he did he died too soon to know how much he erred.

Whether there is anything in the science of physiognomy or not I care not; but I really like to study faces; and I know of no place where so good an opportunity offers as about post offices and railway stations. At the former, the quality of looked-for letters, and at the latter, the quality of looked-for friends, can be almost told to a certainty, by the peculiar facial expression of the expectants—and then, too, you see all styles of faces, from a gurgon's to a Madonna's. Post office studies are, however, the most interesting and the most painful. Successes and reverses, triumphs and failures, promises broken, pride crushed, shame, blame, anger, grief, trouble, delight, dismay and desperation here, more than any place else, exert their destructive influences. Here, more than any place else, is official promptness appreciated; and here, more than any place, do words of kindness act soothingly, as hearts sick with grief and hope deferred. And here, if there be any reality in first impressions, a post office clerk can make a favorable or unfavorable impression on his unnumberless interrogators—which will follow him through his official, and perhaps unofficial, career.

To understand correctly, however, the magical attraction of a lovely living portrait, one wants to linger round the vestibules of these post offices, and see how one fair face can monopolize the unlimited attention of the delivery clerk, while scores of plain people, old and young, big and little, are kept waiting. What is it to him if their sorrows can be assuaged, or their wants relieved by the prompt delivery to them of missives in his keeping? What is to him if unwatched invalids, or helpless children are left too long alone, while those that should care for them, stealing away for a moment to the post office for anxiously expected letters, are there delayed, while he gossips with a lady fair? What is it their business, if he overhauls every letter in the office—ostensibly to find one for her—but really using his tongue instead of his eyes the while? They need'nt wait! Pleasure before business, is his motto, and if people don't like it, they can do the other thing—"lump" it. Occasionally, you will find an official Adonis inside, who is as much of a magnet as the Venus outside, and who turns himself into a target to be looked at by the pretty girls—the rank and file patiently waiting his pleasure, while he arranges his toilet, thrums his guitar, or exhausts his supply of small talk.

There are, however, a good many young gentlemen employed in post offices, whose appreciative tastes are not confined to animate beauty. Some of them can boast of private collections of gems of art—against which various municipal authorities have conceived a deep-seated antipathy, owing possibly to their fastidiousness. But, nevertheless, such collections are in existence, and being constantly increased by contributions from artists, with whom these young gentlemen are in some kind of hanging communication, or which, by the accidental mutilation of an envelope, or the illegible or incorrect address thereon, fail to reach the worshipers of unadorned beauty, for whom they are intended.

The peculiar fancy for these pictorial pearls may be sound; but perhaps some unnecessarily sensitive individuals may say it conflicted somewhat with our recognized code of morality. That may or may not be—the only question with me is, whether the frequent contemplation of these chefs d'œuvre has not a tendency to silence the still small voice of conscience, and open the door for hitherto unknown temptations? C'est le premier pas qui coute. I think it has—and in this case, if in no other, I would form an unfavorable first impression, which the subsequent conduct of these patrons of perverted art, I am sure, would justify.

My solicitude for official clean hands and clear heads, and pure hearts, is my excuse for this epistle to the "Mail."

P. O. INNUBIBUS.
February, 1867.

Editor U. S. Mail.—Growling is considered a most disagreeable and not very effectual mode of remedying an evil; yet I have taken my pen for a general trial of it.

Notwithstanding beautiful, blue clouds—those clouds which some enthusiast has said "all other clouds dispel," have been floating and circling about my head for half an hour, the office clouds, which had settled on my mind, have been in no wise dispelled or dispersed; nor am I any nearer my usual genial and self-satisfied mood, than when I seated myself in my arm chair, to think over the events of the past few days. Nor are any of the parties connected with my "model office" in a better mood than I am. My "First Assistant" has sought relief in attendance on one of the many "Only Original and Best Organized Negro Minstrel Troupes" that almost weekly visit our "loveliest village of the" State; my "Second" has gone to test with his flaming skates some rather treacherous ice; my "Third" is taking his weekly instruction in the "Art of Dancing and Polite Behavior," while the "Mail Messenger" has gone off with his mail-bags, to drown his sorrow in impatient waiting for trains some twenty or thirty hours late.

In order that my growls may go direct to the mark, I will aim them directly, and hence,—

GROWL 1—at Postmasters. For not carefully reading the post office addresses on letters, especially in cases of offices with similar names—this want of care causing much trouble, vexation, and often loss. A lady called at my office a few mornings since, in much apparent distress. She stated she had been for a week expecting a registered letter containing money, and that being a perfect stranger in our village, its non-arrival placed her in a very embarassing and mortifying position. After considerable conversation, of the kind which almost any postmaster of a large office has shared in, tears came into her eyes; and "with the inundation of the eyes, what flinty heart to water will not wear?" I really pitied my visitor, and the more so because I held in my hand a letter intended for a brother P. M., which by mistake had been addressed to me, requesting that P. M. to forward to my office a registered letter missent to his office. Here were three blunders never one registered letter—two by the P. M. of the mailing office, and one by the P. M. of the office to which the letter was sent—and all three were utterly inexcusable. I will end this growl with requesting postmasters to carefully read the names of offices on the letters they mail; to be particularly careful to send registered letters to the office intended; to be particularly careful to properly address all official letters intended to correct previous mistakes and blunders; to pay attention to returning "request letters:" to postmark and missent-mark missent letters; and in fine, to do their duty generally, or else give way to some one who will. It may be a nice thing for a careless postmaster to receive his salary, but it is not so nice a thing for the public to have him continue in office.

GROWL 2—at Route Agents.—Scarcely had my lady visitor left me, when Dunn Brown entered, I saw "complaint" written on his countenance. He held in his hand an envelope postmarked three days before, which he should have received twelve hours after it left the mailing office, but which had been sixty hours coming to hand. By this delay he lost the purchase of a valuable horse, for which he has been for some time in treaty. The Route Agent had sent the letter, travelling a hundred miles in the bag for another office, and it reached my office too late for any other purpose than to raise Dunn Brown's ire, and annoy me.

GROWL 3—at the Public. Yes, dear Public, whose obedient servant every office holder is supposed to be, I dare growl at you. I am not responsible for the recent great storm that deranged the mails in every direction. Why, then, did you beset my office, and me, and my clerks, with questions and complaints repeated from mouth to mouth? You know just as much of the storm and its effects as I did; and you, each and all, saw my "bulletin," that no mails had been received, and that I would announce each mail as it arrived. It was not necessary to ask a single question, or make a single complaint. Business men knew no trains were running; they knew freight was accumulating at the depot; they knew they had goods which had been delayed by the storm; and they could very placidly and blandly tell their customers, that last week they had purchased superior sugars and splendid silks at a very low figure, but that the roads were blocked and they had been disappointed in receiving their goods, requesting them, in winning tones, to wait a few days. And then these same business men would rush to my office and "give it" to me and my clerks and the whole Post Office Department, because I had received no mails. Dignified matrons, blooming maidens, and rollicking school children, were incessant in their inquiries "if the mail had arrived," and "when it was expected;" and all the while it was a matter of publicitalk, that trains were behind time at least twenty-four hours. I trust my egoism will be pardoned, when I say that I met this "rnn" on my office with "specie" payment, giving. I hope, golden, kind words to each; bnt now, that the day is over, my pent-up feelings find relief in penning these growls.

GROWL 4—at the Post Office Department.—But doubtless I have growled enongh, at any rate, I will suppress this growl, and content myself with a few closing words.

In my first and second growls I have endeavored to call attention to one of the great faults of officials entrusted with the dispatching and transmission of mail matter—a fault often productive of most serious consequences. It may seem but a small matter, that a letter is missent, and thus delayed a day or two; bnt that very letter may be a messenger of life or death, of wealth or poverty, of joy or sorrow; and hence the almost sacred duty that devolves on the officers to whom I refer. Growl 3 does not, at first sight, seem to have any bearing as a "Post Office Assistant:" yet in it is shown, in a feeble manner, one of the most arduous dnties of a postmaster; and it indirectly teaches the necessity of affability, courtesy, and control of one's feelings, as among the first qualifications for that office. And what is true of a postmaster, is true of his clerks.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster-General recommends that all Postmasters, and others connected with the Postal service, subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL," (see Sec. 259, P. O. Regulations of 1866,) and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every proprietor of a book, pamphlet, map, chart, musical composition, print, engraving, or photograph, for which a copyright shall have been secured, who shall fail to deliver to the Library of Congress, at Washington, a printed copy of every such book, pamphlet, map, chart, musical composition, print, engraving, or photograph, within one month after publication thereof, shall, for every such default, be subject to a penalty of twenty-five dollars, to be collected, at the suit of the Librarian of Congress, as other penalties of like amount are now collected by law.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That every such proprietor may transmit any book, pamphlet, map, chart, musical composition, print, engraving, or photograph, for which he may have secured a copyright, to the Librarian of Congress, by mail free of postage, provided the words "copyright matter" be plainly written or printed on the outside of the package containing the same: and it shall be the duty of the several postmasters and deputy postmasters to give a receipt for the same, if requested, when such package shall be delivered to them, or any of them, and to see that the same is safely forwarded to its destination by mail, without cost or charge to said proprietor.

Order in Post Offices.

We frequently have inquiries respecting the authority of postmasters to preserve order in the public rooms of post offices, while opening malls. While there is ample authority for this purpose, it is not conferred by Postal Laws or Regulations, for it does not come within their scope. Post masters must therefore look to their rights and dutles as citizens, and not to the Post Office Department, as postmasters, for the authority and power to preserve such order as they wish. It seems to be inherent in the nature of crowds, while idly waiting for some interesting performance, whether it be a concert, or opening the delivery window of a post office—from small beginnings to become almost disorderly, very much to the annoyance of those whose actions they are awaiting, and to some even of their own members. And yet, as there is nothing really malicious about this disorder, it is rather a serious matter how to prevent it. One hardly wishes to put in force any part of the power of the law against that spirit of fun, however boisterous, which arises merely from a desire to relieve the monotony of waiting.

With reference to postmasters and post offices, we know that in many cases, especially where important mails arrive from 6 to 8 o'clock P. M., citizens of all ages and both sexes will crowd the public room, and many, who in other places are very models of propriety, will allow themselves to become as boisterous as any of their companions. Some postmasters have asked if it is allowable to close the doors at such times so as to prevent this crowd assembling. There is nothing in the "Laws and Regulations" that forbids this; but we question if such a remedy would not, in a large majority of cases, be worse than the disease. People would crowd about the doors, and when the latter were opened, would rush in—a surging, boisterous, clamorous and not very good humored crowd, and create far more confusion than if allowed to enter when they pleased. A resort to law is also allowable, but as we only aim to expound Postal laws and Regulations, and to counsel postmasters in the efficent discharge of their official duties, we will refer them to "general practitioners" for advice as to their rights and power under state law. We will, however, in our character as counsellor, give the following counsel: Be calm, cool and dignified, and conceal, as much as possible, any evidence that you are annoyed. Do not make any fierce threats or promicuous charges; but endeavor to discover who are the real offenders, and at some convenient time quietly talk to them, giving them to understand that you know them, and that their conduct will not be allowed, appeal to their manliness, their good nature—strive to make friends of them, rather then enemies, if, after a patient trial of this plan, you find your efforts unavailing, it might then be well to select some principal offender, and, stopping for awhile even in your busiest time of opening a mail, take him by collar and gently but firmly walk him into the street, and tell him not to enter the office again till he can behave himself. Such a course, if pursued with kindness and resolution, will work a remedy and ensure yon the good will and support of your fellow citizens.

Postmasters and Special Agents.

It is a frequent complaint by Special Agents of the P. O. Department, that the replies to letters of inquiry addressed to postmasters on official business, are too often indirect, careless, and sometimes even discourteous. One instance of such discourtesy has come to onr knowledge, where a Special Agent addressed an inquiry to a postmaster respecting the contents of a lost registered letter, to which the reply was, Don't know—didn't inquire. It is very proper, at the time of registering a letter, for a postmaster not "to know" and not "to inquire" the contents; but when such letter is lost and a Special Agent, in the course of his investigations, inquires of the mailing postmaster the contents of it, his own good sense should prompt him to know that the inquiry is an official one, and as such perfectly proper, and requires a clear and distinct answer. At such times the postmaster should "know," and if he does not, should "inquire," that he may be able to give a satisfactory reply. In another instanee a postmaster "preferred" to retain a circnlar of inquiry which it was requested should be returned with his replies, and coolly informed the Special Agent that he could have the retained circnlar on personal application as an authorized Special Agent of the Post Office Department. This was wrong, not only because it was improper not to comply with the request to return the circular, but also because the circular was important as a part of the papers in the case. We would therefore suggest to postmasters, that, as Special Agents are authorized representatives of the Department, their official acts have official force; that all requests, inquiries, &c., should receive the most prompt attention, and that even extra trouble should be taken that such attention should be as satisfactory as possible. "Dont know" is not a proper reply, nnless yon have failed in all reasonable efforts to know. And "preferences" cannot be allowed in the face of direct requests

Aside from the extra trouble, annoyance, and delay to the Special Agent, a suspicion, greater or less, attaches to a postmaster who is not prompt and explicit in replies to all inquiries as to matters connected with his official condnct.

The New Registry System.

The new Registry System, for which the Department is now issuing instructions, is not intended to go into effect till the first of June next. The necessary blanks will be supplied to postmasters in due time without further orders, they are therefore requested not to send special orders, as no notice can be taken of them. Postmasters ordering supplies of blanks previous to June 1st, will be careful not to order those for the New Registry System.

A Talk with Correspondents.

We occasionally receive letters to which we cannot well reply in our "Answers to Correspondents," because some do not really seek for information, while others ask for such as the postal laws and regulations do not afford, and others again make suggestions. We desire to acknowledge the favors of all of our correspondents; and to enable us to do so, we purpose to take a few of such letters as we have mentioned above, and indulge in a little

EDITORIAL CHIT-CHAT.

A correspondent, "way off" in what was once the "far West," but is now only just the other side of the Mississippi—to wit: somewhere in Arkansas—sends us rather a doleful letter respecting his salary, and the effect of the present system of disposing of box rents, in decreasing it. He says, "before this unfortunate war, the Postmaster-General allowed this office a compensation equal to $50 per quarter, besides box rents." After "this unfortunate war," the salary was fixed at $35 a quarter. He then gives some statements and figures, in which he shows that the business of his office is on the increase, but the salary on the decrease—having heen reduced to $42.50 per quarter. He concludes as follows: "I have been P. M. nearly twenty-five years, and must confess it turns me clear upside down. The fact is, it will break me np if I hold on much longer and don't get further relief." According to our correspondent's figures, there must be a mistake somewhere; we would therefore advise an application to the Postmaster-Generni, who has ample authority to review and readjust salaries. . . . . A correspondent in the "Jerseys," who, we judge, has not been very long one of the "ins," asks us for information regarding the charging of newspaper postage which has already been rendered to the Department in a previous quarter; also regarding box rents, &c. The position of affairs in his office is by no means clear to me; so we can only state general principles. It is a rule of the Department to keep the business of each quarter separate; and hence, at the end of a quarter, no returns should be made of money collected, except such as applies to the quarter for which the return is made. An outgoing postmaster must make a return to the Department—the same as a quarterly return—for all moneys received on account of that quarter, up to the time he leaves the office; while the incoming postmaster accounts for all received for the balance of that quarter. Unpaid postage, due at the time the old P. M. vacates, he charges against himself, and credits to his successor, who, at the end of the quarter, charges himself, in like manner, with the unpaid postage. . . . . We are much obliged for one or two corrections in our list of post offices. We take this list from the copy furnished us from Washington; but of course an occasional clerical error is unavoidable.

Slow Lightning.

The Western Railroad Gazette says: We hope the experience of the writer of the following is more exceptional than universal, else the telegraph might as well be abolished at once:—

CHICAGO, March 9, 1867.

Editors Western R. R. Gazette:

Please publieb the following tribute to the celerity of the telegraph: On last week Thursday, I left St. Louis for Chicago, at 6.15 a. m., sending a dispatch just before leaving, to Chicago, to a plain address. I reached Chicago at 9 p. m., and found that the dispatch had beat me in just seven minutes. The moral is, that parties desiring to send quick messages, had better ignore the telegraph, and send by the "train boy" or mail. VINDEX.

The present writer had an experience lately of the same sort, "only more so." Four weeks ago he sent a "life and death" message to the telegraph office in New York, addressed to Yonkers, (17 miles distant) which has not yet reached its destination. But he cordially joins in the hope that such experiences are "exceptional." Some months before, he sent a "confidential" message to a town in New Jersey, following it himself, and being somewhat surprised, (to say the least) on his arrival, to find its subject the theme of conversation among several of the inhabitants. We hope that was "exceptional" too.

USE YOUR FRANKING PRIVILEGE.—Postmasters have the right, by law, to correspond on official business with other postmasters, through the mails, free; but some of them seem to feel an unaccountable delicacy about exercising this privilege. Not a few write to us, complaining that the clerks in certain large offices are constantly missending to them letters addressed to other offices. Our advice in such cases is, to make a free use of their franking privilege by complaining, in every instance, to the P. M. at the office where the fault lies. A single complaint may perhaps pass unheeded; bnt a shower of them (if it be found necessary) will be very apt to lead to a careful inquiry as to the actual offender, and perhaps to his reform; or if that be found impracticable, then to his being invited to exercise his talent for carelessness in some more appropriate field than a post office.

MUST BE PREPAID.—A large number of newspapers (principally from Southern post offices), addressed to Great Britain and other parts of Europe, but unpaid, have accumulated at the New York Post Office, and must be disposed of as waste paper. Postmasters will please understand, that all printed matter for foreign countries must be prepaid, at the rate given in the "Table of Foreign Postages," published in the Mail. To some countries, and by certain routes, the prepayment of letters is optional, and those letter rates will be found marked with a * in our table; but no newspaper, pamphlet or other printed matter, directed to a foreign country, should be allowed to leave the maillog office until the full postage has been paid thereon by stamps.

Answers to Correspondents.

[Subscribers will greatly oblige us and often save time and trouble, if they will, before sending us inquiries to be answered in this column, consult the various standing articles in the Mail under the heads of "Miscellaneous Information," "Domestic Postages," &c., &c., for information on the subject in regard to which they are in doubt. We receive a great number of questions, answers to which could readily be found by attending to this request.]

Postage on Semi-Weekly Papers for Clubs. T. S. J., P——, N Y.—There is no rule by which semi-weekly papers to clubs can be charged at a lower rate of postage than the regular quarterly rate of ten cents.

Order Assigning Salary.—A. P., C——, O.—The law provides, that any change made in a salary shall not take effect until the first day of the quarter next following the order. Sec. 29, Laws 1866.

Account of Undercharges.—S. M., P——, O.—The account of undercharges is kept on a blank furnished by the blank agent; and at the end of the quarter the gross amount is entered in article 3 of the Account Current.—Sec. 312, Regulations 1866.

Removing a Post Office.—Correspondent's letter mislaid—A Postmaster cannot make any material change in the site of a post office, without the consent of the Department. The change you propose does not seem to be material; we therefore think you would be justified in making it without troubling the Department.—Sec. 33, Regulations 1866.

Credit for Postage Stamps on Matter Insufficiently Prepaid.—T. H., N——, Cal.—If mail matter is returned to the mailing office for insufficient prepayment, the amount already paid will be allowed towards the full prepayment.

Opening Mails in the Presence of Others not Sworn Officers of the Department, &c.—J. S., F——, Md.—1. Mails should not be opened or made up within the reach of persons not authorized to handle them.—Sec. 25, Regulations 1866. 2. Postoge must be prepaid upon all mail matter, except that mentioned in Sec. 148, Regulations 1866.

Franking Privilege.—B. W., G——, Ill.—The family of the United States Senator has not the franking privilege; but mail matter can be sent free to any one having the franking privilege, subject to the restrictions imposed by section 265 A, Laws of 1866.—Chap. XV., Regulations 1866.

Fee for Registering a Letter.—A. W. K., L—— C. H., S. C.—The registration fee on domestic letters is twenty cents, and not five cents. See Sec. 352, Regulations 1866.

Paper Containing Writing.—N. W. R., R—, Pa. 1. Papers containing writing should be charged, at letter rates, and the amount of unpaid postage collected, if charged at the office of delivery, should be entered on the Account of Undercharges. 2. Postage on a package of woolen cloth, even if open at the end, should be charged at letter rates. See Sec. 222 of Laws of 1866, for a description of "mailable matter," and Sec. 245, for the rate on "all matter not enumerated as mailable matter, but which nevertheless shall be mailed."

Carrying the Mail on a Route on which a Bridge is Destroyed, &c.—J. G., St. M——, Minn.—1. The destruction of a bridge on a mail route will not relieve a contractor from his obligation to carry the mail.—Sec. 412, Regulations 1866. 2. You cannot purchase a marking stamp and charge it to the Department. Office stamps are only furnished by the Department, according to Section 14, Regulations 1866. 3. Respecting your salary, write to the Postmaster General.

Postage on a Religious Paper Issued Four Times a Month, and sent Once a Month, &c.—Z. W., C.—.Ind.—1. If the paper is issued weekly, the postage is five cents a quarter. 2. Semi-monthly papers cannot pass through the mail free, even in the county of publication. 3. A post office clerk may occupy a box; but it must not be a box for which rent should be charged. A cigar box, kept in a convenient part of the office, would be the best. 4. Postmasters are required to retain post office funds, until notified by the Department what disposition to make of them. 5. On the bridge question see preceding answer. 6. Postmasters are allowed to remove wrappers from newspapers, if it can be done without destroying them.—See Sec. 212, Regulations 1866. 7. Your question as to time is rather trifling; we cannot undertake to decide between your watch and a watch maker's regulator. 8. For instructions to bill dead letters, see Sections 380, 381 and 382 of Regulations 1866. 9. It is your duty to make inquiries for letters alleged to be lost, whether they were mailed at your office or for it. 10. The Department does not publish its intentions respecting the establishment of money order offices; we do not know that they are restricted to any class of offices.

Notifying Publishers.—D. M., D—— P——, Mass.—Section 286, Laws of 1866, is the same as Section 9 of the Act of March 3, 1863. The Department edition of this Act was printed with instructions following each section. The latter part of Instruction 9 reads as follows: "When any newspaper, or magazine, regularly sent through the mails, has been refused by a subscriber thereto, or not called for by him for one month, the postmaster will write a statement of the facts to the postmaster where such publication is mailed, to be by him communicated to the publisher." Under this Instruction it is usual to fill in a blank addressed to the publisher, and enclose it in an envelope addressed to the postmaster. Blank notices to publishers (form 29) are furnished by the First Assistant P. M. General.

Postage on Foreign Papers Containing Supplement.—J. B., O——, R. I.—"A genuine supplement or appendage to a paper, and of the same essential character, may be folded in a newspaper without subjecting it to extra charge for postage." But if there are different papers, postage must be charged on each (Sec. 226, Regulations 1866).

Receiving Money for Postage.—E. D., H—— P——, N. C.—If a postmaster has no stamps, he must receive money for postage, and mark letters paid, until he can procure a supply; in the meanwhile, he should purchase enough for temporary use, from the nearest office. Postmasters need never be without stamps (Sec. 161, Regulations 1866).

Circulars.—H. G. C., R——, N. Y.—Circulars containing any writing whatever, should be charged at letter rates, and if not sufficiently prepaid, the unpaid postage should be collected at the office of delivery. Any matter whatever, that contains writing, or "gives any information not contained in the print," is chargeable with letter postage, except mailable matter of the third class, mentioned in sections 37 and 227 of Regulations of 1866, and matter sent under the franking privilege.

Franking by an Assistant Postmaster.—W. B. B., M——, Vt.—An Assistant P. M. is not allowed to "frank," in the absence of the postmaster. In such cases he should frank in his own name, as Acting P. M. Sec 126, Regulations 1866.

Opening a Post Office on Sundsy.—J. A., H——, Iowa—If your mail does not arrive regularly on Sunday, you are not required to keep your office open on that day. We judge, however, in your case, that in consequence of bad roads, your mails are often delayed till Sundnys. Under such circumstances, we think it would be but courteous and proper to open your office for "an hour or more, if the public convenience requires it, unless it be during the time of public worship."—Sec. 27, Reg. 1866.

Lithographic Market Reports from Havana.—T. B., P——, Fla.—Such reports are chargeable with United States postage, at printed rates, to be collected on delivery.—Sec 270, Regulations 1866.

Postage on Books, Periodicals, &c., from the Scandinavian Countries.—N. O., S. O—, Minn.—Postage on such matter would be charged in the money of the country where mailed, at the rates mentioned in the table on the third page of the Mail, which see. Such papers come fully prepaid, and you should make no charge on delivery.

Flexible Patterns.—G. L., F——, N. C.—Flexible patterns are patterns cut from paper or other flexible material, to serve as guides and models by which to make articles for use "Dress patterns," "vest patterns," &c., cannot, of course, be considered "flexible patterns," within the meaning of the law.

Valuable Dead Letters.—H. U. R., J——, N. Y.—Valuable dead letters may be delivered to the writer or the person addressed, on signing the receipt. But such letters cannot be forwarded. Read carefully the Instructions accompanying valuable dead letters returned for delivery.

Reduced Rate of Postage to Great Britain.—J. C. C., S——, Wis., and W. H. C., A——, Mich.—A change in the rate of postage between Great Britain and the United States, will probably take place on the termination of the present postal treaty, which will occur January 1st, 1868; but for the present, the old rate of 24 c. per half ounce, must be charged.

Postage on Semi-Weekly Papers in the County of Publication.—S. W. C., B——, Mass.—Postage on such papers should be charged at the regular rates. It is only weekly papers that can pass free through the mails, in the county of publication.—Sec. 228, Regulation 1866.

Wrapping Letters.—J. M. H., F——, N. Y.—Postmasters will wrap packages of letters, unless their offices are supplied in whole or in part by railway post offices, in which case they will be governed by special instructions from the superintendent of the railway service.—Sec. 88, Regulations 1866.

Prepayment of Postage by Canada Stamps.—A. A., N——, Mass.—Prepayment of postage to Canada, must be by United States stamps only.

Request to Return Books and Other Publications.—P. T., M——, W. Va.—Such requests, if endorsed on the wrapper, cannot be regarded, as it is only letters that can be returned free. If a person wishes a book returned, he should write to the P. M. to that effect, and enclose sufficient to prepay the postage. See Mail for Sept., 1866.

Lists of New Post Offices, &c.

In order to avoid the delay in the publication of the MAIL which has heretofore occurred through the necessity of waiting at the beginning of each month for the Official List of Post Offices Established, Discontinued and Re-opened, Changes of Post Office Names, &c., for the preceding month, we have concluded hereafter to publish said List one month later—that is to say, the List for the month ending March 31st, will appear in the May number; that ending April 30th, will appear in the June number, &c. As this arrangement will enable our subscribers to receive their papers much earlier in the month than formerly, we believe it will prove satisfactory to all.

Rating unpaid Letters to Europe.

We are requested to state that "the practice at many offices in the interior, of marking in ink, or stamping, the full postage chargeable on UNPAID letters for Europe is wholly unnecessary, and should be discontinued." Postmasters will therefore simply postmark unpaid letters for Europe, and not mark on them the rate of postage, leaving this to be done at the Exchange office where the mail is made up for Europe.

"TEN CENTS TO CHINA AND JAPAN."—We desire to inform our subscribers who ask us why we do not insert the "new ten cent rate to China and Japan" in our Foreign Postage Table, that to do so would only lead to confusion, loss, and trouble. When the Pacific Mail Steamship Company has its monthly line of steamers actually established, leaving New York and connecting with their line for China and Japan, at San Francisco, we shall publish that rate as the proper postage by that route. But their steamers not being completed, monthly service is not yet performed. A steamer will leave New York on the 11*th of June* next, connecting with the steamer from San Francisco on 3*d of July*, and letters can be sent to China and Japan at that time, at ten cent rate. But to mail them now with that amount only prepaid, would lead to great delay and vexation.

MAIL KEYS.—We occasionally hear of mail keys being lost or mislaid by route agents and postmasters. We are greatly at a loss to know how this can occur, if proper care is taken of them. Accidents, of course, will happen in the best regulated institutions; but it is our impression, if proper caution were exercised such things would not happen. How is it?

ILLEGIBLE POSTMARKS.—The attention of postmasters has been frequently called to the shameful manner in which letters are stamped in some offices.

They are often so indistinct and illegible that a forty-horse-power magnifying glass would fail to decipher them.

The fault is either with the stamp or the stamper. If the former, it should be cleaned often as it becomes clogged, or renewed worn out; and if with the latter, he should be warned, and if still careless, he should be turned out.

UNITED STATES MAIL.

BACK NUMBERS OF THE MAIL.—Many of our new subscribers request us to begin their subscriptions with the January number. To such we would say, that we have no copies for that month left. In such cases, and in those where no direction is given, we commence with the February number.

To POSTMASTERS.—Frequent complaints are made to us, that postmasters fail to return Promptly to route agents the receipts forwarded to them with packages of stamps and stamped envelopes. The object of the Department in inaugurating this system, is to secure the safe delivery of this property to the office for which it is intended, or in the event of its loss or miscarriage, to facilitate its discovery, by tracing it from route to route, and from hand to hand. A receipt must not be held a moment longer than is necessary, and must be signed and sent back to the agent forthwith, and if not, by the first mail which will reach him.

A deviation from the rule will not be excused under any circumstances, except they are unqualifiedly unavoidable.

Post Office Business in the last Century.

An "Old Man" has been furnishing the Cincinati Times with a series of articles on old men and manners. The following extract will show how rapidly the country has advanced in postal affairs since the days of the Revolution:

Cincinnati was first settled in 1788, and during the first four years of its existence (it was then called Losantiville) there was no regular arrangement for carrying the mails. The few letters sent were mostly entrusted to the care of the soldiers, coming to or going from Fort Washington, the name of the military post at that place. In 1793 the town was deemed of sufficient importance to have a regularly established post-office; and Abner Dunn, one of the earliest settlers of the place, was the first dignitary who had the honor of signing "P. M." to his name. This was in 1793, and the post-office occupied a small end of a candle-box which he kept behind the whiskey barrel in one corner of his store; for, be it remembered, he was not only Postmaster, but a store-keeper, "Squire," carpenter, and a fiddler in addition thereto. Now, continues the Old Man, our merchants are quite angry if they do not get their letters in a little over thirty hours, while then it took more than twice that many days; the mail came and was sent only once a month, and even this was satisfactory to our "pioneer ancestors." They went on the idea that "part of a loaf was better than none," and had to rest contented. In those times the mail carriers had to be accompanied beyond "Fort Pitt," now the city of Pittsburg, by a squadron of horse, as the cavalry was then called, which made the sending of a letter rather expensive, the moderate sum of fifty cents for each half ounce being charged for postage to or from Philadelphia, and as the "old man" only got fifty cents a day for working, it is not probable that he sent very many letters concerning the sufferings of "Cupid."

Many times the Indians attacked the mails and escort, and captured the mail bag. Only one incident is now fresh in my mind, however, and this occurred about the time that Colonel Elliott was killed by the savages out near Fort Hamilton. The Indians of various tribes were gathering from all quarters, to make the attempt to drive the white man from their hunting grounds, and there was no chance to send couriers out to notify mail carriers of the impossibility of getting into the town. The latter, ignorant of the increased danger, arrived somewhere in the road between Chillicothe and Limestone (now Maysville) I think, about twenty-three miles from the latter town, when the fearful war-whoop of the savages was heard and the attack commenced. How well the ambuscade succeeded is best told by saying that of a party of fifteen only one lived to return and tell the tale of the fate of the party. The mail bag was stolen, and the only trace ever gained of it was that at the treaty of Greenville, which took place in 1795, or soon after "Mad Anthony Wayne" reduced the "poor lone Indian" to submission, two or three of the letters from the captured mail bag were given up, and a savage's narrative of how the affair occurred was told. Dunn did not fill the position of Postmaster very long, and was succeeded by William Maxwell, who was at the same time storekeeper lawyer and editor of the first, and, at that time only paper published west of the mountains Pittsburg, like tinkers, are fond of strolling, and if travelling will prevent it, they never allow moss to grow under their feet, or fill their pockets either.

Maxwell went out west soon after the Revolutionary war, when the mail route was established between Philadelphia and Pittsburg. Jacob Craft, the first mail agent or carrier on that route, died only a few weeks since at the advanced age of 99 years.

Maxwell, like all the disciples of Faust, was determined to travel, and came to our city, where we find him pursuing his multifarious callings. For fear some of Maxwell's grandchildren may now be occupying the position of fighting editor of some paper, or else Member of Congress, and for fear that disagreeable consequences might follow if the "Old Man" should say aught in disparagement of Ex-P. M. Maxwell, it will be only safe to say that, like all printers, he paid his debts [don't laugh, typos] dressed well, drank freely of beverages considerably stronger than Adam's ale, and could outrun or jump or throw down any man in the settlement, and this was saying a good deal in his behalf, when you know that in those days a man was nowhere if he couldn't whip a grizzly bear.

Daniel Mayo, an old Revolutionary soldier, succeeded Maxwell, and held the position for a few years, when he removed to Newport, Ky., and held the same office for many years. Major Wm. Ruffin succeeded Mayo in 1797, and his greatest ambition was to live to see Cincinnati as populous and as prosperous as Lexington, Ky., which, as he lived till 1834, he saw many times over. The Major's oldest son is still in the Post Office at Cincinnati. The Major himself was removed from the office in 1814, and the appointment was given to the Rev. Judge Wm. Burke, familiarly known as Father Burke, an eccentric old man, who could preach louder, longer, and better than any other minister who has ever been in the city. He went out West as a Methodist minister, but after some years he got tired of the itinerant system of that church, which he left and started an independent one of his own in the city. He often got himself in "scrapes" by his peculiar and decided notions on church polity and politics.

[Concluded in our next.]

☞ The following address, on a letter from London [intended for "Mrs. Howard, South Highland St., opposite Hall St."], shews how "the ruling passion" for H-dropping is sometimes developed in a very queer way by the good folks in the "[H] old country:"

Miscellaneous Information.

Dead Letters.

Letters not addressed, or so badly addressed that their destination cannot be known.

Letters misdirected to places where there are no post offices.

Only such letters as are herein described are, when deposited in any post office, to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office; all others must be dispatched to their destination, charged with the amount of unpaid postage.

When unmailable letters are sent to the Dead Letter Office, the specific reason therefor must be endorsed upon the envelops of each.

These instructions will be strictly followed at all post offices.

For more full instructions relating to dead letters, advertising letters, &c., examine carefully Chap. 35, Regulations of 1866, and Sections 1 and 2, Act of June 12, 1866.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any question as to prepayment, by this simple criterion.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore, decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents, per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established, the rate is 1 ct.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the p. m. must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications, the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of news papers, magazines and periodicals at regular subscribers) sent via Overland Mail, is to be charged at letter postage rates.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, and scions,) the postage to be pre-paid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows—"The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in this strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (except bills and receipts for subscription) in, or to write or print anything, after its publication, upon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, is illegal, and subjects such printed matter, and the entire package of which it is a part, to letter postage.

Any word or communication, whether by printing, writing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper of a newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the person to whom it is to be sent, and the date when subscription expires, subjects the package to letter postage.

NOTICE TO POSTMASTERS.

THE undersigned respectfully solicits attention to his system of keeping, rendering and collecting Newspaper and Box accounts. He offers it as the result of twelve years' experience in the difficulties, vexations and uncertainties of keeping these accounts in accordance with Postal Law and Regulations, so well understood and painfully realized by Postmasters and their assistants.

The author is confident that in this system will be found a most valuable auxiliary, and one long needed in this perplexing branch of official duty. The advantages of it are, its simplicity, certainty, celerity, and cheapness. It is IN EXACT AND FULL ACCORDANCE with the requisitions of Postal Law, and renders compliance with the regulations of the Department in regard to these accounts, and their Quarterly Return, easy, certain, and with little comparative cost of time and labor.

The blank forms are on folio sheets of the usual size of Post Office blanks, and are arranged to embrace a period of four years.

From ten to fifteen sheets are sufficient to last that period for offices of the Fifth and Fourth classes, and will be sent together with a copy of the explanations, directions and examples, by mail, post paid, as follows:

For Ten Sheets ..... $1 50.
For Fifteen Sheets ..... 2 00.

After which Postmasters ordering in quantities of from Ten to Twenty sheets will be furnished by mail, post paid, at the rate of $8.00 per 100 sheets.

The blank form for Postage Receipts on inferior paper will be furnished in sheets in those ordering them, at the rate of $4.00 per 100 sheets, comprising about 1000 Receipts. Postage paid on orders not exceeding 25 sheets.

Over these quantities, for large offices, an additional amount, to cover Postage, will be required.

These soliciting sample sheets are informed, that a correct idea of the system can be formed only by the explanations and directions which with the blank sheets comprise the work, and can be sent only as advertised.

The work is issued in the cheapest possible form, that its adoption may be very general.

COMMENDATIONS FROM POSTMASTERS.

P. O. Olean, N. Y.—"I consider it indispensable to the correct keeping of the Paper and Box Rent Accounts according to Postal Law; its simplicity and the facility with which those accounts are kept by your system, renders it a benefaction to Postmasters."

P. O. Orono, Me.—"For cheapness, certainty, and simplicity, I think it unsurpassed by any work which I have seen, and is fully adapted to a ready compliance with the requirements of Postal Law and Regulations. I would earnestly recommend it to all

POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. VII., No. 8. NEW YORK, MAY, 1867. WHOLE No. 80

The New Registry System.

It is probable that before the next number of this paper reaches our subscribers, those of them who are postmasters will have received from the Department a copy of the new Regulatinns concerning the Registration of Letters, together with a supply of the necessary blanks and of the "Registered Package Envelopes," which form a very prominent feature of the new system. We take this occasion to call their attention to some of the more important details to which it will be necessary to give careful heed in carrying out the new regulations. All of those regulations are important; but the neglect of some of them may be perhaps attended with more serious results (to him who neglects them, at least) than would the neglect of others. It will be distinctly understood that the system is not to go into operation until the first day of June, up to that date the old system will be continued. In the mean time it will be well to be prepared to act under them, so that when postmasters begin to register letters according to the provisions, they will be sure to remember—

1. That the registry fee is to be paid in stamps (attached to the letter and cancelled) instead of in money, as heretofore. This applies to all registry fees—the twenty cent fee on letters to eny part of the United States, England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and the Island of Jamaica—or the five cent fee on letters to Canada or Germany. Ten cent and five cent stamps for this purpose can be obtained from the Department by ordering in the usual manner through the Third Assistant Postmaster General; and it is not improbable that twenty cent stamps will hereafter be issued. Two ten cent stamps will of course answer for the prepayment of the twenty cent fee. If a postmaster is unprovided with them, he can use three cent and two cent stamps until a supply of tens can be obtained.

2. That after enclosing registered letters in a "Registered Package Envelope" for mailing, it is not to be wrapped in paper or tied up with nther letters, but is to be securely sealed and thrown loose into the pouch. The object of this is that the first person whose duty it is to open the pouch—whether it be a route agent, railway post office clerk, or a clerk in a post office—cannot fail to see the Registered Package Envelope, and make a record, as the Regulations require, of its number, postmark and address. This Registered Package Envelope is of large size, with twn broad scarlet stripes printed lengthwise across both face and back. It is so made in order that it may be conspicuous and easily distinguishable from all other mail matter; and if postmasters wrap it in paper or cover it in a bundle with other letters, this object will of course be defeated.

3. That the "Registered Letter Bill" and "Return Blli" (which are printed on one sheet) must not be separated at the mailing office, but must be filled up and sent together in an ordinary envelope directed to the postmaster of the office to which the registered letter or letters to which the bills refer is to be sent. This envelope is not to be put inside the Registered Package Enveiope, but must be sent by the same mail, among the ordinary letters.

4. That a postmaster is expected never to allow himself to "run short" of "Registered Package Enveiopes." If by an unexpected demand, however, such a thing should happen, he can borrow from a neighboring postmaster until a new supply (which should be ordered at once) can be obtained, when he must return what he has borrowed.

5. That no attention is to be paid to any request (written or verbal) of the writer of a registered letter to "mail it direct," except it is directed to an office to which it is proper to mail direct. And it is not proper to mail any registered letter direct, if a distributing post office lies on the route to the office to which it is directed. The practice which too many postmastere at offices far West and South indulge in of mailing registered letters "direct" to offices at the East and North should be discontinued at once and altogether—in fact it must be. If any ono inelsts on baving his registered letter mailed "direct," when the regulatione require it to be sent to a distributing post office, refer him to "some other shop,"—no poetal servant of Uncle Sam being allowed to "do bueinese in that way."

6. That the importance of entering on the "Record of Registerd Matter in Transit" every Registered Package Envelope or registered package of stampe or envelopes which passes through a post office on its route to deetination, cannot be over-estimated. A failure to do this will be certain to cause trouhle, and repeated neglect in this matter will be taken ae an intimation that the offending postmaster is tired of his office, and desires its dutles to be transferred to some other citizen. It may moreover lead to disagreeable suspicions in some cases. It will be remembered that this "Record" is liable to be demanded for hispection at any time by a Special Agent.

7. That postmasters at those offices where a pouch is first opened after being delivered from a railroad, must sign the receipts which he will find in the ponch with any Registered Package Envelopes which may be contained in the pouch, and return such receipts by mail in an envelope directed to the Route Agent or Railway P. O. Clerk by whom the pouch was delivered.

There are several other matters connected with the new system of which we will find time to speak hereafter.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO.

Between infancy and senility, the great starting and stopping places along the high way nf human life, we rarely linger and look back on the hither journey, until our mental milestones tell us we have reached its summit, and whence the thither way is downward.

Seated on this ideal acclivity, the mind runs prone through the long forgotten memories of buried years, until link by link the chain of events which made us what we are, is resurrected and in bold relief stand out along the line our deeds of praise or blame; and be to whom the view is pleasing, no matter what his rank or condition, revels in reveriss of supreme delight, surpassing conception or description.

Foiled ambition, ruinous pecuniary and political speculations, adverae results in love and law, mistaken confidences, bad investments of friendship, sympathy, and money, and a thousand otber disappointments, which rise to plague and bewilder retrospection, and be who can review his record without finding very much to wisb undone or unsaid is one of ten thousand, and "altogether lovely." Not that he has necessarily been tainted by crime, nor that in a moment of forgetfulness he has strayed very far away from the path of rectitude, propriety or virtue—but the proclivity to err is so innate with humanity, that not a descendant of Adam but has something to atone for, something to weep for, something to regret.

"Like the apples on the Dead Sea shore

But the question is, who is this representative man, who, bumanly speaking, bas left no duty of life unfulfilled? Is it the Parson? Possibly, but yet he has had enough congregational jangles and tangles to make retrospection unpleasant! Is it the Lawyer? Not much! Is it the Physician—let the church yard answer! Is lt the merchant? Is lt? Is it the Manufacturer? Who knows? Is it tbe Agriculturist? I decline to commit myself—for one who communes so constantly and so nearly with nature, should draw correspondingly ncar to nature's God. Is it the Politician? It may be—but upon my conscience I cannot see it! Who is lt then? In my whimsical way of arriving at conclusions without assigning any reason for the faith that is in me, I announce that man to be a present or past Postmaster, who has discharged or is now discharging all the duties incident to his position, and who has a proper appreciation of the trusts and confidence it involves—and who has attained this enviable position by following a thoroughfare open to any postal official. The advantages bestowed on a community by promptness, carefulness and kindness reach far beyond the precincts of the post office—and no institution public or private can so affect all classes by its management, good or bad—and no man can eo strengthen himself or weaken himeelf—or prepare himeelf for censure or blessinge, as a postmaster. Now I don't profess to know much about it—but lt strikes me it is just as easy to run an office right ae wrong, satisfactorily to society as the reverse—but yet it is not always done so, and that is the reason perhaps that all have not quiet conecinecee. The live postmaster is not eatisfied that his business is carefully and promptly performed inside his office—but hie responsibilities he religiously believes extend beyond euch antiquated land marks; etage drivers, messengers and carriers who have mails entrusted to them for safe keeping and conveyance, are, to his mind, as proper subjects for his supervision, instruction and direction, as the members of his own immediate official family, and he never falls to rebuke and correct improper conduct wben the contingency ariece.

The stage driver of to-day le a totally different person from the Johu of the pre-railway period. Then he belonged to a distinctive class—a fraternity so identified with the mail service of the country ex-officio, that a mutual veneration seemed to exiet between the drivers and the mail-bags, over which they exercised, while in their charge, the most autocratic vigilance. The position, according to their mode of thinking, was a proud and honorable one, and in many eases descended from sire to son as naturally as an entailed inheritance, and a show of disrespect to their precious charge—the mails—was considered as gross an attack upon their professional honor that it was resented at once in the most fierce and determined manner. Now it is different. Modern modes of travel have driven the stage-coach proper from all the important routes, and a class of vehicles, dreadfully demoralized, is only used on short routes between railway stations and steamboat landings, and interior towns and villagss. The passenger patronage on most of these roads is very precarious, and a subsidy from the government for carrying the mail between such points is the only sure dependence for the support of the line. Everything is got up cheap—cheap wagons, cheap horses, and cheap drivers—and so long as postmasters along the route are indifferent as to when or how a mail arrives, or whether it arrives at all or not, what need the drivers care, who are changed monthly perhaps?

The old-fashioned stage driver, believing in eternal vigilance, used it—the modern one detests it, and "dislikes to see it round." A mail pouch to the former was as sacred as a casket of gems; to the latter it is nothing more than an old leather bag—to be kicked and cuffed and fumbled about because it is in the way of a passenger's feet some time, or because it takes up the room of a pot of butter, a basket of eggs or a bundle of rural periodicals.

The unchided treatment of these depositories of letters and papers breeds an indifference to their safety which is directly chargeable to the post offices where they are received and delivered—and if crime don't show itself in some shape along such ronte, it is because there is nothing tempting enough to incite it.

It won't do for some of these functionaries to look back—they'll see "snaix" sure.

A stage driver and a mail carrier knows the efficient officer from the inefficient one, and they have more respect for the strict disciplinarian—although he be dependent upon his salary for his subsistence—than they have for the shiftless, negligent and indifferent fellow who holds the office for the honor of the thing, and is able to live without it. Every conscientious postmaster, as I eaid before, feels it to be his duty to look after the mail service in his own immediate department—inside and outside his office—to remedy evils if there be any; correct abuses as they occur, and exercise such watchfulness over drivers, messeugers and carriers as will prevent trouble and delay, and thus keep them in a proper condition for the business they are doing; or, falling in that, see to it that the right men are selected for such places.

I could tell you who don't do it, bnt it might be intruding.

MONS. TONSON.

Hurrying Home.

Railway Post Office clerks and route agents are certainly not to be blamed if, as they approach the "home" end of their routes, they feel eager to reach as soon as possible the domestic roof, and exchange for a while their reponsible, hazardous and laborious duties for the rest end comfort which await them there—to leave the jerking, rattling, dusty car for the pleasant sitting room—to toss their rosy children in their arms in lieu of the grimy mail-pouches—and to listen to the "cricket on the hearth" instead of the discordant shriek of the engine, commanding "down brakes!" or warning errant cattle from the track. No one who is familiar with the nature of their duties will eay aught against this desire to make the most of the intervals between their long and not very pleasant journeys. At any rate, we will not.

But there is a word that we will say: and that is, that this very natural anxiety should not lead to the neglect of a very important duty, viz: that of making a thorough and careful search, before leaving the car, for letters and packagee that in the course of the journey may have been accidentally left in the boxes or drawers. It has happened more than once of late that packagee of letters have been sent to a post office at the terminus of a long route by railway officials, who reported them as having been found by brakemen and sweepers in a Railway Poet Office car lately vacated by the clerks in charge. And there is, unfortunately, reason to believe that some letters, so found, have not been sent to a post office at all, but have met with a very different fate. The same ie true of some route agents' mail-cars. Will those whom it may concern please take a note of theee facts, and not leave their cars until they have made eure that no letters or packages are lurking in out of the way corners to tempt the curiosity or cupidity of those to whose care the ears are to be reaigned?

"Railroad Business."

The following letter, addressed by the Postmaster General to the President of a prominent Railroad Company, will serve to correct the erroneous views on the subject to which it reintes, which appear to have been held by many others than the gentleman to whom it is specially addressed. That the simple endorsement of a letter with the words "Railroad Business—Free," entitles it to be carried by a railroad company over its road outside of the mail, without a violation of the postal laws, is a delusion which has deprived the Department of a not inconsiderable revenue, and which needs to be dispelled—as it effectually is by this letter:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
April 4th, 1867.

Sir:—I have received your letter of the 13th ult. relative to the carrying of letters on the business of railroads over which the mails are carried, without the payment of postage.

You must bear in mind that the Postmaster General, like any other executive officer, must perform his duty according to his own interpretation of the law.

The laws on this subject, (see Postal Laws, Chap. 9,) from the organic law of 3d March, 1825, to the present time, are uniform in intent and meaning.

The latest enactment is that of 3d March, 1845, (5 Stats. at Large, 735.) The ninth section of this act, (see Sec. 194 Postal Laws, and following Secs.) prohibits the conveyance, by private express, of mailable matter, and makes such conveyance a special offence, for which a fine of $150 shall be exacted and paid. The tenth section forbids the conveyance of mailable matter, in any manner outside of the mails, upon any stage-coach, railroad car, steamboat, packet-boat, or other vehicle or vessel, carrying the mail at stated periods on post routes, except such as relate to some part of the cargo or freight at the same time conveyed. The same section also affixes a penalty on the owners of such conveyences of $100, and on the driver, captain or conductor of $50.

The eleventh section prohibits vehicles or vessels carrying the mail from transporting over mail routes persons who are engaged in carrying letters contrary to law. This section makes an exception in favor of persons who carry letters without compensation.

By act of Congress of August 31, 1852, (10 Stats., 141,) (see Sec. 300 Postal Laws and note,) stamped envelopes were authorized, it having been found that this was the best, if not the only way of preventing frauds which resulted in the very considerable reduction of the revenue of the Department. The same act authorized the Postmaster General to allow mailable matter placed in stamped envelopes to be carried out of the mail. This was intended for the convenience of merchants and traders who often desire to send letters by special messengers and other persons over regular mail routes.

1. It follows from this, first, that it has been the uniform policy of Congress, since 1825, to prohibit the transmission of letters except through the mails, and to affix a penalty for the violation of the law.

2. That in order to protect the Post Office Department from frauds, and also to promote the convenience of the business public, stamped envelopes were authorized, and mailable matter therein contained could be carried out of the mails, and that these envelopes have been largely used for such purposes.

3. That there is no authority vested in the Postmaster General to change or modify the law, and that as railroad corporations stand on the same footing as other business firms and corporations, they must be subject to the same laws.

4. That the only relief from this postage tax that can be afforded to railroad companies must come through Congress. A new law may be passed which will afford the desired relief; but it must be acknowledged that no law could be framed which would not give the same privilege to steamboat, stage-coach and canal lines.

It will not be pretended that the employees of railroads who carry these letters carry them "without compensation." It is made part of their duty by the officers of the company, and should they refuse to perform that duty they would be immediately discharged.

I note your suggestion—"Did Congress intend that these great arteries of commerce, built at great expense, should not have a self-existence—an authority to support themselves?—an unquestionable right of operating their own property conditioned that no infringement should be made on the organic power—the government?"

To this I can only reply, that by tranemitting such letters as you mention over a mail route, the railroads do infringe the law of the land; and that if Congress had intended to confer the franking privilege upon railroad officers a law would have been passed to that effect. There is no reason, that I am aware of, why railroads should be exempt from a poetal tax that le paid universally by other corporatione.

I am of the opinion that the construction placed upon the law by the Third Assistant Postmaster General was correct under the existing law; and that it is my duty to compel all officers and employees of railroad corporations, as well as other mail contractors, to pay upon all letters not relating to freight or cargo at the same time conveyed, the same postal tax on mailable matter as is paid by other corporations, by express companies, by merchants, traders and manufacturers.

Respectfully,

(Signed.) ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

Editorial Chit-Chat.

Among our letters we find one containing a suggestion that postmasters should be required to keep a list of letters missent to their respective offices, and that a copy of this list be sent to the Department. Our correspondent thinks such a course would be productive of more benefit than reporting delinquency in cancelling stamps, as required by section 177, Reg. 1866. He enforces his argument by stating that during the month of December, 1866, "there were twenty-two letters sent to this [his] office for delivery which were distinctly addressed to other offices, while for the quarter ending December 31st, there was but one letter received with the postage stamps uncancelled." The missending of letters should certainly be avoided, and the plan proposed above, might help to lessen the evil. If, however, postmasters would properly mark and postmark missent letters, according to Section 70, Reg. 1866, very much would be accomplished towards attaining that result. . . . We have two or three letters on "box-rents," which we can best answer by referring all interestad to chapter XLII, Reg. 1866. This chapter contains all the information we can give, and if any postmaster thinks its provisions unjust, we can only remind him that until the law is repealed no one has authority to disregard its requirements. Another friend wants to know, "if in case people will not rent a box, he is obliged to run and look over a pile of mail matter every time a person inquires." We answer "Yes, and do it obligingly and cheerfully." . . . . A correspondent, who "has been a preacher of the gospel for about 40 years," and is now a postmaster in addition, feels somewhat aggrieved that his letters are often addressed with Esq. We can only suggest that this is one of the incidents of office. The public seldom associate a preacher and postmaster in one and the same person. He also inquires, "how he shall obtain his salary, in case there is not enough money paid into his office for the purpose." He will be paid by special draft from the Department; but "Postmasters should at once explain to the First Assistant Postmaster General why their offices do not pay expenses." . . . . A postmaster requests his deputy to ask us "if a postmaster or his deputy, in any of the middle States, can travel in mail stages, free of charge, and to tell him all about it." Neither postmasters nor their assistants can by virtue of their offices, travel free of charge in mail conveyances, and that is all about it. . . . We are asked to "explain the propriety of the Postmaster General urging upon postmasters the duty of selling government envelopes." We must decline discussing the propriety of an officer of the Department doing his duty, but we will give two good reasons why postmasters should comply with the Postmaster General's "urging." The use of such envelopes is a complete security against letters being "Held for Postage," and very greatly facilitates "making up mails." We must remind our correspondent that his private business should not interfere with his official duties. . . . In reply to several inquiries and complaints about salaries, we refer correspondents to the Postmaster General. The salaries of postmasters being regulated by the business of the respective offices, it is impossible for us to give any advice in individual cases. . . . We have had enclosed to us a circular—in which the New York post office is called "a rotten affair"—with the inquiry "Can circulars like the enclosed pass over the country unpunished?" We presume the gentleman (?), expressing, but not having, such a poor opinion of the New York post office, is amenable to the law; but he is so well known to the police to be, himself, "rotten," and engaged in swindling, that no notice can be taken of him, or of his circular.

THE FRENCH POST OFFICE.—The following is told in connection with the Poste Restante Department of the Parie Post Office:

One day a gentleman, who showed great agitation, and dragging by the arm a young lady in a half fainting condition, entered the bureau and asked in a fierce tone if there was a letter for Madame L——. The clerk carefully went over the packet from the L pigeon hole: "Nothing for Madame L——." An hour afterward the young lady returned, this time alone, and almost tremblingly approached the counter. The clerk saw her, and before she had time to speak, "Here is your letter, Madam; on no account whatever could I deliver it to any one but yourself." Madame L——, adds M. Dacamp, has entertained the very highest regard for the poste restante ever since.

☞ The route agent who le reading this paper (having taken it from its wrapper for that purpose) will please be sure to return it before the train reaches the station at which the pouch to which it belongs is delivered. The publisher suggests that he would be pleased to mail it regularly to said route agent's address on receipt of the subscription price.

The Postmaster-General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

THE NEW REGISTRATION SYSTEM.—The following circular has been addressed to postmasters by the Third Assistant Postmaster General, to accompany the first supply of the "Registered Package Envelopes," which are to be used in connection with the new Registry system, which goes into operation on the first of next month:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
FINANCE OFFICE, April, 1867.

Sir,—You are hereby directed to put the new system of Registration of Letters into operation at your office on the 1st day of June next. Instructions and all necessary blanks for the purpose have been forwarded to you.

Section 14 of the Instructions, so far as it relates to the use, at DISTRIBUTING OFFICES, of "canvas registered letter bags," will be disregarded until otherwise directed.

A blank for this purpose is annexed to the receipt herewith, which you will separate and retain until required for use.

Respectfully yours,
A. N. ZEVELY,
Third Assistant Postmaster General.

N. B.—An error will be observed in the heading of some of the Return Registered Letter Receipts, the word "Bill" having been printed for the word "Receipt," which will be corrected in the future.

Outsiders in Mail-Cars.

The following notice, printed in large type, has just been issued by the Department for distribution to Route Agents and Postal Railway Clerks, to be posted in a conspicuous place in their mail-cars. We hope it will be remembered that these notices are not intended for ornament, but for use:

NO ADMITTANCE.

This Car being appropriated to the use of the Postal Service exclusively, it is strictly forbidden that any person whatever, not connected with nor having authority from the Post Office Department, be allowed to enter or remain herein. Conductors or other employees of the Railroad Company may pass through on the business of the road, but must not be permitted to remain. All other persons must be rigidly excluded.

Railway Postal Clerks and Route Agents are required to enforce the observance of this order; and any instance of a failure on their part to do so will be deemed a sufficient cause for dismissal. GEO. WM. McLELLAN,
Second Assistant Postmaster General.

APPROVED:
A. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

The Increase of Salaries.

The Postmaster General, in issuing the orders which we publish in another column, materially increasing the salaries of post-office clerks, carriers, route-agents and post-office railway clerks, has established a title to the gratitude not only of those immediately interested, but to that of every one who desires the increased efficiency of the postal service. Overworked, underpaid men have never been remarkable for zeal and fidelity in any vocation; and we do not believe that in any field of private enterprise or in any branch of the public service (in this country) have the working force been so inadequately compensated as in the post-office. The "self-supporting" theory—now happily exploded—has heretofore demanded that the real object of the postal establishment—the carrying and delivery of the people's correspondence safely and expeditiously—should be made subordinate to the saving of sixpences, and this necessitated the application of the screw to those subordinates who were least able to bear its pressure. Concerning the results of this policy, some exceedingly plain English might be written, which task, however, we must leave to the future historian. Governor Randall's course in this matter has been wise and just—we trust that all concerned will endeavor to prove it so by increased attention to their duties and fidelity to their obligations.

POST ROUTE MAPS.—The first series of Post Route Maps, compiled in the office of the Second Assistant Postmaster General, embracing the mail service of the New England States, (with the exception of the eastern part of the State of Maine,) will be ready for issue during the present month.

In our next number we shall describe the extent of distribution of these maps proposed to be made by the Department, and the terms on which they will be for sale to the general public.

CROWDED OUT.—Some of our subscribers who have sent us questions on official matters must excuse us until next month—as the pressure on our columns has left us no room for reply in this number.

☞ Subscribers sending for back numbers of the Mail to complete their files, should not forget to enclose the price. None of less recent date than January last can now be furnished.

Written Postmarks.

In our remarks, last month, concerning the importance of plainly postmarking all letters, we had especially in view those offices at which the postmarks are affixed by marking stamps. There are many small offices, however, which are not supplied with these, and at which the postmark is written. This should always be done very plainly—and the name of the State should always be added to that of the post office. On many letters which we receive from such offices this is omitted; and as the date of the letter is usually incomplete in the same respect, trouble and delay in answering are often the result.

While on this subject we will remind postmasters that a plain postmark—whether written or printed—must be attached to the "Registered Package Envelopes" (the use of which is to be commenced on the first of next month) before they are mailed. Postmasters who are not supplied with marking stamps, and who write their postmarks on those envelopes, will be careful to insert the State in all cases. We will add, that postmasters who desire to avoid all mistakes or omissions in this matter will find in our advertising columns the information that for a very small sum they can obtain from Mr. E. S. Zevely, of Cumberland, Md., a good marking-stamp and a supply of ink.

All post offices entitled to marking stamps can obtain them by applying to the Department.

Answers to Correspondents.

[Subscribers will greatly oblige us, and often save time and trouble, if they will, before sending us inquiries to be answered in this column, consult the various standing articles in the Mail under the heads of "Miscellaneous Information," "Domestic Postages," &c., &c., for information on the subject in regard to which they are in doubt. We receive a great number of questions, answers to which could readily be found by attending to this request.]

1. Order Increasing Salary.—J. R. B., B—, Iowa.—The law expressly provides that any change made in a salary shall not take effect until the first day of the quarter next following the order allowing such change. Sec. 29, Laws of 1866.

2. Postage on Zephyr Worsted, &c.—M. E. C., M——, N. Y.—The postage on zephyr worsted should be charged at letter rates, so also on spruce gum, and on newspapers containing letters. See Sec. 222 of Laws of 1866 for a description of "mailable matter," and Sec. 245 for the rate on "all matter not enumerated as mailable matter, but which nevertheless shall be mailed." See also Secs. 212 to 217, Reg. 1866. 2. Letters addressed to fictitious persons or firms are not deliverable, but should be sent to the Dead Letter Office at the end of each month. Sec. 60, Reg. 1866. Letters addressed to a person in prison should be delivered on his order. 3. An account is to be kept of the number of letters received for delivery the last week of each quarter.

3. Wrapping Letters—C. P., G——, Ala.—Postmasters will wrap packages of letters, unless their offices are supplied in whole or in part by railway post offices; in which case they will be governed by special instructions from the superintendent of the railway service. Sec. 88, Reg. 1866.

4. Monthly Reports, &c.—M. C. E., T—— Ill.—1. Monthly reports of mails sent and received are not required, but transcripts of these accounts must form a part of your Quarterly Return; read attentively chapters XXVII. and XXVIII of Reg. of 1866. 2. You charge only on insufficiently prepaid matter that comes to your office for delivery, and not on matter passing through it. These charges must be entered on the "Account of Undercharges." You also charge on all insufficiently prepaid matter mailed at your office, but these charges are made on your "Account of Mails Sent," and collected at the office of delivery.

5. Delivery of Letters Addressed to Fictitious Persons—J. P., S——, Mass.—Letters and packages addressed to fictitious persons or firms, or to no particular person or firm, not being deliverable according to the Regulations, are to be returned at the end of each month to the Dead Letter Office. Sec. 60, Reg. 1866.

6. Changing Mails.—J. M., H——, Pa.—You are mistaken in thinking you are paid to handle only one mail; you are paid to handle as many as may be necessary.

7. Fees on Registered Letters.—W. M. M., S—— S——, Ga.—1. It would be as difficult to tell why the fees on registered letters differ, as to tell why rates of postage differ; you undoubtedly understand that twenty cents is the fee to any part of the United States. Sec. 352, Reg. 1866. 2. The registry fee is twenty cents, in addition to the postage charge. 3. We cannot tell the class of your office unless we know the salary. See Sec. 28, Laws of 1866. 4. Money order offices are established by express regulations, and at no other offices will the issue of money orders be allowed. 5. For the manner of supplying your office with mails you will have instructions from the Department.

8. Responsibility for Lost Registered Letters.—J. H., G——, Ill.—Money and other valuables sent by mail, even if registered, are at the risk of the owner. Sec. 456, Reg. 1866.

9. Letters not to be Advertised.—M. S. N., G—— V——, Cal.—Unclaimed letters dropped into your office by other parties should not be advertised. Since the 1st of October, 1866, advertising in newspapers has been restricted to first-class offices; all others must advertise by putting up manuscript lists. Sec. 364, Reg. 1866, and Act of June 12, 1866.

10. Delivery of a Registered Letter.—H. P. O., N—— M——, Mass.—"A registered letter should be delivered only to the person to whom it is addressed, or to some person whom the postmaster knows is authorized to receive it." In your case it would be as well to notify the person to whom the letter is addressed of the request made by the writer, and if the person addressed then requires you on his order to deliver the letter to another, you will be obliged to do so. Sec. 358, Reg. 1866.

11. Mutilated Currency—J. W., C—— H——, N. C.—You can send mutilated currency, in amounts of not less than three dollars, to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington D. C., and receive other money for it

12. Post Office Directory.—J. J. P., P——, Ky., and H. L., F——, Mc.—The last Department edition of "A List of Post Offices," was furnished to all offices free; it is, however, some years since it was published. We would recommend you to purchase a copy of the "List" just issued, and advertised in our paper last month. Price, $2.00. Address J. Disturnell, Cooper Institute, New York.

13. Postal Laws and Regulations.—W. E. C., St. C——, Mo., and S. R., B——, Mo.—The Postal Laws and Regulations of 1866 are furnished to postmasters and charged in their accounts, at $2 per copy.

14 Franking Privilege—J. C., W——, Pa., and F. C. J., R——, N. Y., and others.—A list of the persons entitled to the franking privilege can be found in section 124, Reg. 1866; it must be understood that the franking privilege extends to correspondence sent to as well as by the person possessing it. In addition to the persons named in the list referred to, section 65 of the Internal Revenue Law, approved July 13, 1866, provides that the following officers may frank official communications, viz.: Assessors to Assessors, Assistant-Assessors and Collectors; Assistant-Assessors to Assessors; Collectors to Assessors, Collectors and Deputy Collectors; Deputy Collectors to Collectors.

15. Forwarding Franked Mail Matter.—P. O. Clerk, A——, Me.—Franked mail matter after having been delivered to the party addressed cannot be forwarded free to another post office under the original frank. Chap. xv., Reg. 1866.

16. Oath of Mail Carrier.—A. S., E—— P——, Texas.—The oath taken by mail contractors, carriers, &c., usually mentions the number and the termini of the route; consequently an oath would be required on every change of route.

17. Salary of Fourth Class Offices, &c.—J. A., N—— B——, O.—1. The salary of offices of the fourth class is fixed at less than one thousand dollars, and not less than one hundred dollars. Sec. 28, Laws of 1866. 2. Postage must be charged on foreign and drop letters when forwarded.

18. Postage on a Club of "Papers Published in the County"—F. B. H., M—— V——, N. H.—A package of papers to one address cannot pass free through the mails, even in the county of publication.

19. Disposition of Unclaimed Foreign Papers.—M. O. B., C——, N. Y.—"Books and unpaid foreign pamphlets, newspapers, and other printed matter, when refused or unclaimed beyond the usual time, (5 to 8 weeks,) must be returned to the Dead Letter Office with the regular weekly or monthly returns." Sec. 390, Reg. 1866.

20. Duration of Franking Privilege.—S. W., I—— C——, Iowa.—The franking privilege of members of Congress commences with the term for which they are elected, and expires on the first Monday of December following such term. Sec. 265 A, Laws 1866.

21. Postage on Specimens of Writing, &c.—N. S. W., L——, Pa.—Manuscript specimens of writing should be charged at letter rates, and books containing drawings at book rates; but drawings in sheets at the rates for "miscellaneous matter, except unsealed circulars and books." Sec. 204, Reg. 1866.

22.—Daily Papers sent Once a Week, &c.—A. B. K., E——, O——. 1. A daily paper sent to a regular subscriber must be prepaid either at quarterly rates at the mailing or delivery office, or at transient rates, by stamps, at mailing office only. A publisher can send papers to subscribers by baggage-master or express five days in the week, and by mail the sixth day, if he chooses; but unless transient rates are prepaid by stamps on the copies sent on that day, full quarterly postage (daily paper rates) must be prepaid by him or the subscriber. 2. The twenty cents registry fee is exclusive of the postal charge, and of course in addition to it. That is, on a registered letter you charge the proper postage and the registry fee of twenty cents in addition. 3. There is no one connected with the Department whom you can address on general subjects. "Every postmaster, in addressing the Department, should write the name of his office, county and State at the head of his letter, and avoid writing upon more than ONE SUBJECT in the same letter. He must then postmark his letter, and address it to the proper bureau." Sec. 34, Reg. 1866.

23. Postage on Magazines.—F. L., A——, Va.—"Newsdealers may pay the postage on their packages of newspapers and periodicals as received, at the same rates that actual subscribers thereto pay quarterly in advance," (Sec. 202, Reg. 1866); and this applies also to news agents sending packages. Sec. 225, Reg. 1866. Magazines are regarded as periodicals; hence the transient postages for a weight of over 4 to 8 ozs. would be 4 cts.

24. Packages of Papers to Subscribers.—E. R. P., W——, O.—There is no law prohibiting persons receiving their papers by express. In your case, if you prefer to receive them by mail, the best way to avoid discussion with your postmaster, is to have the package made up without subscribers' names and addressed to you, you can then pay the postage on each package as received, at the same rates that subscribers would pay quarterly in advance, (see Sec. 202, Reg. 1866,) or you can hand a list of the names of the club, with the postage for a quarter in advance, to your postmasters, and it will then be his duty to deliver the papers to their respective owners. Sec. 203, Reg. 1866. But postmasters are not allowed to demand more than a quarter's postage in advance, unless the quarterly postage shall be due at any other time than the beginning of a quarter, in which case the postage should be collected to the end of the next following quarter, nor can they collect more than one year's postage in advance. Sec. 154, Reg. 1866.

25. Post Office Accounts—M. B. T., W——, Kansas.—The original accounts, and not copies, are to be kept in the office two years or more. Transcripts or copies, should be sent to the Department, according to Chapters XXVII to XXXI, Reg. 1866.

26. Obtaining Increased Compensation.—J. T. W., S—— E——, Iowa—For information on this subject, we refer you to the Postal Law of June 12, 1866, and the accompanying Instructions, published in the Mail for July, 1866.

27. Request Letters, &c.—W. H. C., A——, Mich.—1. Act of June 12, 1866, provides that letters shall be forwarded, and request letters returned, free of postage. This applies, however, only to domestic and mail, and not to foreign and drop letters. 2. Sec. 392, Reg. 1866, in the "regulation provided by the Postmaster General" for carrying out section 286 of Laws, and if you follow this you will have done all that is required of you, in the matter of notifying publishers.

BOGUS GOLD MINING COMPANIES.—Postmasters will do well to beware of being entrapped by circulars addressed to them from these concerns.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

Dead Letters.

Letters attempted to be sent with stomps previously used, or stomps cut from stamped envelopes.

Letters not addressed, or so badly addressed that their destination cannot be known.

Letters misdirected to places where there are no post offices.

Civilian's letters, (domestic) wholly unpaid, (including unpaid drop letters)

Only such letters as are herein described are, when deposited in any post office, to be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office; all others must be dispatched to their destination, charged with the amount of unpaid postage.

When unmailable letters are sent to the Dead Letter Office, the specific reason therefor must be endorsed upon the envelope of each.

These instructions will be strictly followed at all post offices.

For more full instructions relating to dead letters, advertising letters, &c., examine carefully Chap. 35, Regulations of 1866, and Sections 1 and 2, Act of June 12, 1866.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any questions as to prepaymant, by this simple criterion.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postoge on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britoin and Ireland, Prence, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

Applications for these stomps should ba made to the Appointment office.

Postmasters at offices, the gross receipts of which are less than $75 per annum, if they use rating stamps, must obtain the same at their own expense.

Letter bulances, upon the like application, are furnished to offices which collect in postages $75 a year.

Boston is an office of Exchange for British, French, Prussian and Belgian Mails.

Philadelphia and Portland are offices of Exchange for British and French Mails.

Baltimore, Chicago and Detroit are offices of Exchange for British and French Mails.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or, (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is 1 cent.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the esme rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

Postage on Daily Papers to subscribers when prepaid quarterly or yearly in advance, either at the mailing office or office of delivery, per quarter, (three months)..... 35 cents.
Six times per week, per quarter, (3 mos.). 30 "
For Tri-Weekly, " " .. 15 "
For Semi-Weekly, " " .. 10 "
For Weekly, " " .. 6 "

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the U. S.:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz..... 6 cts.
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..12 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..18 "
Monthly, not over 4 oz..... 3 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 6 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 9 "
Quarterly, not over 4 oz..... 1 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 2 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 3 "

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the postmaster must still be entered in his accomt for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one-quarter and a third, one-quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one-quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications the date when the subscriptiou expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazines and periodicals to regular subscribers) sent via Overland Mail, is to be charged at letter postage rates.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions,) the postage to be prepaid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows: "The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter, except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postoge upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address, and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (except bills and receipts for subscription) in, or to, write or print saything, after its publication, upon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, is illegal, and subjects such printed matter, and the entire package of which it is a part, to letter postage.

Any word or communication, whether by printing, writing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper of a newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the person to whom it is to be sent, and the date when subscription expires, subjects the package to letter postage.

COLLECT POSTAGE IN ADVANCE.

TRYON'S SYSTEM for Newspaper and Box Accounts enables yon to do this in accordance with Postal Law and Regulations with ease, certainty and little cost of time and labor, and also readily to make returns of these postages in your Quarterly Account Current.

The principle upon which the system is based is thus expressed—"No debt for postage is recognised by the Post Office Department, nor in this system. Credit for payment is given by inserting in the proper quarter column of the year the amount of postage received for that quarter on the publication opposite the name of which it is set."—See Regulations of 1866, secs. 310, 311.

The blanks are arranged, and directions given readily to comply with this and other requirements in relation to Newspaper and Box Accounts.

The blank forms are on folio sheets of the usual size of Post Office blanks, and are arranged to embrace a period of four years.

Fifteen sheets for offices of the 4th class, and ten for the 5th class are ordinarily sufficient to last that period, and will be sent together with a copy of the explanations, directions and examples, by mail, postpaid, as follows:

For ten sheets..... $1 50
For fifteen sheets..... 2 00

Steamers of the Cunard line sail from Boston twice each month, touching at Halifax, and when letters are sent by that conveyance for Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward's Island, the U. S. postage is 5 cents the single rate, to be pre-paid. The inland rate is collected on delivery. On newspapers by this route, the postage is two cents each.

Newspapers and periodicals published in the United States, and sent to regular subscribers in the British North American Provinces, or published in those Provinces and sent to regular subscribers in the United States, are chargeable with the regular pre-paid quarterly rates of United States postage to and from the line; which postage must be collected at the office of mailing in the United States, on matter sent, and at the office of delivery in the United States, on matter received. In like manner, such matter, if transient, is chargeable with the regular domestic transient printed matter rates to and from the line, to be collected at the office of mailing or delivery in the United States, as the case may be. Editors, however, may exchange free of expense.

REGISTRATION OF LETTERS.

Valuable letters for Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen or Hamburg line via New York, or by the Prussian closed mail via New York and Boston, as also letters addressed to Great Britain and Canada, will be REGISTERED on the application of the person posting the same, in the same manner and on the same terms as those deliverable in the United States provided that the full postage chargeable thereon to destination, together with a registration fee of twenty cents on each letter to Great Britain or Ireland, and five cents on each letter to the other places mentioned above, is prepaid at the mailing office. Such letters should be mailed and forwarded to the respective United States exchange offices in the same manner as domestic registered letters are mailed to those offices.

RULE OF RATING LETTERS, &c.

Letters addressed to Great Britain and Ireland are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, a single rate being charged for each half ounce, &c.

Letters in the mail to France are to be charged with single rate of postage, if not exceeding the weight of one quarter ounce; double rate if exceeding a quarter, but not exceeding half an ounce; and so on, an additional rote being charged for each quarter ounce or fractional part of a quarter ounce. Letters addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Hamburg, and the British North American Provinces, are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an ounce. Postmasters should be careful, where the postage is pre-paid, to collect the proper amount. They should be particular to notice the route indicated on the envelopes of letters, and to collect postage accordingly. Letters mailed at some offices, marked "via England," or "via Prussian closed mail," for a German State, are frequently taken upon the prepayment of Bremen rates, and those marked "via Bremen," at Prussian closed rates, &c.

RULE OF RATING LETTERS GOING VIA FRANCE.

In the case of letters to be forwarded in the British mail for transmission from England via "Marseilles," the French postage is rated at 6 cents the quarter ounce, except on letters for Java, China, Labuan, Borneo, Japan, the Moluccas and Philippine Islands, which are rated at 8 cents per half ounce, and except, also, on letters for Syria and Tunis, by French Packet, when the single French rate is 12 cents per quarter ounce.

The rotes by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz: Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent via Suez, countries beyond seas, via France, other than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Java, Mauritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia, (except Belgrade) Shanghai, Singapore and Spain. The limit of pre-payment to Spain, Portugal and Gibraltar, is Behobia; to Servia, (except Belgrade) Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria;" the frontier of Turkey and Austria; to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries via Suez, the sea ports of the Indies, or of the Sea of China, to which the English packets ply, and to places beyond seas, other than those designated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of destination.

RATES ON PAMPHLETS, MAGAZINES, &c.

On pamphlets and magazines, to or from the West coast of South America, the United States postage is 4 cents; and to or from all other foreign countries, (except Great Britain, Belgium and the German States, via Bremen or Hamburg mail,) 2 cents per four ounce or fraction thereof, to be collected in all cases in the United States.

Newspapers and periodicals to foreign countries (particularly to the continent of Europe) must be sent in narrow bands, open at the sides or ends; otherwise they are chargeable with letter postage.

ROUTES OF TRANSMISSION, &c.

To prevent mistakes at the exchange offices, it is desirable that the particular routes by which letters are to be forwarded from the United States to Europe, should be distinctly written on the covers. Letters intended for transmission in the open mail to England, should bear the direction, "open mail via England;" if for transmission in the French mail, they should be directed, "via France in the French Mail;" if for transmission by closed mail to Prussia, they should be directed "via Prussian closed mail;" if for transmission in the closed mail to Belgium, they should be directed, "via Belgian closed mail;" and if for transmission by the New York and Bremen line to Bremen, or by the New York and Hamburg line to Hamburg, they should be directed, "via Bremen," or "via Hamburg."

It is important that letters addressed to Germany and other European countries, via France, where the single rots per quarter ounce is 21 cents, should be plainly marked to be sent "via France;" otherwise they may be mis-sent in the open mail to Liverpool, by United States packet, the 21 cent rate per half

"The Country Postmaster."

In a recently published work, entitled "Homespun; or, Five-and-twenty Years Ago," we find the following sketch of "The Country Postmaster"—as he existed, we presume, at that period. From certain peculiarities of the writer's style, we should judge that the work was written, as its sub-title would indicate, at least a quarter of a century ago, and that in the interval between that date and the present the author was so busily occupied with other matters that he did not find leisure to revise and correct divers crude and awkward forms of expression, or to reconstruct some rather mixed metaphors and slip-shod sentences, in which he indulges. We should like to know, for instance, what he thinks he means by such a use as he makes below of the word "caviare"—also how any possible "anatomical arrangement" of "odd heads," "odd bodies," "spare legs," and "spare arms," could "present" anybody with the "manners common to country boys," and how he expects his readers' imaginations to stand the strain required of them in connecting "Rajahs" and "Moguls" with "wigwams." We hope, too, that in his next edition he will inform us what "it" was that the boy who was "on the lookout for his pretty sister near the counter" grabbed and carried off. Was it the counter, his sister, or his own hand? But perhaps we had better let our readers criticize for themselves:

"A country post-office, as a general matter, is simply a country store, with some odd corner railed off for secresy, if not security. Anybody can go around behind there, if he is so fortunate as to be in the confidence, social or political, of the village Postmaster. It is chiefly the women who step up to that desk timidly and doubtingly, as it asking a favor—or sidle along as girls do, and inquire for a letter in the softest whisper, lest even their names should be pronounced aloud in that public presence. To the rude boys the place is caviare. For them alone is the iron rail spiked down so rigidly into the counter, to keep off trousers stuffs and heavy swinging boots.

Kegs and barrels—nail-boxes and soap-boxes—customers and letter-writers—men and boys—women and dogs—the box-stove and the Department letter-boxes—are all mingled at the post-office establishment with picturesque incongruity. Of a close winter evening the apartment is redolent of savors unnumbered and indescribable. A row of men sit perched upon the smooth-faced counter; a row of boys and men, too, sit on boxes and nail-kegs opposite the stove; whistling idlers stand and stare at the hoe and mop handles so nicely balanced overhead, possibly calculating whether they would hurt much if they fell on their crowns; the iron stove roars, and growls and sputters, from being frequently stirred up with sticks; little boys come in every few minutes, and look up into the expressionless faces of the men sitting idly around—or listen attentively with open mouths, to what they happen to be gossiping about, and then run uneasily out again; in the solemn pauses the dull and heavy ticking of a wooden-wheeled Connecticut clock, perched up among the snuff-jars and preserve-pots, sounds like Fate, solemnly notching off Time as it passes; now and then one of them with an acuter sense of hearing (or longer ears, perhaps,) than the rest, lifts his head and announces that "the stage is coming;" and like the turning over of your hand, all present get up and shake themselves out, against the arrival of the government messenger and the fetching-in of the mail-bags.

It makes a pretty scene. Teniers might have added it to his portfolio. How extremely odd it strikes one, thinking of all the men in a little town grouped around a hot stove in a country store, under a full headway of gossip about the affairs of other people, and, to appearance, as much impressed with the weight of their responsibility as if the nation itself rested upon their round shoulders.

Their wives at home, poor women—else how would the affairs of the house get on?—they must not go a-gadding; but the lords—they may sit about in the post-office till they have to come home for patches to their trousers'-seats, and not a word of complaint must be uttered against it!

Well, and the mail-coach rattles up. If in the winter, it is after dark a long while; but if it be summer weather, the sweet twilight is gloaming all over the town. * * *

The echoes of the driver's voice are to be heard all over the secluded streets—'Get up along! G'lang!' The heavy rattling of the wheels makes music against the sides of the meeting-house, and fills the town with the notes of its warning. The post-office door opens, and forth steps a boy to take the mail; and a pencil of light from the one or two tallow dips within projects itself far out into the desert of darkness.

The cluttered little office is instantly in a hubbub. Every eye is turned on the mail-bag and the Postmaster. At this particular moment, the latter is at his zenith. The bystanders watch him as he proceeds to void the responsible pouch of its precious contents. They count up every package, parcel and newspaper that comes to the light, and appear as much pleased with what they discover as children are over the miscellaneous contents of their Christmas stockings. They give their minds to the study of color, size, thickness and relative importance of each article that is exposed.

Many of those nearest the counter, and those who, by reason of age or property-value, feel 'priviloged' in the place, venture upon taking a piece of mail-matter into their hands, which they proceed to 'heft,' and make shrewd computations about. Some of the more forward lads crowd up under the men's elbows; and you can find an odd head here, and an odd boy there, and a spare leg or arm somewhere else, which, anatomically arranged, would fairly present you with the manners common to country boys in a post-office, at the hour when the mail arrives.

In good time, the contents of the bag are all assorted; that is to say, after waiting and waiting. It would astonish an old Hollander himself—what a dreadfully slow man the Postmaster is. The more there is pressing upon him for dispatch, the less he is actually able to accomplish. Nothing confuses him, for he will not permit it. Still, the miscellaneous talk about the room does bother him, and he now and then looks up sharply over his spectacles, as a thorough schoolmaster looks around his little realm of a school-room.

When, at length, the critical moment does come, he begins without the perceptible flutter of a nerve. 'Mr. Atkins!' he calls out in a tone of appropriate solemnity. The gentleman of that name makes a half bow, as if he would say, 'Excuse me for a moment, all hands,"—slips off his seat on the head of a barrel of Genesee flour, standing in the darkest corner of the store, and suppleatingly holds out his hand above the counter. Or, if he cannot pierce the crowd, a file of goodmen and true pass over the documents to him from head-quarters, every one of whom embraces such opportunity to study the post-mark as the tallowy flare of the light affords him.

'Mr. Battles!' again sings out the official at the desk. Everybody looks around to find Mr. Battles. He is sought after with as anxious care as the hundredth sheep that went astray. His acquaintance explore every corner and cranny, look one side and another of the stove-pipe, and finally respond, 'not here!' Then, 'Mr. Cannikin!' He comes forward as far as the jam permits him, and is put in possession of his mail, much after the style of Mr. Atkins. Then, 'Miss Fairmade!' at which some of the young men exchange jokes in a low voice, while a little boy—who has been on the lookout for his pretty sister near the counter—reaches out his hand and makes an effective grab for it, and carries it off.

So on, through the list. To those who go without a word to their own boxes and bring away their mails with a tap on the glass, this picture may seem an exaggeration; but back in the country, and altogether beyond town-reach, it will be recognized at a glance for the truth. Again and again have we heard our name called out in the ears of the town magnates, and received what mail matter was rightfully ours, through the hands of we could not tell how many accommodating men and boys, mixed together in officious confusion.

On mooted points of law—especially constitutional law—the country Postmaster is strong beyond any one's estimate. He has the mother-wit to keep a handful of stray old Congressional Reports, bound and lettered, on the dusty shelf at his back, as well as a more solid-looking copy of the Statutes, in imposing calf; and, with this legal stock in trade, he sets the town at defiance. Of course he is not to be contradicted on matters pertaining to the nation and its welfare; for, sustaining such close relations with the government, how is it to be supposed that any man can know some things as well as he? Even Goldsmith's schoolmaster is no match for him in the line of 'arguing still.' Not even a member of the President's Cabinet can give an opinion with more pragmatic precision, or deliver himself with greater assurance of the intentions of the august Washington authorities. He stands for the village Rajah—the Great Mogul—at the head of the political wigwam of the place. National politics take their local coloring by being passed through the rather opaque medium of his official commentary. He is sketched, in the party's mind, as the one man who keeps the keys, the seals, and the secrets. If a single man contemplates so reckless a step as party backsliding, or defection, he, of all the rest, is close behind him to make him quake in whatever clothes he happens to have on.

Thus does the Postmaster practically become the centre of town patronage and town consequence. All look up to him, as they do to the village flag-staff, from which the 'stars and stripes' are in the habit of waving. If any grumble at this or at that, it makes very little difference; they are obliged to keep on even terms with him, and pocket all their dissatisfactions in silence. The women either like or dislike him—and that very decidedly. The younger portion, however, are careful to drop no syllable that can reach the Postmaster's family, and so make infinite trouble for themselves.

When they trip across into the office, they expect a joke from him, rather slyly, about their distant correspondents—which shows with what studious thoroughness he informs himself, and what a memory, passing all wonder, he has. Indeed, it affords him intense satisfaction to poke fun at the girls about their beaux, and to tease them, with intent to draw forth still more of their little love-secrets.

Thus, no doubt, would he like to pass long afternoons, alternately running over odd papers which tardy subscribers have failed to call for, and gossipping with the girls concerning the trifling love-secrets that form the staple of their love-letters from places not always very far off.

It is, therefore, an unpardonable mistake to take city postmasters—the New York, Philadelphia and Boston magnates—as the fair representatives of these officials throughout the land. It you would make a study of the Postmaster, you must contemplate those who, under government favor, form the rank-and-file of the office-holding army. In the rural districts the real Postmaster excels. There he stands forth, statuesque in his glory—columnar and individual in the social landscape. The whole town leans on him—revolves around him. He attracts all local and personal interests, like iron-filings, to his official lodestone."

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO,
May, 1867.

The times have been that when the month of May had come, the genial, gentle, life-renewing Spring, robed in gay flowers, sat in her greatest state, dispensing nature's bounties until the earth and air grew resonant with melody, and redolent with perfumes; but alas! how changed! That very May that whilom from her green lap threw the yellow cowslip and the pale primrose, is come and well nigh gone, but we miss the beauty and the sweet odor of the flowers, and the warbling harmony of birds. The young grass and the green grain have scarcely burst through the turf, and the leaves and the buds on the trees still remain in barkey bondage. There was an ancient heathen custom, and I think it was a beautiful one, of devoting the last four days of April and the first of May to the honor of Flora and Pomona, who were imagined to be deities presiding over the fruit and flowers—but their Aprils and Mays must have been a good deal less moist and frosty than ours of to-day. Professor Agassiz pronounces, and we regard his teachings as ex cathedra, that this earth of ours at some remote period away back in the faded ages was entirely covered with glaciers. History repeats itself—why may not the mysteries of creation? That the seasons are gradually changing is beyond dispute—and there is reason to suppose that we are gradually swinging round to the cold period again—but whether we are or not, the divisions of the year are evidently getting mixed, and Almanac-makers will have to go in for a new deal. "Winter lingering in the lap of Spring" is something more than a poetic fancy just now. The cheerful sun and bright glimpses of blue sky, the freshness of the woods and fields, the hum of bees, and the music of birds, and a thousand other vernal glories, do not as of yore gladden the heart and feast the eye of those who seek the country for a new instalment of pure air, and a new lease of life—but instead thereof, we have week after week of dull, dreary, snowy, rainy, cheerless, melancholy weather, neither torrid nor frigid, but a kind of 'art and 'art temperature, capricious as a pretty woman, and as disagreeable as the old Harry, to which either extreme would be infinitely preferable—and in a country so vast as ours, such extremes can be found in the hot breath of the sunny South, or the freezing air of Walrussia—as he of the Herald calls our newly acquired territory on the northwest coast—if one had time and tin to "go for them."

But if the seasons vary, the customs of the country do not—and the annual April and May exodus of families from one locality to another—from town to town, from farm to farm, and from house to house, with all their worldly gear, is as much a part of the business of housekeeping, as cooking, washing and nursing. This, however, has always been the habit of humanity even when dwelling in tents, although it was not so much trouble to move then as now, and tempers were not tried so much by the damage done by careless help to household and kitchen furniture. Modern usage has proven one great advantage over the ancient—it superinduces cleanliness, and premises that have suffered for want of soap and water, paper, paint or repairs are pretty certain to have this yearly tribute paid. Shavings, soap suds and white lead speed the parting and welcome the coming tenant, and confusion generally reigns supreme for a fortnight before and after the change of domestic domicils. Shops and stores, and offices, public and private, come in too for their share of this periodical benefit, and with the renewed appearance business apparently receives a fresh impetus, and the investment evidently pays well—but it is a singular fact—and it has come under my own observation, (accidentally of course,) that post-offices very rarely submit to these yearly scrubbing, scraping, painting or glazing visitations internally or externally. Possibly there may be a reason and a good one for this indifference to outside show and inside renovation, and as I don't feel that I have any right to ask what it is, I may possibly be allowed the Jonathaniau privilege of guessing.

Post-offices everywhere are the great news reservoirs and national intelligence dispensaries to which the people are obliged to resort to receive from and send away letters to their friends and correspondents. A showy front of brown stone, brick, or boards of dazzling white, or any other outside embellishment of the building, will not add one to the number of visitors, nor will the interior, although fixed up in good shape, and clean as a new pin, increase or decrease the business or attraction in the least degree—this, I guess, is the principle cause of indifference to appearances; and then you know a postmaster is a despot in a small way, and cares nothing for local or social popularity except upon certain occasions. It is nobody's business but his, if he humanely permits winged and unwinged insects to settle themselves permanently—or if rats and mice have the unchecked run of his establishment. What is it to the outside community if the dust and dirt of a decade of years have accumulated on the shelves and boxes, in nooks and corners, and in every spot where were thrown the occasional sweepings of some former occupant? Chairs without backs, clocks without hands, tables without legs, pitchers without handles, cracked stoves, lamps with broken chimneys, rust-eaten coal-scuttles and watering cans, moth-eaten garments, and other junk-shop jewelry, give no offence to his eye—why should they to any one's else?

If he elects to do business where the moths can corrupt, and where thieves may break through and steal—if he is disposed to promote the increase of vermin by furnishing them with suitable accommodations—if he prefers musty papers, dirty boxes, rusty furniture, and dingy windows, to clean papers, clean boxes, decent furniture, and clean windows, I know of no civil law to prevent it. There is no prohibitory statute against dirty hands, dirty linen, and dirty faces; but these are the natural consequences which afflict officials who labor in dirty offices—and in all such places an increased compensation should be allowed out of the Postmaster's private pocket, to the clerks, to be appropriated to the purchase of soap, and the payment of laundresses.

If the weather improves, perhaps these places will look more inviting—but as it is now I've seen enough—those that have eyes eyes to see, let them see.

MONS. TONSON.

Complaint-Books.

There is a standing order of the Department requiring every postmaster to keep a complaint-book, wherein he is directed to record all complaints made in regard to lost letters from and to his office. In many instances, however, it is entirely disregarded; and Special Agents in pursuit of information are thus frequently deprived of the means of procuring particulars which in some cases would much facilitate their investigations. Again, letters supposed to be lost, and which have been made the subject of investigation by Special Agents, frequently turn up through the Dead Letter Office, or in some other way; and the postmaster being apprised of it, thinks no more about it. If he keeps a complaint-book he notes the discovery—that is all; and if he does not, he grunts out "I expected it would turn up—they always do," and retires within himself. If these gentlemen would only think of it, and notify the Special Agents in every case where a supposed lost letter is received, and which has been inquired after by them, they would do a part of their duty properly at least.

Another Bogus Special Agent.

By the following statements, which we have received in a letter from T. C. Phillips, Esq., Special Agent Post-office Department, it will be seen that another of those self-appointed officials has been practising on the credulity of Western postmasters. We publish the account as another chapter in the lesson which every postmaster and route-agent ought to have by heart, viz: before holding any official communication with a "Special Agent" whom you do not already know to be such, demand that he shall show by what authority he assumes his title. If he then fails or refuses to show a regular commission, signed by the Postmaster-General, and bearing the seal of the Post-office Department, decline to recognize, obey or assist him in any way:

"* * * On Thursday last, I visited ——ville, Ind., upon business. The Postmaster came very near allowing me to go away without introducing me to another Special Agent who was "off duty," and visiting his uncle at that place. I found a very well-dressed and honest-appearing young man in the office, directing business and expounding postal law—was introduced to him—talked with him half an hour, and then told him he was an impostor. He refused to show me his authority, because he said I had no right to ask it. He declared he was a Special Agent of the Department, and claimed to rank me. He afterwards confessed his attempted usurpation, but could give no reason for the foolish and criminal act.

"He had the most implicit confidence of the Postmaster, and the latter advised me not to make any arrest, 'because it could not be that the man was an impostor.' Not more than one postmaster or route-agent in five ever ask anything more than my word that I am a Special Agent."

Editorial Chit-Chat.

A correspondent has favored us with some suggestions on the loss or delay of mail matter by being misscnt. He ascribes much of this annoyance to there being "more than one office of the same name," and proposes that "offices of like names be especially informed whenever another of a similar name is brought into existence, and still better it would be, to not establish any more offices of which name one or more already existed." The latter part of this proposition we consider impracticable, but the former meets our approbation, as it would no doubt promote the prompt forwarding of mail matter in newly established offices of names similar to those already in existence. Until such a plan is adopted, however, the United States Mail affords a channel of information through the list of post-offices. While on this subject, we will mention the most fruitful source of loss or delay in mail matter, and that is the slovenly or ignorant manner in which it is sometimes directed. We often see letters addressed to the fancy name of some private residence, instead of to the post-office at which the owner of such residence receives his mail matter; in other cases there are curlicues and flourishes which make it an insoluble puzzle whether a T is an S, or a V a P; in others again, it is impossible to tell whether the scratch of the pen intended to indicate the State, is meant for Maine or Missouri, Pennsylvania or Tennessee.

All mail matter should be plainly directed, with the name of the post office, county and State, unless it may be when sent to large, well-known cities, when the name of the county may be omitted. It seems to us if a letter is worth sending, it is worth while to take this slight trouble to aid in its prompt transmission in the mails. . . . . A subscriber, in renewing his subscription, complains that "sometimes his copies fail to reach him, at others, they come in a rumpled and mutilated condition, being no small inconvenience." We have no fear, which amounts to a certainty, that on more routes and in more post offices than one, the Mail is surreptitiously borrowed, and in some of such cases the loan, through carelessness or hurry, becomes a theft. Every one who wants to read the Mail, and cannot do so without this surreptitious borrowing, had better become a subscriber at once, and thus relieve his own conscience, and allow his neighbor to enjoy a privilege for which he has paid. . . . . In reply to some suggestions on the different shapes in which publishers fold their newspapers, we can only say that so long as no particular shape is prescribed by the Department, publishers will consult their own convenience, though we must admit that a uniform shape, adapted to post-office boxes, would greatly facilitate the labor of post-office clerks. . . . A correspondent who asks for good advice in the matter of the unlawful carrying of mail matter on railroads, is informed that his action in the case mentioned, is very praiseworthy. We hope all postmasters, who can, will read attentively the letter of the Postmaster General, in our May number, and that they will use their efforts to carry out the provisions on this subject; they will find their duties and powers defined in sections 48 and 49, Regulations 1866. . . . . A new P. M. is in doubt about taking the oath that "he has not knowingly delivered any mail matter on which the postage has not been paid," his predecessor not having kept any accounts. We can only suggest that in case of regular papers, be ask each subscriber if the quarterly postage has been paid, and if he receive a reply in the affirmative, to deliver the paper. The former postmaster is liable for the amount. . . . . An inquirer about the tax on salaries, we must refer to the assessor of his district. . . . . Sundry correspondents on box rents we refer to chapter XLII, and on the franking privilege, and notifying publishers, to chapter XV, and section 392, Regulations 1866.

Heath's Government Counterfeit Detector.

Mr. Laban Heath, 20 Washington Street, Boston, has published a very handsome work under the above title, which seems to us superior to any Counterfeit Detector we have yet seen. Having secured from the Treasury Department the right for that purpose, he publishes in his book clear, sharp impressions from the genuine plates of portions of all denominations of the Treasury notes, National Bank notes, and Fractional Currency, which on comparison with any counterfeit will show its worthlessness. He also gives impressions from some dangerous counterfeit plates which have been captured by the government. The plan of the work seems to us to be much more practicable and sensible than some others we have inspected, and we can recommend its use to postmasters. A neat and powerful combination "micro-telescopic" glass, for the close inspection of doubtful notes, is sold by Mr. Heath, with or without the book. Circulars with full description can be had by addressing Mr. Heath as above.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster-General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL," [see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866,] and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster-General.

Special Notice to Subscribers.

Each wrapper enclosing a copy of the Mail bears a number in addition to the address. This number signifies that the term for which the subscription is paid expires with the corresponding whole number of the pages. Those whose this number reaches, marked 81 or 82, will please remit at once.

Change of Rule for Rating Letters

EXCHANGED IN THE MAILS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN.

A uniform scale of progression for charging postage, having half an ounce as the unit throughout, has been adopted, as well for correspondence sent in transit through the United Kingdom, between the United States and British Colonies and foreign countries generally, as for the international correspondence between the United States and Great Britain and Ireland.

In future, therefore, the postage upon all letters, for whatever destination, exchanged in the mails with Great Britain, will advance by a single rate for each half ounce, or fraction thereof, the same as upon domestic letters.

Postmasters will take note of this important change, and levy postage accordingly.

Mails to China, Hong Kong, and Japan.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Co. will despatch a steamer from New York on the 11th of June, connecting at San Francisco with steamer of July 4th for China, Hong Kong, and Japan. Letters may be sent by this steamer for the above places on prepayment by stamps at the rate of 10 cents per half ounce—newspapers 2 cents each, and pamphlets and other printed matter at 2 cents per four ounces, or fraction thereof.

As regular monthly service by this line is not yet established, we give this special notice in preference to inserting the above-named rates in our Table of Foreign Postages.

"Samples and Sample Cards."

We have a number of letters from subscribers, asking what articles are intended to be embraced in that clause of Sec. 222, P. O. Laws (edition of 1866 designating "samples and sample cards" as mailable matter of the third class, on which the rate of postage is two cents per four ounces or fraction thereof. Some postmasters have been in the habit of charging the above rate on various specimens of merchandise, such as tea, coffee, sugar, tobacco, rice, nails, screws, knives and other small hardware, &c., &c., and as the persons depositing them claimed that they were "samples," and as, moreover, the language of the law is anything but specific, perhaps it was not inexcusable to allow them to pass at that rate. But in order to obtain the official construction of the law above referred to, we addressed the Department on the subject, and have received in reply the information that "'samples' must be confined to samples and sample cards of dry, flexible material, not calculated to endanger any portions of the mail. Liquids and poisons must be excluded Packages of hardware, groceries, tobacco, &c., are not, strictly speaking, mailable matter, but when such packages are placed in the mail, letter postage must be charged."

Postmasters will therefore be governed by the above rule in charging postage on matter deposited for mailing as "samples." They will also collect the letter postage due on any packages of so-called "samples" which consist of anything except "dry flexible material," and which may arrive for delivery prepaid at only "sample" rates. Writing on sample cards will subject them to letter postage.

The New Registration System.

The new system for the Registration of letters goes into operation on the first of the present month, and we hope that every postmaster among our readers will be careful to see that at his office the regulations in regard to this important feature of the postal service are rigorously observed in every detail. The instructions contained in these regulations are so plain and simple that any deviation from them will be absolutely without excuse; and a blunder in registering a letter will therefore be pretty good evidence that the postmaster at whose office it was mailed has not taken the trouble to read those instructions. There is one point in particular to which special attention should be given—and that is, that A REGISTERED LETTER MUST NEVER BE SENT "DIRECT" when there is a Distributing Office on the route between the office where the letter is mailed and the one which it is intended finally to reach—but must be put in a "Registered Package Envelope," directed to the Postmaster at the first Distributing Office on the route, and sent to that office just the same as though it was intended to be delivered there. A list of the Distributing Post-offices will be found in this paper.

The faithful keeping of the "Record of Registered Matter in Transit," is another duty of great importance, and its neglect will be an offence very easily discovered—though we hope it is not necessary to give any of the readers of THE MAIL such a reason for being careful in this respect.

Postmasters at Distributing Post-offices should be particular to enter on the same "Record" the postmarks and directions of Registered Package Envelopes passing through their offices, which should have been sent to them for distribution, and will be expected to report to the Department the postmasters who so missend these envelopes.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Some Postmasters in the States of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, and also in the New England States, may not yet have received their supplies of "Registered Package Envelopes" from the Department. They will receive them in a short time, however; and in the mean time they will send their registered letters in the same manner as heretofore—except that they will require the prepayment of the registry-fee in stamps. When their supplies of the Registered Package Envelopes arrive they will make immediate use of them.

Route Agents' "Substitutes."

When a skilled mechanic is hired by an employer, it is of course expected that his time and skill are to be expended in the service of that employer as an equivalent for the wages paid him, and that his absence from the factory or the workshop at such times as may suit his convenience, is not to be compensated for by his sending his brother, his uncle or his father to take his place. These may be very estimable, useful and agreeable people—but if they are totally unacquainted with the handicraft of their absent relative, their presence in the factory or workshop would be simply a hindrance and a nuisance: and their awkward attempts to handle tools to the use of which they are unaccustomed, would probably lead to results the reverse of agreeable to all concerned. A workman, however well instructed and dexterous at his trade, who habitually furnished to his employer such "substitutes" as these to fill his place while he attended to some call of pleasure or business elsewhere, would be likely soon to find himself minus a situation. A clerk or book-keeper would scarcely think of vacating his desk at his own convenience, leaving a friend or acquaintance to "go through the motions" of entering the proper items in the ledger and day-book, or making out bills. In all the ordinary agreements between employer and employed, it is understood that the latter is to give the former the benefit of his skill, his experience, his intelligence, as a return for the wages or salary received—not the skill, experience or intelligence of a third party; still less the mere presence, at the work-bench or the desk, of a person without skill or experience in the business to be done.

There is no reason why the fair and proper rule which governs in such matters should not apply to the relations between postal employees and their employer—the Post-office Department—as well as to those between mechanics or clerks and their employers. But there is no question that in one branch of the service it is disregarded to an extent which leads to serious injury to the postal interests of the public. Many route-agents are in the habit of absenting themselves from their posts, for days together, without applying for leave from the Department, or notifying postmasters at the terminal of routes, hiring incompetent "dummies" to make a pretence of performing their duties for the time—"green hands," who, in their carelessness or nervous haste, make up and deliver mails in such a manner as to render them seed for a crop of curses, which spring up wherever they are dropped. Pouches intended for one station are left at another a dozen miles distant; those intended for a connecting railroad are carried past the junction to the end of the route; letters and papers which should be sent over one long stage-route are put into the pouch for another extending in a contrary direction—in short every possible blunder by which the unlucky residents of the section traversed can be subjected to vexation, delay and loss is committed by the inexperienced or careless make-shift who temporarily occupies the mail-car.

Of course there are sometimes occasions and circumstances which render it necessary for a route-agent to entrust his duties to another: of course there are many route agents who never absent themselves except on such occasions and under such circumstances, and who then are careful to see that none but experienced and competent persons supply their places. It is not of these that we are speaking—but of those who are so much engrossed by outside business operations, or so devoted to pleasure excursions, as to find it necessary in their profit or comfort to "put on a substitute" so frequently that they seem to go upon the theory that their office is one of such trifling importance that the first idle acquaintance they meet is good enough to take charge of its duties. There are such route-agents in the service, and the sooner they are out of it the better. There are also postmasters whose duty it is to report these irregularities, but who fail to do so. To these we commend a careful perusal of sections 505 and 506 of the Regulations of 1866—and a prompt obedience to their requirements.

"Of Good in Things Evil."

Notwithstanding Tupper once wrote on the above theme in his eminently "exhaustive" style, we are not therefore discouraged from also venturing a word or two under the same heading. A few months since we had somewhat to say concerning "post-office gossips"—individuals of which species are to be found in nearly every village—persons whose delight it is to exchange among themselves, and to retail to such others as will hear them, dubious stories and mysterious hints of mismanagement, irregularities, incivility—or even graver offences—on the part of the postmaster or his assistants, being instigated thereto partly by mutual "cussedness," and partly—in many cases—by bitter memories of fond hopes which they once indulged of themselves adorning the offices held by those whom they malign. There is no need for us to seek to disclose their merits any farther, or describe more fully their objectionable doings, they and their ways being no doubt familiar to most of our readers. Our present object is not to find fault with these fault-finders, but to press them into the service of pointing a useful moral.

There are a multitude of things, animate and inanimate, which a superficial judgment pronounces to be simply and entirely evil—having absolutely no good quality and serving no desirable end—but which, notwithstanding, a careful inquiry, and the progress of scientific discovery, will show, or has shown, to be possessed of many admirable and useful properties. Poisons which once were only subservient to the foul and unnatural purposes of the murderer and the suicide, are now among the most potent weapons in the physician's armory. Plants once regarded and treated as noxious weeds have been found gifted with rare medicinal virtues, or capable of rendering valuable service in arts and manufactures—(indeed, we have heard of some one who has discovered a use for the execrated Canada thistle.)—That the fragrant skunk—we beg pardon—the Mephitis Americana—is not unsusceptible of being "utilized," any one may see (and smell) by entering, or even passing, a wholesale fur warehouse. Who will dare to predict that the sleep-forsaken victims of the mosquito and his wingless and nameless nocturnal confederate will not yet find comfort amid their torment in the reflection that the researches of the Agassiz of the period have developed long-hidden capabilities for good in some direction, even in those now abhorred insects? An eminent clergyman has demonstrated to his own satisfaction that Fenian servant-girls are not utter and unmixed nuisances. With this extreme example we will abandon illustration, and proceed to the practical point to which we desire to call attention—which is, that even post-office gossips may have their uses.

It is not impossible that when the mature Miss Verjuice made the whole village listen to the story of the wrong she suffered in being kept waiting at the delivery window while young Smiler, the clerk, held a confab with a round hat, feather and waterfall, the notoriety he thereby acquired may have caused that good-looking youth to resolve that in future he would select a more fitting time and place for submitting himself to the refining and elevating influences of female society and conversation.

It may be that when Bob Stretcher is reporting all over town that "the Postmaster is never to be found in the post-office," that functionary will consider it expedient to refute the statement by making a point of being at his post—at least when Robert is likely to call.

The oft-repeated remark of Mr. Burkis, (who once, through excessive good nature, allowed his friends to present his name as that of one willing to accept the dignity and emoluments of P. M. himself) to the effect that "when Tag, Rag and Bobtail are allowed to go inside the post office and fumble the letters, it's no wonder some of 'em are missin'," was very likely the cause of that judicious, courteous, but decided notice which the postmaster lately gave to the few highly respectable and intimate friends whom he had formerly allowed to enter the official sanctum, and sometimes to deliver their own letters to themselves, that the Regulations and his sense of duty would exclude them thenceforth from enjoying such privileges.

Perhaps the reason why the Assistant P. M. at ——— has not lately locked up the office in the middle of the day while he ran round the corner to "see a man" for a minute, is to be found in the fact that Lawyer Snoop (whose nephew was the Assistant P. M.'s predecessor) wrote to the Postmaster-General that it was "a common, if not frequent occurrence, for the post-office to be left without an attendant for an hour at a time."

It is certain that ever since old Mr. Snarl so often expressed the opinion that "the money order system was a humbug if there was never anybody at the office to issue them," the number of those conveniences issued from the post-office at the town where Mr. S. resides has rapidly increased.

Many other facts might be brought forward to prove that these inveterate grumblers and pickers of holes in the official coats of postmasters and clerks, though doubtless very disagreeable people, and very trying to the tempers of their victims, are not such unmitigated pests, after all, but do exert an influence for good in their day and generation. And by way of advice to any of our readers whose pence of mind or temper is disturbed by their censorious cackle, we would recommend a careful adherence to official duties and proprieties, and an avoidance of "even the appearance of evil," as the most effectual gags which they can employ to silence the tongues of evil speakers and slanderers.

Grass First—Then Stones.

We not unfrequently receive from postmasters letters complaining that their souls are vexed and their sense of official propriety wounded, by the conduct of some other postmaster in their vicinity, or of some mail-contractor on the route on which their offices are located, who persists in gross violations of postal laws or regulations, which lead to serious derangement in postal matters in the neighborhood—and that this conduct is persisted in notwithstanding the offender has been repeatedly notified of the effect of his wrong-doing and requested to discontinue it. The best remedy in such cases is a prompt report of the delinquent to the Department; and though many postmasters are naturally averse to such a measure, it is one which their obligations to the Department and the public call upon them to adopt whenever necessary. Postmasters are by the Regulations expressly informed that in such cases they are to consider themselves the Special Agents of the Department; and to allow a whole community to suffer from the stupidity, carelessness or obstinacy of a postmaster, contractor or route agent who is insensible to remonstrance or argument, simply from a dislike to the task of making the facts known to his superiors, is to become a participator in his miscouduct. The old man in the familiar spelling-book fable first tried throwing grass at the predatory youth in his apple tree: when that was found of no effect, he "tried what virtue there was in stones"—and the story records the result as excellent.

Pay of Route Agents, P.O. Railway Clerks, &c.

Ordered, That, from and after July 1st, 1867, the present mode of paying Route Agents, Railway Postal Clerks, and Baggage Masters in charge of Mails, be discontinued; and that they be paid from said date monthly, by the Postmaster, at such terminal office on their route as may be designated by the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department.

Answers to Correspondents.

Legal Responsibility for Error in Registering a Letter.—R. J., C—, Ill.—You say that a man brought you a letter to register, containing $100—that through your "want of knowledge as to how to register a letter," it was sent wrong, did not reach its destination as a registered letter, and was never received by the party addressed—and that the writer says he will sue you: and you ask, "can he get a verdict?" We do not knew whether he can or not; but if he can prove that he paid you twenty cents registry fee for registering his letter, and that your ignorance or carelessness in regard to the plain regulations of the Department deprived his letter of the protection which he had paid for, we think he ought to get a verdict, and we certainly hope that he will.

Postage on Insurance Plates.—R. R. S., Mt C——, Ill.—Postage on Insurance plates should be charged at letter rates, the line. Sec. 261, Reg. 1866.

Closing a Post-Office for Dinner and Supper.—J. R., S——, O.—The regulations provide that "the postmaster will keep his office open during the usual business hours of the place." If it is usual in your town to close business a half an hour for dinner, of course you would be justified in doing so too. Secs. 22 and 27, Reg. 1866.

Notifying Publishers.—W. E. H., H—— C——, N. Y.—You notify publishers by enclosing the notice to the postmaster of the place of business of the publisher, and in cases where the paper is not taken away, you send such notices, without reference to arrearages due to the publisher.

Postage on Samples.—J. F. S., L——, Ky., and J. W. C., W——, Mass.—See editorial article in another column.

Changing the Contents of Franked Documents.—G. D., W—— W——, Conn.—To take a "Pub. Doc." from its franked wrapper, and substitute a letter or seeds, is a violation of law, and should not be permitted.

Postage on Drop Letters.—A. R. T., M——, and J. R. W., E——, Wis.—The postage on drop letters, where there is a free delivery, is two cents, at other places one cent. Sec. 261, Laws 1866.

Forwarding Letters.—A. L. Y., B——, N. Y.—Domestic mail letters are to be forwarded free. Act of June 12, 1866.

Prepayment of Newspaper Postage. T. E. H., O——, Minn.—Where publishers prepay postage at the mailing office, they should get a receipt from the postmaster, who should forward it to the postmaster of the delivery office, as evidence of payment. Without such evidence the postmaster at the delivery office is justified in collecting postage. Sec. 153, Reg. 1866.

Letters "Held for Postage."—A. B., T——, Wis.—Unmailable letters and letters held for postage are to be returned to the Dead Letter Office once in each week, separate from the regular returns. Sec. 374, Reg. 1866.

Cancelling Stamped Envelopes.—S. B. P., A——, O.—Postage stamps affixed to letters, packets, or parcels of any description, and all stamped envelopes, must be immediately and effectually cancelled in the office in which they may be deposited for transmission or delivery. Sec. 176, Reg. 1866.

Advertising Letters.—N. D. G., W——, Md.—By instructions accompanying Act of June 12, 1866, "the advertising of letters and newspapers is restricted to first-class offices." At all other offices postmasters are required to put manuscript lists of unclaimed letters in a conspicuous place.

Insufficient Prepayment of Postage.—S. B., L—— R——, Tenn.—The regulation requiring insufficiently prepaid matter to be forwarded if one rate is paid, is not intended to allow the transmission of letters which the writers knew were insufficiently prepaid. A letter bearing the card of the writer, and with only one stamp affixed, if weighing over half an ounce, should be returned to him for the proper postage.

Time of Closing Mails.—J. U. F., W—— H——, O.—You should allow yourself sufficient time, not to exceed a half an hour, to carefully close your mails. The practice which many people have of delaying till the last moment, and then requiring a postmaster to open a bag to mail a letter, is very wrong, and postmasters should make every effort to break it up.

Postage on Photographs to Germany.—P. C. C., D——, Iowa.—Postage on photographs to Germany, by Bremen or Hamburg mail, must be charged at letter rates, if prepaid.

Procuring Postage Stamps.—J. A. S., F——, N. J.—Address the Third Ass't P. M. Gen'l, Washington, D. C.

Forwarding Newspapers to Regular Subscribers.—H. D. S., G——, N. Y., and P. M., C——, N. Y.—Newspapers cannot be forwarded free to regular subscribers who have removed, but such subscribers may request the publishers to change the address on their papers, and on presenting a receipt for postage by the postmaster at their former office, may receive them without additional postage.

Safes for Post-offices.—B. M. D., C——, Ill.—Safes are not furnished to postmasters by the Department, except in special cases, and yours is not a special case.

Revenue Stamps on Letters.—O. S. R., Y——, Pa.—Letters bearing revenue, instead of postage stamps, are classed as letters "Held for Postage," and should be sent to the Dead Letter Office once in each week. Sec. 374, Reg. 1866. Do not cancel such stamps.

Procuring Mail Keys.—R. V. N., F—— C——, N. M.—The only way to procure a mail key, is by application to the Contract Office, Inspection Division, Washington, D. C. Sec. 438, Reg. 1866.

Unpaid Letters in Transit.—J. R. H., P——, Nev.—Unpaid domestic letters, passing through your office, not franked, should be immediately forwarded to the office of destination, and the proper postage collected there, according to Sec. 150, Reg. 1866.

Postage from Germany.—E. D. F., N——, Iowa.—The postage from Germany varies according to route; the charges on unpaid letters are made at the exchange office, and are undoubtedly correct.

Returning Letters for Better Direction.—R. W., B—— S——, Tenn.—Letters, received at an office, so badly addressed that they cannot be delivered or forwarded to their destination, may be returned to the mailing office for "better direction."

Semi-Weekly Papers Sent Outside the Mails.—W. F. D., S——, O.—Papers sent outside the mails, if delivered through a post-office, are chargeable with postage.

Postage on Newsdealers' Matter.—O. H. G., W—— C——, Nev.—Sections 202 and 225 of Regulations of 1866, apply to newsdealers. In your territory section 229 would have force.

Postage on Specimen Copies of Newspapers, &c.—P. L. S., A——, S. C.—The postage on specimen copies of newspapers should be prepaid at the mailing office, but if they reach the delivery office unpaid, postage should be collected at transient rates. Sec. 150, Reg. 1866.

Date of Second advice of Money Order.—F. E. H., N—— H——, Conn.—A second advice should bear the same date as the original.

Receipts for Unregistered Letters.—W. E. B., H——, Iowa.—A postmaster has the right to give receipts for unregistered letters, but he cannot be compelled to do so.

Express Agents Carrying Letters in Stamped Envelopes.—M. D., D——, Ind.—Any one may carry letters out of the mail, either as a regular business or occasionally, provided the letters are in stamped envelopes, "the stamps in every case being of the value required to prepay the postage which would be chargeable, and the envelopes duly sealed or otherwise firmly secured, so that the letter cannot be taken out without tearing the envelope, and the same be duly addressed, and the date of such letter, or the receipt or transmission thereof to appear on such envelope." Sec. 300, Laws, and 45, Reg. 1866.

Postage on the "American Journal of Medical Science."—W. W., F——, Ind.—This work clearly does not come within the provisions of the law, respecting educational papers of small size. Secs. 202 and 207, Reg. 1866.

UNITED STATES MAIL.

Letters Addressed to Departments, &c.—L. R., O——, Ill.—1. Letters on official business, intended for any of the Departments of Government, are entitled to pass free in the mails even though not fully addressed. 2. A request letter addressed to a bank, or other public institution, not in the place to which the letter is sent for delivery, may be returned before the time of request expires. 3. Franking Privileges, &c.—A. M. C., S—— C——, Ga.—1. Mail contractors have not the right to frank to postmasters, nor have they any privileges in this respect superior to that of any other citizen. 2. A letter marked paid, if coming in a regular mail pouch, should be considered as paid, even if it bear no postmark. Postmasters, however, are guilty of culpable negligence in sending letters without a postmark, and if they will use a little foresight, they need never be without stamps. 3. A circular, to pass through the mails at "circular" rates, must be wholly printed. 4. Postmasters are required to receive in payment for postage stamps, mutilated currency, at a proportional rate of deduction for missing parts. Such currency will be redeemed at the Treasury Department, when sent in sums of not less than three dollars.

Mutilated Currency, &c.—H. C. P., W——, Ohio.—1. See preceding answer. 2. Offices Entitled to Official Envelopes.—J. A. F., J——, Ark.—The Postmaster-General is authorized to make allowances, in his discretion, for the various items of expense which may be incurred at offices of the third and fourth classes. Secs. 17, 18, 19, Reg. 1866.

Disposition of Undelivered Circulars.—H. H. B., D——, Ill.—Circulars not delivered within a month should be sold as waste paper, and the proceeds credited to the Department. Secs. 390 and 391, Reg. 1866.

Payment of Postage on Transient Printed Matter, &c.—H. J., I——, Texas.—1. If a postmaster has neither one nor two cent stamps, he will have to receive money in payment of postage for these amounts. 2. We know of no mail line from New Orleans to Brazil. 3. A postmaster is not obliged to keep his office open on Sunday unless mails arrive or depart on that day. Sec. 27, Reg. 1866.

Mailing Letters under the New Registration System.—W. F. B., G——, N. Y.—If a Distributing Office is located on the route between the mailing office, and the office of destination, registered letters must be sent to that distributing office, except when sent under brass lock from one first-class office to another.

Postage on Samples.—T. F. V., L——, Ind.—The card containing the samples you sent, having manuscript writing on it, letter postage should be charged. Sec. 37, Reg. 1866.

Postage on Dime Novels.—J. B., D—— M——, Iowa.—Postage on Dime Novels, should he charged at two cents per four onuces—they having been decided to be periodicals. Other novels and books, four cents per four onuces.

Delivery of Letters to the Husband of the Party Addressed.—O. A. A., C——, Iowa.—You have no right, contrary to order from a wife, to deliver to her husband letters addressed to her.

Every Postmaster will be be careful never to send a registered letter "direct," when there is a Distributing Post Office between his office and the office to which the letter is directed. He must enclose it in a "Registered Package Envelope," directed to the Postmaster at the first Distributing Post Office on the route, and also send the Registered Letter Bill and Return Bill in a common envelope to the same Postmaster by same mail—just the same as if the letter were for delivery at the Distributing Post Office.

Postmasters at first-class offices will, of course, note the exception to this rule in their case. Fourth paragraph of General Instructions in regard to registering letters.

MARKING STAMPS.

Post Offices, the gross receipts of which are over $1,000 per annum, will be furnished with circular marking and rating stamps of class No. 1; less than $1,000 and over $500, with stamps of class No. 2; less than $500 and over $100, with stamps of class No. 3. Applications for these stamps should be made to the Appointment office.

Postmasters at offices, the gross receipts of which are less than $75 per annum, if they use rating stamps, must obtain the same at their own expense.

Letter balances, upon the like application, are furnished to offices which collect in postages $75 a year.

† Pamphlets and Periodicals two cents each, if not weighing over two ounces, and four cents an ounce or fraction of an ounce if they exceed two ounces, to be collected in all cases in the United States.

‡ Pamphlets, Magazines, and other printed matter, two cents per four ounces or fraction thereof.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

TO THE BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES.

Cape Breton, Prince Edward's Island, and Nova Scotia. To Newfoundland pre-payment required. To Canada and New Brunswick, 10c. per ½ oz., any distance.

*10 cents when not over 3,000 miles from the line of crossing.

Steamers of the Cunard line sail from Boston twice each month, touching at Halifax, and when letters are sent by that conveyance for Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward's Island, the U. S. postage is 5 cents the single rate, to be pre-paid. The inland rate is collected on delivery. On newspapers by this route, the postage is two cents each.

RULES FOR RATING LETTERS, &C.

1. IN THE UNITED STATES AND BRITISH MAILS.—Letters exchanged with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or addressed to British Colonies and foreign countries, for transmission in the open mail via England, are charged with United States and British postage, at a single rate for each half ounce or fraction thereof, the same as domestic letters.

In the case of letters to be forwarded in the British mail for transmission from England "via Marseilles," the French postage is rated at 6 cents the quarter ounce, except on letters for Java, China, Labuan, Borneo, Japan, the Moluccas and Philippine Islands, which are rated at 8 cents per half ounce, and except, also, on letters for Syria and Tunis, by French packet, when the single French rate is 12 cents per quarter ounce.

2. IN THE UNITED STATES AND FRENCH MAILS.—Letters in the mail to France are to be charged with single rate of postage, if not exceeding the weight of one quarter ounce; double rate if exceeding a quarter, but not exceeding half an ounce; and so on, an additional rate being charged for each quarter ounce, or fractional part of a quarter ounce.

The rates by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz.: Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent via Suez, countries beyond seas via France, others than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibraltar, Hong Koug, Java, Mauritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia, (except Belgrade,) Shanghai, Singapore and Spain. The limit of payment to Spain, Portugal and Gibraltar, is Bebobia; to Servia (except Belgrade,) Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria," the frontier of Turkey and Austria; to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries via Suez, the seaports of the Indies, or of the sea of China to which the English packets ply; and to places beyond seas, other than those designated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of destination.

3. IN THE MAILS TO PRUSSIA, OR TO BELGIUM.—Letters in the United States and Prussian closed mails, and in the mails exchanged with Belgium, are charged with single rate of postage if not exceeding half an ounce in weight; double rate if exceeding half an ounce, but not exceeding an ounce; quadruple rate if exceeding an ounce, but not exceeding two ounces; and so on, for greater weights, charging two rates for every ounce or fractional part of an ounce over the first ounce. As this scale of progression differs from that followed in respect to domestic letters, great care is required to prevent mistakes.

4. IN THE MAILS TO BREMEN, OR TO HAMBURG, &C.—Letters addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Hamburg; and letters addressed to the British North American Provinces, are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an ounce.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.—Postmasters, should be careful where the postage is prepaid, to collect the proper amount. They should be particular to notice the route indicated on the envelopes of letters, and to collect postage accordingly. Letters marked at some offices, marked "via England," or "via Prussian Closed Mail," for a German State, are frequently taken upon the prepayment of Bremen rates, and those marked "via Bremen," at Prussian closed rates, &c.

To prevent mistakes at the exchange offices, it is desirable that the particular routes by which letters are to be forwarded from the United States to Europe, should be distinctly written on the covers. Letters intended for transmission in the open mail to England, should bear the direction, "open mail via England;" if for transmission in the French mail, they should be directed, "via France in the French Mail;" if for transmission by closed mail to Prussia, they should be directed "via Prussian closed mail;" if for transmission in the closed mail to Belgium, they should be directed, "via Belgian closed mail;" and if for transmission by the New York and Bremen line to Bremen, or by the New York and Hamburg line to Hamburg, they should be directed, "via Bremen," or "via Hamburg."

It is important that letters addressed to Germany and other European countries, via France, where the single rate per quarter ounce is 21 cents, should be plainly marked to be sent "via France;" otherwise they may be mis-sent in the open mail to Liverpool, by United States packet, the 21 cent rate per half ounce being also chargeable on letters thus forwarded.

P. O., INNUBIBUS June, 1867.

Ed. U. S. Mail:—I have been much gratified for some time, at the prospect of improvement, in the system of registration of letters; for though I have been singularly fortunate in my registered letters, yet I know from my conversation with my brother postmasters, and with the efficient and gentlemanly Special Agent of the district which includes my office, as well as through the oft-repeated suggestions and directions in the U. S. Mail, that there were serious defects in the old system, which rendered it comparatively of little value as a means for securely transmitting letters through the mails. I have received the new instructions, have diligently studied them, and required my clerks to do the same, till we know them "like a book;" I have received my supply of blanks, and of the showy and attracting, if not attractive, "registered package envelopes;" and I have carefully read your valuable remarks and suggestions in the last two numbers of the Mail. I am therefore "armed for the fight." But I notice some of the "professiou," are not equally ready. Though, as I have said, I have been very fortunate in registered letters, both to and from my office, delays have occurred involving disagreeable complaints, and no less disagreeable excuses, besides sundry letters of inquiry; but some of my brother postmasters have not been so fortuuate, especially in registered letters from their offices,—if, indeed, the postmaster who is guilty of wilful ignorance or of carelessness can be said to be unfortunate, and not criminal.

The new registration system is praiseworthy, and seems to approach perfection; and yet in many cases some of its provisions must prove a failure, not from inherent weakness, but from the stupidity, if I may use the word, of some of those who should be governed by its provisions

I wish to call attention to s few inaccuracies, which I have noticed: Even before the first of June, more than one "registered package envelope" passed throngh my office from smaller offices. I am, however, less inclined to censure postmasters for this exhibition of "early hirdism," beeause the instructions are silent on the subject, and I do not know therefore but that the error should be laid on the Department; and yet again, I must blame them for this early putting in force the new system, for had they been subscribers to the Mail, and what is more, readers of it, they would have found in its columns the supplemeutary instructions required. A more nupardonable blunder is sometimes committed. This morning, on emptying a pouch brought in by stage, a "registered package envelope" tumbled out slong with the other mail matter. On examining its face, with a view not only to find the memoranda necessary to be entered on my "record," but also to learn the external compliance with the regulations, I was astonished to find the "fee paid in stamps" on the package envelope itself. Of comsc I could not examine its contents, hut a very natursl lufercnee is that there was but one letter. How any one can so misconstrue the regulations in respect to the fee, (to be found in section 4) is to me very surprising; so much so, that I would scarcely luave believed it unless I had seen it. The words are explicit, as follows: "to be attached to the letters," &c., how can sny one construe these words to mean that the stamps in payment of the registry fes are to be affixed to the "registered package envelope," instead pt the registered letters themselves? A third error I have observed is—"mailing direct" when a D. P. O. is located on the route between ths mailing office and ths office of destinstion. Day before yasterday, I rsceived s registered packags envelops addressed to a postmaster in Missouri. I bad ths curiosity to examine hnw many distrihnting offices are located hetween the "mailing office, and the office of destination," and I find no less than four on one ronte, and three on anotber, there being a choice of two. Here again the instructions are so clear, that it would seem a blind man could see, and a fool understand. Annther error is illegible postmarks. Proper as it is tbat ordinary letters should be clearly and distinctly postmarked, I consider it essential to the complete success of the "new system," that the postmark on "registered package envelopes" should be unmistakable. I have thrown together these few practical hints, Mr. Editor, because I thought that a "word in season" from "one of the craft," might prove a useful adjunct to your own timely and excellent articles on the subject.

NICOTINUS.

"Returning for Better Direction."

As the views of our correspondent below may be held by some others of our readers, we publish his letter entire:

Editor U. S. Mail:—In your June number, under the heading "answers to correspondents," and more particularly of "Returning letters for better direction," you say: "letters received st an offics so hadly addressed that tbey can not be delivered or forwarded to their destination may be returned to the mailing offiee for 'better direction.'" As I know of no law or regulation of the Post Office Department that would sustain your position, I heg leave to request that you will be good enough in your next issue to refer your resders to the authority for your assertion. I know that an evil practice has arisen with some postmasters, chiefly those in the larger cities, who feel inclined to "lord it over their weak brethren," to return to the mailing offices, letters the addresses upon which would subject them to some little trouble to decipher. This is done in the most csvalier manner possible, the letter being thrown into an envelope endorsed "returned for better direction," assuming, what is positively absurd, that the postmaster at the mailing offiee has better means to know or obtain the writer's wishes as to the direction of such letter than the postmaster so returning it.

The postmaster at the office to which such letter is returned, is not authorized to open it to ascertain hy whom it was written, so that he may make inquiry of such party where he desired it sent; and eonsequently is as powerless as any other postmaster to remedy the defect in the direction. Why then do a vain thing? Why not let the postmaster at whose offiee it is ascertained that the letter is so badly directed that it can go no further, forthwith, or at least at the end of the week, send it to the dead letter office? whieh in ninety-nine eases out of every hundred it must eventually reach through the original mailing office.

Again, letters are sometimes so directed that the State, perhaps also the County, may be legible enough, but the offiee in doubt. What hetter can a postmaster at the mailing offiee do than to send it to the State where directed, supposing that the offiee, although illegible to him, may be well understood by idem sonam or other reasou by any prominant postmaster in that State? And is he for his pains to have such letter, with something of an air of superiority, returned to him "for better direction?" Such habit should be abolished as absurd, unreasonable, and obtains in my opinion simply to relieve some lordly postmaster of the necessity of sending such letters, as they ought to do, to the dead letter office. B.

"B" is right in supposing that there is no law or regulation distinctly authorizing the practice he refers to: and as to those letters which reach the office of delivery, and on which the address is only illegible as to the name of the person, he is entirely correct. But can he find any law or regulation which authorizes a postmaster to send to the dead letter office aoy domestic letters except such as are mailed at or addressed to his own office? Letters on which the State and County are legible, should be, and usually are, sent to the county seat—those on which the State only is legible should be sent to the capital, or largest office, of the State. If the address cannot be deciphered at those offices, we see no impropriety in returning them to the mailing office "for better direction." There the address may be corrected—at the small offices probably will be. If that is impossible, they should be sent thenee to the dead letter office as "unmailable letters." That our correspondent finds anything "lordly" or indieative of "sirs of superiority" in the four innocent-looking words, "Returned for better direction," proves his possession of a lively imagination, as clearly as his well-written letter proves his possession of other qualifications of the wielder of "the pen of a ready writer."

PLEASE GIVE YOUR NAMES.—Some of our new (and a few of our old) subscribers have, in remitting the subscriptiou price, concluded their letters without signature, simply requesting us to "address P. M. at ——." To these we would suggest that it will be much more convenient and desirable for them to send us their names, as well as official title, and they will confer a favor by so doing.

Sundry Post-office Matters.

We are asked to stats the "correct manner of reporting defaced stamped envelopes." Defaced stamped envelopes and defaced stampe are reported under one bead as such an amonnt of stamps cancelled, the object being to ascertain the amount, and not the kinds, in order to adjust the salary... To an inquiry respecting W. Harris & Co., 265 Spring street, this city, who propose to issue a Post-office Directory, we would reply that there is no such firm at that place, and no such directory as advertised under such firm's name, but the whols is probably a scheme to obtain the names of persona living in the country and elsewhere to whom certain parties can send tickets for gift jewellery, gift concert, and nther swindling enterprises.... We cannot answer our correspondent's question about salary, for salaries vary according to the different amounts of stamps cancelled, newspaper postages, box-rents, &c. The gross proceeds of an office are the whole proceede from whatever source.... A correspondent inquires "if s postmaster is to get his pay out of the income of his office, and pay over the remainder." By reference to article 25 and instructions of the quarterly account current, he will perceive that he is to "credit himself with the amount of his compensation for the quarter;" in other words, hs is to retain such amonnt, and to pay the balance to the Department.... We have frequent complaints of failures to receive THE MAIL. We can assure our subscribers that their papers are regularly mailed, hnt we know that in many instances copies are borrowed in transit and not returned. We bad a conversation, not long since, with one of these borrowers—s postmaster in a village not one hundred miles away—and though he assured us he never neglected to return the paper to the mail pouch, yet we feel assured that his and similar practices in others are not only very bad ones for subscribers, but are directly contrary to the regulations, and are finable offenees under the law.... Box-rents still constitute a subject of frequent inquiry, notwithstanding the clear and explicit regulations on the subject. "Letter boxes (except at offices where the building is owned by the government) are the property of those postmasters who choose to put them up." (Sec. 473, Reg. 1866.) The postmaster may or may not erect hoxes, he may inerease their number, he may also regulate the amount of rent to be charged. But whatever rent he may receive for boxes must be included in the revenue of his office, and accounted for to the Department. In connection with this subject comes also an inquiry whether the Department will sustain the writer in keeping bis offiee open certain hours that he specifies. The regulations for keeping open an office may he found in Sec. 27, Reg. 1866. Daring the usual hours of business in the place, and an hour or more on Sunday, if a mail arrive on that day, being the general rule.

SINGULAR AND DANGEROUS MAIL MATTER.—A few days ago a small paper box was received at the Post Office at Virginia City which presented a somewhat suspicious appearance, induciog something more than a cursory examination. The box was made after the pattern of those in which bronchial troches are sold, sliding into a case, and was punched full of small holes. The box was partly open, and in handling it one of the clerks noticed small black claws working at the opening, showing that there was something alive within. Upon carefully enlarging the opening with a pencil, out sprang a large and exceedingly lively tarantula. The ugly, hairy, venomous beast ran to the edge of the distributing table, jumped to the floor, and was doing its tallest travelling for the letter-boxes. A stamp of the foot effectually squelched the life of the nasty ereature, reducing it to marmalade. On taking another look at the box more claws were found scratching at the opeuing, and two more of the spiteful nnd poisonous little devils were found and dispatched upon the instant, without benefit of clergy or the interpositiou of judge or jury. The clerks have declared war against all such mail matter, and we eannot blame them. Had these huge and ugly spiders succeeded in getting out of the box, as they were in a fair way to do, the chances are that some one would have been bitten while assorting the mail, or had they crawled under the wrappers of some of the newspapers, what a surprise some lady subscriber would have met with at getting a "nip" in her delicate forefinger while opening her paper. Somebody will he sending rattlesnakes and scorpions through the mails next—dirty socks, shirts, collars, corn hoes, and such stuff, are mild speeies of mail matter, and have often been indulged in; hut making Uncle Sam's mail a vehicle for the transportatiou of poisonous insects and reptiles is a horse of another color.

NEW POST OFFICE DIRECTORY.—We understand that the Department has in preparation an entirely new Directory, containing the names of all offices actually in existence, and the names of postmasters. It will be issued to postmasters as soon as completed.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster-General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL," [see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866,] and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster-General.

ADOPTION OF THE HALF OUNCE SCALE FOR RATING LETTERS EXCHANGED IN THE BRITISH MAILS, VIA ST. THOMAS AND VIA PANAMA, BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND COUNTRIES ON THE WEST COAST OF SOUTH AMERICA.

We are requested to announce that a uniform scale of progression for charging postage, having half an ounce as the unit throughout, has also been extended to correspondence exchanged in the British mails, via St. Thomas and via Panama, between the United States and the West Indies and countries on the west coast of South America.

In future, therefore, the postage upon all letters exchanged through the British mails, whether via England, via St. Thomas or via Panama, will advance by a single rate for each half ounce or fraction thereof; instead of charging as heretofore two rates for every ounce or fraction of an ounce, when the letter or packet exceeded one ounce in weight.

Postmasters will take notice of this important change, and levy postage accordingly.

Postage to Port Said, Egypt, by French Mail.

An office of distribution at "Port Said" Egypt, has recently been established by the French Post Office, to be served with mails by the French steamers of the Syrian line, leaving Marseilles, France, on the 8th, 18th, and 28th of every month; and the rates of postage &c., applicable to the correspondence sent to or coming from the cities of the Levant in which France has Post Office establishments, has been extended to the correspondence transmitted between the United States and Port Said, in the French mail, via France.

The rates of postage to and from Port Said will therefore be as follows, viz.:

30 cents per single rate of 1-4 ounce on letters, prepayment optional.

2 cents each on newspapers, prepayment required.

2 cents per four ounces or fraction thereof, on periodicals, pamphlets, &c.,—prepayment required, and the established domestic rates on all other kinds of printed matter, prepayment required.

Special Instructions

TO RAILWAY POSTAL CLERKS AND ROUTE AGENTS IN RELATION TO REGISTERED MATTER UNDER THE NEW SYSTEM OF REGISTRATION.

Each Head Clerk and Ronte Agent will provide himself with a small leather mail ponch in which to convey "registered package envelopes" to and from the terminal offices of his ronte, of which he will take special and permanent charge.

They will also obtain from the Post-office Department, or from the postmasters at the termini of their rontes a book provided by the Department for the purpose of keeping a record of all registered matter passing through their hands.

On leaving the office at either terminns of their route, they will receive, and receipt for, any or all registered package envelopes, packages of stamps or stamped envelopes, that may be tendered them by the postmaster or the proper clerk, properly enter the same in their book of record for registered matter, place the registered package envelopes in their ponch, incinding the stamps and stamped envelopes when practicable, and become personally responsible for their delivery into the hands of a postmaster or other authorized agent of the Post-office department.

Registered matter coming into their hands, either from postmasters on the line of their route, railway postal clerks, or route agents on their own or on other routes, or that may come to them in pouches for distribution, or that may come into their hands in any way, they will also enter in their book of record of registered matter, and in all cases receipt for the same.

When a head clerk or route agent arrives at the terminus of his route, he will take what registered matter he may have for delivery, into the post-office, deliver the same to the postmaster, the registry clerk, or other proper clerk, and at once obtain his receipt on his book of record.

Registered matter for delivery from a way office on his route at which he delivers the mail, he will send to that office in the ponch of letters for delivery, (the same to be witnessed when practicable) accompanied by a receipt properly filled up for signing with his own name, title and P. O. address on the receipt, that the postmaster to whom it is so sent may know to whom and where to return it.

When this receipt is returned properly signed, he will make a note of the fact on his book of record opposite the description of the registered package, and file away the receipt for future reference.

When a head clerk or route agent has registered matter that is to pass through the hands of another railway postal clerk, ronta agent or other agent on a connecting or intersecting route leading from or past his terminal office, and he cannot at the time obtain a receipt of such clerk or agent, (as positive safety to registered matter is of more importance than expedition, and as there is no positive safety without a perfect chain of receipts,) he will take such registered matter into his terminal office and take a receipt for the same upon his book of record, the same as for registered matter left there for delivery; or, if it should be registered matter that is to pass through the hands of another railway postal clerk, routs agent, or other agent on a connecting or intersecting route leading from or past a way office on his ronte, at which he delivers mail, and he cannot at the time obtain a receipt of such clerk or agent, he will send it with a receipt the same as above directed in case of registered matter for delivery from such way office, and the postmasters at such offices are required to sign and return such receipts by the next mail to the address of the postal clerk or route agent who left it, and to take a receipt of the postal clerk or agent to whom he may deliver such registered matter.

A. N. ZEVELY.
Third Asst. P. M. General.
POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, Washington D. C., July 1867.

Registering Letters.

We give below answers to sundry questions, which we have received from subscribers during the past month, concerning the proper method of registering letters according to the new system:

R. P. T., St. G——, Del.—The Ronte Agent, or Railway P. O. Clerk, should place all registered matter intended to be sent from your office into the ponch containing the matter for delivery at your office, with receipt for you to sign. See "Special Instructions to Ronte Agents, &c.," in another column. It will be well for yon to empty and search the other ponch for a time.

N. V. W., M——, Ind.—Yon should begin numbering your registered letters anew, at the commencement of each official quarter—that is, on the 1st of July, October, January, and April; also your registered package envelopes. See sections 5 and 7, Registered Letter Regulations.

E. E., E——, O.—You are correct in supposing that an error occurred at the D. P. O. The registered letter bill and return bill should not have been separated, but sent together in a separate envelope, and a return receipt should have accompanied the letter, enclosed in the registered package envelope.

T. B., F——, O.—Yon were right in nnmbering the first registered package yon mailed "No. 1," without regard to the number of the letter. The numbers on the registered package envelopes are not expected to correspond with the numbers on the letters, as sometimes two or more letters are sent in the same package envelope. Send to the Department, at the end of each qnarter, copies of your "Account of Registered Letters Sent" and "Received."

J. M. Y., M——, Ill.—No registry fee need be paid on letters to Heads of Departments, &c., which yon are authorized or required to send to them registered, on official business; but all letters sent to persons entitled to the franking privilege are not entitled to be registered free.

M. E. C., M——, N. Y.—As there is no distribnting post-office on the route between your office and those yon mention, yon must send registered matter for those places direct, placing it in way ronte agent's ponch; and yon had better have a witness to the fact.

G. A. B., C—— City, Neb.—The ragulations require yon to enter on your "Record of Registered Matter in Transit," the number, postmark and destination of each registered package envelope, or registered package of stamps or stamped envelopes, that passes through your office. From the situation of your office, it does not seem probable that so large a number of these will pass through it on any one day as to require a great deal of time to record them. If, however, such is the case, a report of the facts to the Contract Office may lead to a special order allowing more time to change the mail at offices on that route.

D. C. H., L——, O.—1. The registry fee must not be placed on the registered package envelope, hut on the envelope of the letter itself. 2. See first answer in column of "answers to correspondents."

Intentional Underpayment of Postage.

The question as to the proper disposition of mail matter deposited in a post office intentionally underpaid, having been often submitted to us, and being one likely often to arise, we bave addressed the Department on the subject and received the following reply, which will serve as a guide to all who may be in donbt upon the snbject;

25th June, 1867.

Sir: In reply to yours of the 24th instant, I have to say, that the spirit of the postal law requires the full prepayment of postage, as indicated by section 242; and that the modification contained in section 292 was only intended to cover cases of inadvertance or ignorance, and should not be applied to cases where the full payment is wilfnlly and knowingly withheld. In other words:

In ordinary cases, where one full rate shall have been prepaid the amount omitted should be rated up as an undercharge, and the letter forwarded to its destination as directed hy section 158 of the regulations; hnt in case of known intentional and wilful omission the letters should be held for postage, and if not paid hy the mailing party, returned to the Dead Letter Office.

Letters to Minors and Married Women.

Postmasters not unfrequently experience some embarrassement and doubt as to their duty in the matter of delivering letters addressed to minor children, contrary to the wishes of their parents and guardians—the natural or legal right of the latter to prevent improper or clandestine correspondence by those for whose moral welfare they are responsible, seeming to conflict with the postmaster's obligation to deliver all letters to the persons addressed or their authorized agents. Some appear to be in doubt as to the existence of any right on the part of a husband, to control the correspondence of his wife.

In order to obtain an authoritative statement of what is the duty of postmasters under such circumstances, the following questions have been submitted to the Department, and the replies below are to be considered as official decisions:

1. What is the duty of a P. M. when letters arrive at his office addressed to minor children who forbid him to deliver such letters to any persons but themselves, and whose parents or guardians forbid him to deliver them to the children?

When such minor children are dependent upon their parents for support and maintenance, the parents should control their correspondence; but postmasters should exercise a sound discretion in such cases, and be fully satisfied that such children are dependent upon the parents.

2. What is the duty of a P. M. when the parents or guardians not only forbid the delivery of such letters to the children, but also demand their delivery to themselves?

Keeping in view the facts as stated in No. 1, the delivery should be to the parents or guardians as the case may be.

3. What is the duty of a P. M. when letters arrive at his office directed to a married woman, whose husband forbids the P. M. to deliver them to her, and claims that they should be delivered to him—the wife having given instructions that they should be delivered to no other person than herself?

He should follow the instructions literally, and deliver the letters to the wife, in accordance with regulations 58 and 59.

4. When no instructions on the subject have been given by either of the parties coacerned, is not the delivery of the wife's letter to the husband, or vice versa, a legal delivery?

In the absence of any special instructions such delivery would be proper, as the order to so deliver is implied as indicated in section 59.

Post Route Maps.

Freqnent inquiries having beeu made as to the mode of distribution and the terms of sale of the Post Route Maps to be issued by the Department, we have the following remarks to make at present:

The map now completed is that of the New England States, in two sheets, embracing also a part of New York and Canada, bnt excinding the most northern and eastern part of Maine, which could not be shown on the same sheets with the others on the same scale. They have been prepared nader the direction of Mr. Walter L. Nicholson, Topographer of the Post-office Department, and are highly creditable to his skill as well as to his industry. Every post-route, with the offices located on each, and the distances between them, are plainly shown, and the character and freqnency of the service performed, indicated hy the colors of the lines which mark the routes. (A separate map of the whole of Maine, with the connections with the Provinces of the Canadian Confederation, will be afterwards issued.)

The maps of the New York service are in the hands of the engraver, as well as those of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

The expenses of the production of these maps being covered by an appropriation made by Congress, at the reqnest of the Postmaster General, with the understanding that, after the reqnisite issne for the wants of the Post-office and other public Departments, the proceeds of the sale of the maps should be made to reimburse the outlay, a restriction is hence made on any very general distribution other than by sale.

It is at preseat contemplated to distribnte the map now ready (viz., that of the New England States) to the post-offices of all the larger cities throughont the conntry, and to all the county seats of the New England States and of the State of New York.

After this, the maps will be for sale at designated depositories, which will be duly indicated, as also the price at which they will be sold.

It is expected that the map will be very nseful to the various railroad, telegraph, and express companies, as well as to the general public.

The distribution is now in progress, and we hope that before long similar accessions to our working facilities and to our knowledge of the geography and resources of the country will be made available to those in the postal service and the public.

ERRORS IN LAST FOREIGN POSTAGE TABLE.—By one of those accidents to which types are liable, one of the columns of figures at the right hand side of our Foreign Postage Table for June became displaced, and a portion of the edition of that month was printed with the rates of postage in that column in a very mixed condition. It was corrected as soon as observed, and we have taken measures to guard against a recurrence of the difficulty.

Rather Unreasonable.

A few—we are glad to say that their name is not Legion—of the postmasters who subscribe to this paper, after having written to the editor for an opinion on some doubtful point in postal matters, or inquiring as to the proper construction, as decided by the Department, of a postal law or regulation, and after having received a reply not exactly to their minds, (which they had apparently already made up previous to making the request for information,) have turned upon the editor with complaints that he is rather "hard upon" them; that "it is a good deal easier to sit in a sanctum and say 'do so and so' than to be obliged to do it," etc., etc.

Now we submit that this is just a little unreasonable. We take it for granted that when a subscriber asks for information, he does it because he desires to hear what he ought to do—not what it would be most convenient or pleasant for him to do. Doubtless it is much easier, in many cases, to disregard a regulation than to follow it—to go round a law than to obey it; but, if THE MAIL were to say to every inquirer on poluts of official duty, "Suit yourself, sir; you have only to consult your own convenience. If the law don't meet your views of what is right, repeal it 'on your own hook;' If a regulation offends you, erase it from your official copy and accommodate the neighbors and make things pleasant, regardless of the prescribed duties you have sworn to perform; in short, do that which is right in your own eyes, and be happy"—what then? Then, THE MAIL, instead of being what we honestly try to make it—an assistant to every one in the service who endeavors to do his duty faithfully—would be a nuisance deserving of prompt snppression.

If in the opinion of any subscriber there are laws or regulations which are in need of alterations or amendments by which the efficiency or interests of the service would be promoted—or the provisions of which, he considers, impose grievous burdens on himself,—we shall be glad to give him reasonable space for the expression of such opinions in our columns; in fact, we have often invited our friends to ventilate their ideas on all postal subjects in THE MAIL. Free speech and temperate discussion can harm no one. But it is scarcely fair to write snappish letters to an editor for stating the self-evident proposition that unrepealed laws and unrescinded regulations should be obeyed by those whose actions they are intended to govern.

There are possibly some who hold that an editor's duty consists in singing pleasant songs in the ears of his patrons. With such, while conceding to them the largest liberty of opinion, we beg leave to disagree.

Newspaper Supplements.

Under the 226th standing instruction of the Department, which authorizes publishers to fold within their regular issues, bona fide and gennine supplements without additional charge for postage, gross violations of the 41st instruction are constantly perpetrated, and the revenue defrauded to an alarming exteat.

Annexed is an extract from a letter upon this subject recently sent from the Appointment Office to a publisher:

"That Mr. ——'s handbill is not such a publication as to entitle it to be classed as a bona fide supplement to a regular newspaper, to be enclosed therewith as a supplement under the provisions of the 226th standing instruction—Laws and Regulations, Edition of 1866.

"The reveaues of the Department have been greatly defrauded by the publishers enclosing handbills, circulars and business cards, with copies of their papers, addressed to subscribers, when such enclosures should pay a distinct and separate postage. Every such enclosure renders the package subject to letter postage by weight, which if not paid by the party addressed, will render the sender liable to a penalty of five dollars for each offence. Such has been the ruling of the Department for years. You are in error in supposing any former Postmaster General has authorized the sending of such enclosures free of postage."

Postage on Printed Matter via Overland Mail.—L. H. A., M—— and M. A. S., V——, Ind.—We have made a change in the instruction on the third page of THE MAIL, and to which you refer, which change, we presume, will explain the matter satisfactorily.

Obtaining Increase of Salary.—H. J. S., D—— B——, Wis.—If your quarterly returns show the salary allowed you is ten per centum less than it would he on the basis of commissions under the act of 1854, the Postmaster General may review and readjust the same. Sec. 29, P. O. Laws, 1866. Any postmaster claiming a readjustment under this law, must make to the First Assistant Postmaster General, under oath, a special exhibit of the whole amount of stamps canceled at his office during a period of not less than two quarters, also a statement of other items of postage on which commissions were estimated under the act of 1854. Act of June 12, 1866, and accompanying instructions. It will be observed that the amount of stamps sold is not taken into consideration in the estimate for salaries.

Procuring Duplicate Money Order.—R. M. W., T——, Ill.—You should fill in the first page of form 7, accordiug to the facts. The affidavit on the second page should be filled in by the remitter, setting forth the particulars of the loss or destruction of the orlginal order. You should then, as issuing postmaster, fill up the certificate on the third page, and send the sheet to the paying postmaster, who should fill up the other certificate on the third page, and then send the sheet to the Superintendent of the Money Order Office, Washington, D. C. He will issue a duplicate order, which he will forward to the issuing postmaster, to he by him handed to the remitter. Sec. 12, page 8, Money Order Instructions.

Collection of Foreign Postage in Coin.—J. S. L., C——, S. C.—The old three cent (silver) pieces are a legal tender to the amount of thirty cents, and you would therefore he ohliged to receive eight of them in full payment of the postage on an unpaid single rate letter from England, which reaebes you for delivery, crediting yourself with the twelve cents coin premium as an overcharge. The other coins you mention are not a legal tender to any such amount, and are not "gold or silver." You should refuse them when offered as specie payment of such postage.

Old Regulations.—H. F. W., H——, N. C.—The regulations of 1850 will not serve as a guide for your official action. Write at once to the Appointment Office, P. O. Department, Washington, for a copy of the Laws and Regulations, edition of 1866.

Three Months' Subscribers, &c.—O. R. G., M——, Mich.—1. A subscriber to a newspaper whose subscription begins on the 15th July and ends 15th October, may pay the quarterly postage for the official quarter, which begins July 1st and ends September 30th; and such payment entitles him to receive his paper until October 15th. So long as he pays "not less than one quarter's postage" he fulfils the law. 2. The same answer applies to the case of a subscriber to a "campaign paper." In hoth cases, charge yourself in your newspaper account, as having received postage for the current official quarter, though the delivery of the paper extends into the next. 3. A person who desires to receive a daily for two weeks (or any term less than three months), may either pay three months' quarterly postage, or transient postage on each copy, as he may elect. 4. The amount received from a subscriber who pays quarterly postage in advance for five mouths (beginning in the middle of an official quarter) should all he entered in the account for the quarter during which he begins receiving the paper.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any questions as to prepayment, by this simple criterion.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Humburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any port of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or, (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established, the rate is 1 cent.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

Postage on Daily Papers to subscribers when prepaid quarterly or yearly in advance, either at the mailing office or office of delivery, per quarter, (three months)..... 35 cents.
Six times per week, per quarter, (3 mos.). 30 "
For Tri-Weekly, " " .. 15 "
For Semi-Weekly, " " .. 10 "
For Weekly, " " .. 5 "

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the U. S.:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz..... 6cts.
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz...12 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz...18 "
Monthly, not over 4 oz..... 8 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 6 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 9 "
Quarterly, not over 4 oz..... 1 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 2 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 3 "

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the po-tmaster must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one-quarter and a third, one-quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one-quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages to one address at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and no additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazines and periodicals sent to regular subscribers from publishers) intended to go by mail westward from the western boundary of Kansas, or eastward from the eastern boundary of California, must be prepaid by stamps at letter postage rates. Sec. 259, P. O. Laws, Edition of 1866.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions,) the postage to be prepaid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 6 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 16 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 8, 1863, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows: "The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter, except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address, and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

To inclose or conceal a letter or other thing (except bills and receipts for subscription) in, or to write or print anything, after its publication, upon any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, is illegal, and subjects such printed matter, and the entire package of which it is a part, to letter postage.

Any word or communication, whether by printing, writing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper of a newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or other printed matter, other than the name and address of the person to whom it is to be sent, and the date when subscription expires, subjects the package to letter postage.

Every Postmaster will be be careful never to send a registered letter "direct," when there is a Distributing Post Office between his office and the office to which the letter is directed. He must enclose it in a "Registered Package Envelope," directed to the Postmaster at the first Distributing Post Office on the route, and also send the Registered Letter Bill and Return Bill in a common envelope to the same Postmaster by same mail—just the same as if the letter were for delivery at the Distributing Post Office.

Postmasters at first-class offices will, of course, note the exception to this rule in their case. Fourth paragraph of General Instructions in regard to registering letters.

TO POSTMASTERS.

COLLECT POSTAGE IN ADVANCE.

TRYON'S SYSTEM for Newspaper and Box Accounts enables you to do this in accordance with Postal Law and Regulations with ease, certainty and little cost of time and labor, and also readily to make returns of these postages in your Quarterly Account Current.

The principle upon which the system is based is thus expressed—"No debt for postage is recognised by the Post Office Department, nor in this system. Credit for payment is given by inserting in the proper quarter column of the year the amount of postage received for that quarter on the publication opposite the name of which it is set." See Regulations of 1866, secs. 310, 311.

The blanks are arranged, and directions given readily to comply with this and other requirements in relation to Newspaper and Box Accounts.

The blank forms are on folio sheets of the usual size of Post Office blanks, and are arranged to embrace a period of four years.

Fifteen sheets for offices of the 4th class, and ten for the 5th class are ordinarily sufficient to last that period, and will be sent together with a copy of the explanations, directions and examples, by mail, postpaid, as follows:

For ten sheets.....$1 50
For fifteen sheets.....2 00

After which Postmasters ordering in quantities of from Ten to Twenty Sheets will be furnished by mail, postpaid, at the rate of $8 per 100 sheets.

The blank form for Postage Receipts on inferior paper will be furnished in sheets to those ordering them, at the rate of $4 per 100 sheets, comprising about 1,000 Receipts. Postage paid on orders not exceeding 25 sheets.

Over these quantities, for large offices, an additional amount, to cover Postage, will be required.

Those soliciting sample sheets are informed, that a correct idea of the system can be formed only by the explanations and directions which with the blank sheets comprise the work, and can be sent only as advertised.

The work is issued in the cheapest possible form, that its adoption may be very general.

COMMENDATIONS FROM POSTMASTERS.

P. O. Olean, N. Y.—"I consider it indispensable to the correct keeping of the Paper and Box Rent Accounts according to Postal Law; its simplicity and the facility with which these accounts are kept by your system, renders it a benefaction to Postmasters."

P. O. Orono, Me.—"For cheapness, certainty, and simplicity, I think it unsurpassed by any work which I have seen, and is fully adapted to a ready compliance with the requirements of Postal Law and Regulations. I would earnestly recommend it to all Country Postmasters who wish to avoid the perplexity of keeping Newspaper and Box Rent Accounts, and I think if once used, no Postmaster would be without it."

‡ Pamphlets, Magazines, and other printed matter, two cents per four ounces or fraction thereof.
¶ For postage on Newspapers and Periodicals by this route, see Table on inside page. § Pamphlets and Periodicals, 10 cents per 4 ounces or fraction thereof.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

TO THE BRITISH NORTH AMERICAN PROVINCES.

Cape Breton, Prince Edward's Island, and Nova Scotia. To Newfoundland pre-payment required. To Canada and New Brunswick, 10c. per ½ oz., any distance.

*10 cents when not over 3,000 miles from the line of crossing.

Steamers of the Cunard line sail from Boston twice each month, touching at Halifax, and when letters are sent by that conveyance for Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward's Island, the U. S. postage is 5 cents the single rate, to be pre-paid. The inland rate is collected on delivery. On newspapers by this route, the postage is two cents each.

RULES FOR RATING LETTERS, &C.

1. IN THE UNITED STATES AND BRITISH MAILS.—Letters exchanged with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or addressed to British Colonies and foreign countries, for transmission in the open mail via England, are charged with United States and British postage, at a single rate for each half ounce or fraction thereof, the same as domestic letters.

In the case of letters to be forwarded in the British mail for transmission from England "via Marseilles," the French postage is rated at 6 cents the quarter ounce, except on letters for Java, China, Labuan, Borneo, Japan, the Moluccas and Philippine Islands, which are rated at 8 cents per half ounce, and except, also, on letters for Syria and Tunis, by French packet, when the single French rate is 12 cents per quarter ounce.

2. IN THE UNITED STATES AND FRENCH MAILS.—Letters in the mail to France are to be charged with single rate of postage, if not exceeding the weight of one quarter ounce; double rate if exceeding a quarter, but not exceeding half an ounce; and so on, an additional rate being charged for each quarter ounce, or fractional part of a quarter ounce.

The rates by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz.: Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent via Suez, countries beyond seas via France, others than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Java, Mauritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia, (except Belgrade,) Shanghai, Singapore and Spain. The limit of payment to Spain, Portugal and Gibraltar, is Behobia; to Servia (except Belgrade,) Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria," the frontier of Turkey and Austria; to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries via Suez, the seaports of the Indies, or of the sea of China to which the English packets ply; and to places beyond seas, other than those designated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of destination.

3. IN THE MAILS TO PRUSSIA, OR TO BELGIUM.—Letters in the United States and Prussian closed mails, and in the mails exchanged with Belgium, are charged with single rate of postage if not exceeding half an ounce in weight; double rate if exceeding half an ounce, but not exceeding an ounce; quadruple rate if exceeding an ounce, but not exceeding two ounces; and so on, for greater weights, charging two rates for every ounce or fractional part of an ounce over the first ounce. As this scale of progression differs from that followed in respect to domestic letters, great care is required to prevent mistakes.

4. IN THE MAILS TO BREMEN, OR TO HAMBURG, &C.—Letters addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Hamburg; and letters addressed to the British North American Provinces, are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an ounce.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS:—Postmasters, should be careful where the postage is prepaid, to collect the proper amount. They should be particular to notice the route indicated on the envelopes of letters, and to collect postage accordingly. Letters mailed at some offices, marked "via England," or "via Prussian Closed Mail," for a German State, are frequently taken upon the prepayment of Bremen rates, and those marked "via Bremen," at Prussian closed rates, &c.

To prevent mistakes at the exchange offices, it is desirable that the particular routes by which letters are to be forwarded from the United States to Europe, should be distinctly written on the covers. Letters intended for transmission in the open mail to England, should bear the direction, "open mail via England;" if for transmission in the French mail, they should be directed, "via France in the French Mail;" if for transmission by closed mail to Prussia, they should be directed "via Prussian closed mail;" if for transmission in the closed mail to Belgium, they should be directed, "via Belgian closed mail;" and if for transmission by the New York and Bremen line to Bremen, or by the New York and Hamburg line to Hamburg, they should be directed, "via Bremen," or "via Hamburg."

It is important that letters addressed to Germany and other European countries, via France, where the single rate per quarter ounce is 21 cents, should be plainly marked to be sent "via France;" otherwise they may be mis-sent in the open mail to Liverpool, by United States packet, the 21 cent rate per half ounce being also chargeable on letters thus forwarded.

POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

Postal Convention with the United Kingdom.

The General Post Office of the United States of America and the General Post Office of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being desirous of regulating, by means of a new Convention, the communication by post between the two countries, the undersigned, duly authorized for that purpose by their respective governments, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE 1.—There shall be an exchange of correspondence between the United States of America and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, as well for letters, newspapers, book packets, and patterns or samples of merchandise, originating in the United States or in the United Kingdom, as for articles of the same nature originating in or destined for the countries or colonies, the correspondence of which is forwarded through the United States or through the United Kingdom.

ARTICLE 2.—Each office shall make its own arrangements for the despatch of mails to the other office by well-appointed ships, sailing on stated days, and shall at its own cost, remunerate the owners of such ships for the conveyance of the mails.

ARTICLE 3.—The postage on a single International letter shall not exceed twelve cents in the United States, or sixpence in the United Kingdom, and the authorized weight of a single letter shall be fifteen grammes (by the metrical scale) in the United States and half an ounce in the United Kingdom.

For other than single letters the same charge shall be made for every additional fifteen grammes, or half an ounce, or fraction thereof.

ARTICLE 4.—Every International letter insufficiently paid, or wholly unpaid, received in the United States from the United Kingdom shall, in addition to the deficient postage, be subject to a fine of five cents, such fine to be retained by the United States Post Office; and every International letter insufficiently paid, or wholly unpaid, received in the United Kingdom from the United States shall, in addition to the deficient postage, be subject to a fine, the amount of which shall be fixed and retained by the British Post Office.

ARTICLE 5.—International newspapers, book packets, (including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographic sheets of music, and so forth,) and patterns, and samples of merchandise, (including seeds and grain,) shall be transmissible by either office at such charges (not less than three pence in the United Kingdom or six cents in the United States per four ounces on book packets and patterns or samples of merchandise) and under such regulations as the despatching office may from time to time lay down.

Those regulations, however, shall include the following:

1st. The postage shall be fully prepaid.

2d. No book packet may contain anything which is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom, or to whom the packet is sent, shall not be regarded as a letter.

3d. No book packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

4th. Neither office shall be bound to deliver printed papers the importation of which may be prohibited by the laws or regulations of the country to which they are transmitted.

5th. So long as any customs duty is chargeable in the United States on the importations from the United Kingdom of any of the articles enumerated above, such customs duty shall be leviable in the United States, and the proceeds shall accrue to the United States Treasury.

6th. Except as above, no charge whatever shall be levied in the country in which International newspapers, book packets, and patterns or samples of merchandise are delivered.

ARTICLE 6.—The postage collected in the two countries on International letters, newspapers, book packets, and patterns or samples of merchandise, together with the fees for registration, (but exclusive of fines for unpaid or insufficiently paid letters,) shall be equally divided between the two offices.

That portion of the postage of transit letters, transit newspapers, book packets, and patterns or samples of merchandise which represents the charge for sea conveyance between the United Kingdom and the United States shall belong wholly to the despatching office.

For the purpose of this article the charge for the sea conveyance of letters across the Atlantic shall be computed on the basis of four pence, or eight cents, per single letter rate, and the charge for the sea conveyance across the Atlantic of newspapers, book packets, and patterns or samples of merchandise shall be computed at three pence per pound or twelve cents per kilogramme.

ARTICLE 7.—The United States Post Office may deliver to the British Post Office letters or other postal packets, which have been registered, addressed to the United Kingdom. Reciprocally, the British Post Office may deliver to the United States Post Office registered letters or other postal packets which have been registered, addressed to the United States.

The postage of registered letters and so forth shall always be paid in advance.

In addition to this postage, there shall also be charged a registration fee, the amount of which shall be fixed by the despatching office.

ARTICLE 8.—The United States Post Office may further deliver to the British Post Office registered letters and so forth, addressed to those countries or colonies to which registered letters can be sent from the United Kingdom.

The United States Post Office shall account to the British Post Office (in addition to the postage due to the British Post Office) for such sum as shall be chargeable to the inhabitants of the United Kingdom for the registration from the United Kingdom of every registered letter and so forth addressed to the countries or colonies above mentioned. On its side the British Post Office may deliver to the United States Post Office registered letters and so forth addressed to those countries to which registered letters can be sent from the United States.

The British Post Office shall account to the United States Post Office (in addition to the postage due to the United States Post Office) for such sum as shall be chargeable on the inhabitants of the United States for the registration from the United States of every registered letter and so forth, addressed to the countries above mentioned.

ARTICLE 9.—The British Post Office engages to grant the transit through the United Kingdom, as well as the conveyance by British mail packets, of the closed mails which the United States Post Office may exchange, in either direction, with the post offices of the United States Possessions or of foreign countries, and the United States Post Office engages to grant the transit through the United States, as well as the conveyance by United States mail packets, of the closed mails which the British Post Office may exchange, in either direction, with the post offices of British Possessions, or of foreign countries.

The country which sends, or receives closed mails through the other shall render an account of the letters, newspapers, book packets, and patterns contained in such closed mails.

ARTICLE 10.—The rates of postage to be mutually paid for the territorial transit (including the passage of the English channel) of all letters sent from one country to the other for transmission to places beyond, in closed mails, shall be one-half the ordinary inland rates now charged in the two countries respectively, viz: for transit through the United States, one-half of three cents per single letter, and for transit through the United Kingdom one-half of a penny per single letter.

The transit rates of postage to be mutually paid for newspapers, book packets, and patterns or samples of merchandise sent in closed mails, shall be four pence per kilogramme for transit through the United Kingdom, and six cents per pound for transit through the United States.

ARTICLE 11.—When, in any British or United States port, a closed mail is transferred from one ship to another, without any expense devolving on the office of the country owning such port, such transfer shall not be deemed a territorial transit, and shall not give rise to any charge for territorial transit.

ARTICLE 12.—The rates of postage to be paid by the British Post Office to the United States Post Office for the sea conveyance, other than across the Atlantic, of correspondence sent from the United Kingdom to the United States, in closed mails, for transmission to places beyond, or brought to the United States from places beyond, in closed mails, for transmission to the United Kingdom, shall be the same that are paid by the inhabitants of the United States, reciprocally, the rates of postage to be paid by the United States Post Office to the British Post Office for the sea conveyance, other than across the Atlantic, of correspondence sent from the United States to the United Kingdom, in closed mails, for transmission to places beyond, or brought to the United Kingdom from places beyond, in closed mails, for transmission to the United States, shall be the same that are paid by the inhabitants of the United Kingdom.

ARTICLE 13.—The combined territorial and sea rates upon transit correspondence sent in ordinary mails to be accounted for by one office to the other, shall be the same that are paid by the inhabitants of the country through which the correspondence is forwarded.

ARTICLE 14.—The amount of postage chargeable by the United States Post Office, on its own account, upon every single letter sent through the United Kingdom, in ordinary mails, addressed to the United States, shall be three cents, and the amount of postage chargeable by the British Post Office, on its own account, upon every single letter sent through the United States, in ordinary mails, addressed to the United Kingdom, shall be one penny.

ARTICLE 15.—There shall be an exchange of correspondence between the United States of America and Bermuda, and between those States and the British Post Office Agencies, established in the Danish Colony of St. Thomas, in Panama, in Colon, and in San Juan, (Porto Rico.) The postage to be accounted for on such correspondence shall be fixed from time to time by the mutual consent of the two offices.

ARTICLE 16.—The British Post Office shall prepare, at the expiration of every quarter, separate accounts, exhibiting the results of the exchange of correspondence, whether in ordinary mails, or in closed mails, between the respective offices.

Such accounts shall be founded upon the acknowledgments of receipt of the respective offices during the quarter.

The separate accounts shall be incorporated in general accounts, which shall be compared and settled by the two offices, and the balance shall forthwith be paid, in the money of the country to which the payment is to be made, by that office which is found to be indebted to the other.

In converting United States currency into sterling, or sterling into United States currency, four shillings and two pence shall be considered as the equivalent of a dollar.

ARTICLE 17.—Official communications addressed by the United States Post Office to the British Post Office, or by the British Post Office to the United States Post Office, shall not give rise to any account between the two Post Offices.

ARTICLE 18.—The two offices shall by mutual consent, make detailed regulations in accordance with the foregoing articles, such regulations to be terminable on a reasonable notice by either office.

ARTICLE 19.—All the conventions which now regulate the exchange of correspondence between the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the United States of America, shall cease to have effect from the date of the day when the present Convention shall be put into execution.

ARTICLE 20.—Articles 1, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 15, 16, 17, and 18, shall come into operation on the 1st of October next, and the remaining articles on the 1st day of January, 1868.

ARTICLE 21.—This convention shall be terminable at any time on a notice by either office of one year; and article 5, (except so far as relates to newspapers) shall be terminable on a notice of three months.

ANDREW JOHNSON. [L. S.]

By the President:
WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.
WASHINGTON, July 8, 1867.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO,
July, 1867.

Every man has his ruling passion; and although education may modify it, and the duties and necessities of life interfere materially with its free and unrestrained exercise, yet it will crop out somewhere between the cradle and the grave, and in so marked a manner as to carry conviction with it that every other mental and corporeal attribute is its subordinate. In some cases it suffers no restriction, and is used banefully or beneficially proportionate with the taste and influence of its possessor. Where a monomania is harmless in its nature, and elevating, edifying, or amusing in its aim, society reaps a benefit which more than compensates for any transient annoyances it may really or seemingly suffer, although in individual cases some things may be dreadfully unpalatable. Take for instance the quality of inquisitiveness—between man and man no more effective weapon can be used to keep intact the social and business relations of life, and divested of offensiveness no more powerful coadjutor can be employed to promote knowledge and confidence; yet inquisitive people (among whom I rank myself) are most generally very unpopular. They no doubt do a great deal of good to those they vex the most, and many a domestic rent is mended, many a reputation preserved, and much is gained, and much is saved in many ways, by simple questions savoring of impertinence, but prompted by the noblest motives, and the honor and happiness of many a man and many a woman has been taken out of pawn by their unexpected, undesired, but opportune instrumentality.

Inquisitives, as a general rule, have excellent tempers, and politely thank you for an answer, whether it be pleasant or petulant; and a fiery disposition is cooled as suddenly by their sang froid as is the red hot bar of the blacksmith which he plunges in the water vessel by his side. In nineteen out of twenty cases they can judge of an individual's mental calibre by his mode of answering questions, and know exactly when and how to hit and how deep to probe. Of course there are exceptions: railroad ticket agents and conductors, ex-officio, cannot be expected to give civil answers to anybody, nor can poor relations look for such condescension from rich ones. Young ladies in mourning have a perfect right to give indignant answers if a presuming stranger dares to ask how long they have been widowed, and a minister of the gospel is guilty of no infraction of divine or human law if he tells an impertinent fellow who asks him who is the author of his last sermon that it is none of his business. In my opinion inquisitiveness should be tolerated and cultivated; it is a legitimate mode of seeking knowledge, and should not be repressed. The business of the world is made up of questions and answers. What would Republics, Empires, and Kingdoms do if there were no questions to be asked? What would art, and science, and commerce, and manufactures, and labor do, if there were no answers to be given? "The courts of diplomacy and love would begin eout," and the great globe itself would be turned into an uncultivated, deaf and dumb bear garden—and after that, chaos. Enough of these abstractions. I want to convey the idea to your readers (who of course are mostly officials) in plain matter of fact style, that so long as mind and matter exist, so will inquisitiveness; and if they more than others are made to suffer interrogatory inflictions, let them solace themselves with the soothing reflection that they are under government pay, and this will or should dissipate their apparently crushing grievances. Inquisitiveness, to be sure, is not confined to interlocutory limits; it usurps a larger field, and seeks a wider range. Nor is the tongue the only weapon it wields. The eye, the ear, the nose, and the hand are frequently pressed into its service, and perhaps effect more by their silence than the organ of speech with all its musical modulations and persuasive tones—particularly the noiseless observations of the eye. This is the organ which penetrates the veil which is hung up to hide moral and official obliquities, and this is the figurative Captain Scott, to whom all the culpable coons surrender before a shot is fired. O! the eye is a mighty instrument to sway, subdue, encourage, or to crush; and with a knowledge of this fact we should invite its kindliest influences by unhedged and faithful official conduct and demeanor. There are many ways of doing this, which of course must be obvious to every reflecting, sensible mind. Perhaps, with the exception of handsome women, post-office officials have to submit to more ocular inquisitiveness than any other class of people. The reason for this, I presume, is to be found in the fact that they come more in contact with every variety of society than any other kind of mental or physical toilers, being, as they are, the dispensers of that unique species of intelligence, which grieves or gratifies, elevates or depresses, accommodates or disappoints, fires or freezes, the vast mass of humanity. Every other industrial pursuit has its specialty.

That I am inquisitive I have never taken any trouble to conceal; call it a ruling passion, a monomania, or what you please; but it is nevertheless the fact, and it is just as naturel for me to "eaves drop" about a post-office, as it is to wear a broad-brimmed hat, loose coat, and spectacles, and when I see anything out of the way I note it down for my own gratification and yours, when you allow me the privilege.

And just here I would like to ask a question? If a postmaster is engaged in any professional or mercantile pursuit, is it necessary that he should visit his post-office, except to draw his salary, and keeping up a distant acquaintance with his clerks? I don't think it is, or so many would not do it. It's none of my business, however, you know, only I can't avoid, you know, asking questions, you know.

My prying propensities cannot boast of much gratification during the past month. The hot weather plunged red handed into the arena, and I was obliged to keep my obesity in the shade, else would I have "larded the lean earth." However took advantage of a cool "term" to look round a little, but was poorly paid for my trouble.

Primarily the object of my visit to rural-dom was to attend a meeting of the Directors of the Night Blooming Cereus Petroleum Company, at the Asafoetida Wells, in the dominion of Canada; but as there were only six out of the six hundred directors present, we had a brief session after declaring a splendid dividend payable in stock, and passing resolutions declaratory of everything being in healthy condition; but as this has nothing to do with inquisitiveness or post-offices, it may be out of place here. I was going on to say, however, that during the long ride, I had the opportunity of looking into a number of post-office cars, and was filled with wonder to know why the agents or clerks have grown so selfish. Formerly anybody could with a little diplomacy get into one of these receptacles, and make out to find standing room among the numerous friends of the King Bee; but now, Lord bless you, one don't see a soul inside, and the expression of a wish to come in is met with refusal so sharp and emphatic as to almost knock a nervous man overboard. What can it mean? Give me liberty—or give me the why! Gracious! if this kind of exclusiveness were to become epidemic in mail cars and post-offices, what would be the result? What would the leading men of numberless small communities, and some large ones, too, do if they were excluded from the spare chairs, privileged places, and gossipping companionship of post-offices? What would be the result? I would not satisfy if I could my own inquisitiveness, but leave the question open. If however the time ever comes when no one but recognized and authorized officials are to be found in post-offices and postal cars engaged in the transaction of official business, the mail service will have reached the dignity and perfection its importance entitles it to, and will command that high and universal respect, which the indifference and inenergy of many of its subordinates have neutralized to a degree mortifying to contemplate, but not beyond remedy.

Mutilated Currency.

For the benefit and at the request of many subscribers, we republish the Instructions of the Post-office Department and the Rules of the Treasury Department on the subject of the Redemption of Mutilated Treasury notes and Fractional Currency:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Finance Office, Washington, 1865.

SIR:—In accordance with the request of the Treasury Department, the Postmaster-General directs you to receive, in payment for postage stamps and stamped envelopes, United States Notes, of which not more than one-twentieth is missing, and fractional notes, of which not more than one-tenth is missing, if clearly genuine.

You are not required to receive mutilated notes or currency except in the regular course of business, nor currency in amounts exceeding five dollars at one time, especially if it would embarrass you in meeting the orders or drafts of this Department. Neither will you receive them when so much soiled or defaced, that their genuineness cannot be clearly and satisfactorily ascertained. And in whatever amounts received, you should require them to be arranged and marked, as directed under Rules 2 and 3 below.

Those unfit for circulation will be returned to "Treasurer U. S., Washington, D. C.," according to the following rules, established by the Treasury Department, for the redemption of defaced and mutilated notes.

When the value of a package is one hundred dollars, or upwards, it may be sent by the Adams Express, at the cost of the Treasury Department. If sent by mail, it should always be registered.

Each Assistant Treasurer, or Designated Depositary of the United States, or National Bank, designated as a Depositary of the United States, will redeem fractional currency, not mutilated, as shown by the annexed rules. Through such agencies, also, mutilated currency can be transmitted to the Treasury Department. To them, all applications should be made, when practicable.

Postmasters should specially report to this office any accumulation of uncurrent money that is likely to become embarrassing.

Very respectfully,
A. N. ZEVELY,
Third Asst. P. M. General.

Postmaster at——

RULES.

FIRST.—Mutilated notes that have been torn, no matter how much, but of which it is evident that all the fragments are returned—or defaced, no matter how badly, but certainly, satisfactorily genuine—will be redeemed at their full face value on presentation.

SIXTH.—Until further orders, mutilated notes and fragments will be redeemed only at the Treasury of the United States at Washington, whither they can be sent, addressed to the "Treasurer of the United States." A draft on the Assistant Treasurer at New York for the amount allowed will be returned by mail to the address of the person remitting the same.

These rules, promulgated on the 18th of May, 1862, for the redemption of mutilated United States Notes, are not intended to apply to such notes of which the abrasion or loss of substance from the corners or edges does not exceed one-twentieth of their original proportions. Such are not understood to be mutilated notes within those rules. They are regarded as entire notes, and when of the issue known as Demand Notes are receivable for customs duties. —(October 9, 1862.)

1. All fractional currency, not mutilated, when presented for redemption to an Assistant Treasurer, or Designated Depositary of the United States, or a National Bank, designated as a Depositary of the United States, must have been assorted by the holder, according to denominations, with the faces and upper sides in corresponding order in the packages.

2. When presented in sufficient numbers, each package must contain one hundred pieces; it must be securely pinned, with a paper strap at least one inch wide, and on the strap must be written, in ink, the number of pieces, denomination, date of deposit, and the name of the owner.

3. The entire deposit must be securely done up in one package, and upon the wrapper, endorsed with ink, the date of the deposit, the amount contained, and the name and residence of the owner.

4. No less sum than three dollars will be redeemed, and packages will be paid for in lawful money of the United States, in the order, as to time, in which they shall have been received, as soon as the currency can be counted and passed upon.

5. All Government officers will receive for public dues all United States notes of the several kinds, and on account for which they are respectively receivable, as per Treasury Circular of October 9, 1862, in explanation of the rules promulgated May 18, 1862, no matter how badly defaced or torn they may be, so long as their genuineness can be clearly ascertained, and so that it is certain that not one-twentieth part thereof is missing. But all such notes as are unfit for re-issue, so received, should be kept separate and distinct, and as occasion may require, be returned to the Treasury of the United States, to be retired from circulation. Fractional currency, from which not one-tenth part is missing, will be received in the same manner.

A Curiosity of Postal Literature.

A correspondent has favored us with the following curious result of his researches among the State Archives of Vermont, showing how the Green Mountaineers proposed to arrange their postal affairs while they were still "out in the cold," and before resigning to Uncle Sam the charge of such matters:

WINDSOR, VT., July 8th, 1867.

EDITOR OF U. S. MAIL:

Dear Sir:—Having just closed a pleasant six years' connection with the Post-office Department in the capacity of Route Agent, much of which time I have been a reader of THE MAIL, I have contracted an interest in postal affairs that will doubtless last many years. In searching the history of Vermont for other purposes, I have fallen upon her first postal legislation, and probably the very first public postal history connected with the State. The noticeable feature in this law is, it was enacted as a State law by a State that had been organized six years at the time of its enactment, which enactment was seven years prior to the admission of the State into the Union, and reference is made to the "United States" as an outside party. I give the act entire with preamble.

Yours truly,
GEO. P. HAYES.

IN LEGISLATURE AT BENNINGTON, FEB. 1784.

An act for Establishing Post-offices within this State.—Whereas, the business of promulgating the laws, conveying timely notice to the freemen of the estate of all proprietary proceedings, and other matters of importance to the public, can in no other way be effected so extensively, and attended with so small expense as by the appointment of regular posts for the purpose of conveying to the parts of this State,

"Be it enacted, &c., That there be five post-offices established within this State; one in Bennington, one in Rutland, one in Brattleboro, one in Windsor, and one in Newbury, under such regulations as are established for the government of post-offices in the United States.

"That the post-rider from Bennington to Brattleboro be allowed threepence per mile travel, and those on each of the other routes twopence per mile; and that the postmasters be directed to keep a regular account of all profits and emoluments arising out of this measure, and exhibit the same to his Excellency the Governor and the Honourable Council of this State when requested.

"And be it further enacted, That until further order of this Legislature, the postriders of the several offices shall be entitled to an exclusive right of carriage, and enjoy the advantage of the fees arising from the carriage of letters and packets of every kind, and that the rate of postage be the same as in the United States.

"And be it further enacted, That no person presume to ride on either of the routes of such established posts, for the purpose of carrying letters, packets, or other matters, particularly within the province of such established posts to carry, on penalty of paying the sum of £10 to and for the use of any postmaster who shall prosecute the same to effect for every such offence.

"And be it further enacted, That his Excellency the Governor, and such other persons as the Legislature shall in future authorize, shall have authority to frank any letters or packets, for which letters or packets no postage shall be demanded."

"REQUEST" REGISTERED LETTERS, &c.—In reply to several inquiries from subscribers, we have to say that registered letters bearing a request for return to the writers, should be treated in same manner as ordinary request letters, except, of course, that when returned they should be registered.

The Department has always decided that letters which are not delivered to parties addressed, and which do not bear a request for return to the writer, can only be delivered to the writer through the Dead Letter Office. This ruling applies to registered as well as ordinary letters.

NEW YORK, AUGUST, 1867.

TERMS—One Dollar per year, payable in advance. All communications to be addressed to the Publisher of the UNITED STATES MAIL, New York.

Subscriptions received at any Post Office in the United States.

☞ Letters containing remittances for subscriptions or in reference to the business department of this paper, should be addressed to "Publisher U. S. Mail," and not to the Editor.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster-General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL," [see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866,] and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster-General.

Special Notice to Subscribers.

Each wrapper enclosing a copy of the Mail bears a number in addition to the address. This number signifies that the term for which the subscription is paid expires with the corresponding whole number of the paper. Subscribers will please take this as a notification to forward the subscription for another year, when due, if they intend to receive. Those whose this number reaches, marked 83 or any lower number, will please remit at once.

Specimen Numbers.

We send a number of copies of this month's issue of THE MAIL to Postmasters at new offices, and others, as specimens. As each one who receives a copy will of course perceive at once that it is just what he needs, we will only say that a remittance of one Dollar, addressed "Publisher U. S. Mail, New York," will secure its regular receipt for one year.

[OFFICIAL.]

FINANCE OFFICE, July 17th, 1867.

SIR,—Please publish in the "United States Mail" the following:—

Rates of Postage

TO THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC, URUGUAY, AND PARAGUAY, BY THE DIRECT LINES OF AMERICAN AND FRENCH MAIL PACKETS VIA RIO DE JANEIRO (BRAZIL).

We are requested to state that an arrangement has been concluded with the French Post Department for the regular transmission of correspondence between the United States and the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, and Paraguay, by means of the American line of mail packets plying between New York and Rio de Janeiro, and of the French line of mail packets between Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Ayres via Montevideo.

The correspondence conveyed in either direction between the United States and the countries of the La Plata, above named, will be subject to the following rates of postage (United States and French) viz.:

For letters, weighing ½ oz., or under	18c.
" over ½ oz., and not exceeding ½ oz.	25c.
" " ½ oz., " " ¾ oz.	42c.
" " ¾ oz., " " 1 oz.	50c.

and so on for greater weights, adding 7½c. for each additional ½ oz., and 10c. for each additional ½ oz. or fraction thereof.

For Printed Matter (newspapers, pamphlets, and periodicals) weighing 1 oz. or under . . . . . 4c.
" " over 1 oz., and not exceeding 2 oz., 5c.
" " " 2 oz., " " 3 oz., 7c.
" " " 3 oz., " " 4 oz., 8c.
" " " 4 oz., " " 5 oz., 11c.
" " " 5 oz., " " 6 oz., 13c.
" " " 6 oz., " " 7 oz., 14c.
" " " 7 oz., " " 8 oz., 16c.

and so on for greater weights, adding 1 4-10th cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof, and 2c. for each additional weight of 4 oz. or fraction thereof.

The above rates cover the United States and French charges only, to or from port of debarkation or embarkation in countries of the La Plata.

Prepayment is required on both letters and printed matter sent from the United States. New York is the United States office of exchange for the mails transmitted under this arrangement.

Postmasters will levy and collect postage accordingly.

Printed Matter to Oregon, &c.

Section 259, page 63, Post-office Laws of 1866, provides that letter postage shall be charged on all mailable matter conveyed by mail westward beyond the western boundary of Kansas, and eastward beyond the eastern boundary of California—except in the case of single copies of newspapers, magazines and periodicals to regular subscribers, and exchanges. Under this section all transient printed matter was charged at letter rates.

The Postmaster General has decided that the section referred to is not intended to apply to matter for Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana, when sent by steamer to San Francisco, and forwarded from thence by way of Portland, Oregon, or any other routes, except the regular Overland route, but only to matter actually forwarded from the Eastern States or California and Nevada by the regular Overland mail via Salt Lake City or some other point on that route.

Postage to Great Britain and Ireland.

A new postal convention has been concluded between the United States and British governments, by which, ON AND AFTER THE FIRST DAY OF JANUARY, 1868, the postage on letters to and from Great Britain and Ireland will be reduced to Twelve Cents per half ounce or fraction thereof, instead of Twenty-four cents as at present. Newspapers, books, prints, photographs, seeds, grains, patterns and samples of merchandise, and many other articles will also, under the provisions of the treaty, be transported at greatly reduced rates.

So much of the provisions of the convention as relates to international newspapers and printed matter, and transit charges upon correspondence in closed mails, will go into effect on the first of October next.

We notice that some of our exchanges are misleading their readers by erroneous statements that the rates of postage have already been reduced as above. Postmasters, however, will pay no attention to any such assertions, and continue to charge the same rates of postage as heretofore on mail matter to Great Britain and Ireland, viz: Twenty-four cents per half-ounce on letters—prepayment optional; two cents each on newspapers—prepayment compulsory.

The rates of postage to be levied and collected in the United States on and after the first of October next, upon printed matter of all kinds, and patterns or samples of merchandise, posted in the United States and addressed to the United Kingdom, have not yet been fixed by the Postmaster General. When determined, the necessary instructions will be issued to postmasters, with notice to the public.

Post Route Maps.

As promised in our last number, we give below the places (or depositories) at which copies of the official Post Route Map of the New England States will be for sale to the general public, and to persons other than those immediately supplied by the Department:

At NEW YORK—D. Van Nostrand, bookseller, 192 Broadway.

At PORTLAND, Me.—Bailey and Noyes, booksellers, Exchange street.

At PHILADELPHIA—S. Augustus Mitchell, jr., map publisher, 31 South Sixth street.

The price for the above-named map (the two sheets joined) will be Four Dollars; the same, backed with muslin, and edges bound, Five Dollars; if mounted on rollers and varnished, Six Dollars.

We repeat that the present distribution is restricted to the post-offices of the larger cities throughout the country, and to the county seats of the New England States, and of the State of New York. This distribution has been continued during the past month to such postmasters and officers as are considered at the Department to be most immediately benefited thereby in the transaction of their duties, and it is expected that during the present month all will be supplied.

We are requested by the Topographer of the Department to notify postmasters and others that all communications regarding alleged errors on the map in the sites of offices and statement of distances will be thankfully received, and are invited.

Every possible care has been taken to procure accuracy throughout; but inasmuch as the returns of postmasters and others furnishing information have been in some cases incomplete and unprecise, some inaccuracies in the details of a work of this magnitude may have crept in. These will be corrected in future editions. On the subject of these maps, address: "SECOND ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL, WASHINGTON, D. C., marking on corner of the envelope [Topographer P. O. D.]

Shirking

It is by no means an unfrequent occurrence for special agents, in the course of an investigation of the facts concerning the alleged loss of a valuable letter from the mails, to hear the following statement from the loser: "I wanted to register the letter, but the postmaster told me it was of no use—that the letter would go just as safely without being registered." There can be but three motives which could induce a postmaster to make such a remark, and they are—1st, laziness; 2nd, ignorance; 3d, something worse than either. He is either too indolent to take the trouble to make the necessary records, etc., which are required for the proper registration of a letter; or he is inexcusably ignorant of the proper method of doing so (in which case the first and second motives are combined—be being too lazy to enlighten his ignorance by a study of the Regulations); or be has some private reasons for desiring that the letter shall not have the protection afforded by the registry system. None of these reasons are creditable to him, either as a postmaster or as an individual—and the worst of them is sure to be attributed to him by the loser in case the letter fails to reach its destination

The registry system was established for the benefit of every citizen who may choose to avail himself of it; and a postmaster has no right to refuse to register a letter when presented to him for that purpose, nor to dissuade its owner from having it registered—unless a money order for the amount of the remittance can be conveniently procured; and we cannot blame those who have been thus dissuaded, and have heard no more of their letters or money, when they add to the story of their loss (as they almost invariably do)—"No doubt the postmaster had his reasons for not wanting me to have my letter registered." Very likely the insinuation is unjust, but it is exceedingly natural. To be the victim of unfounded suspicion is certainly not pleasant; but neither is it pleasant to be the victim of a loss which might have been avoided by the performance of a simple official act on the part of a postmaster, who, when a letter is presented to him for registration should perform that duty promptly, correctly, and cheerfully, and without volunteering advice which subsequent events may justify those concerned in suspecting to have been not altogether disinterested.

"Samples" Again.

In the June number of THE MAIL, we replied, in an article on the subject, to several correspondents who had inquired as to the proper construction of Section 222, Post-office Laws, which fixes the rate of postage to be charged on "samples and sample-cards." We then stated, on the authority of the Department, that "samples must be confined to samples and sample cards of dry flexible material." Some subscribers appear to have construed this as meaning that any article, provided it be dry and flexible, may be carried in the mails at "sample" rates of postage, which of course is not the case. Dry, flexible samples only can be so sent. A sample, as defined by Webster, is "a specimen; a part of anything presented for inspection, or intended to be shown as evidence of the quality of the whole." An article, therefore, complete in itself, and intended for use—as a coat, a dress, a pair of gloves—although dry and flexible, cannot be considered as a "sample" within the meaning of the law, nor is it so considered by commercial usage.

The correct construction of the words, "samples and sample cards," as used in the sections above referred to, is that they apply to specimens of cloth, drygoods, or other dry flexible material, of no intrinsic value and not intended for use, and the cards to which such specimens are generally attached.

MODIFICATION OF THE REGISTRATION SYSTEM.—Our readers will perceive, by a notice in another column, that a change has been made in one of the regulations for the registration of letters. The postmaster at the mailing office will separate the registered letter bill from the return bill, and send the former in the registered package envelope along with the registered letter or letters which it calls for, and will then send the return bill in an ordinary envelope, directed to the same postmaster to whom the registered package is addressed. The headings of the present registered letter and return bills (which now direct that they shall not be separated at the mailing office) will be changed in accordance with this modification in all printed hereafter.

The Department is also preparing to issue route agents', railway postal clerks', and postmasters' receipts for registered matter, to be used under the provisions contained in the "Special Instructions to Railway Postal Clerks and Route Agents," published in our last number.

☞ POSTMASTERS will be careful not to allow their supply of Registered Package Envelopes to become exhausted, and will not wait until they are all gone before sending a requisition for more to the Third Assistant Postmaster General.

Sundry Post-office Matters.

We are asked "how to stop regular papers coming to an office after the publisher has been notified that they are not taken out." The regulations do not seem to provide for such cases: indeed it would be hardly taken into consideration that a publisher would continue to send papers to a party who did not take them from the office—hence the most that the regulations direct is, that such matter shall be sold, and the proceeds credited to the Department. . . . A friend inquires "If a postmaster can consistently take the oath attached to his quarterly returns, and give credit for his postage, &c." This is rather a question of morals than of Post-office Laws and Regulations, but the Regulations provide (Sec. 154) that, "If postmasters deliver any mail matter, without first collecting the postage thereon, they must immediately charge themselves with the amount, and report it as paid in their quarterly account." By thus charging themselves or giving credit, it seems the Department would be satisfied that the oath was complied with. . . . To another friend we reply that the amount of stamps sold is not allowed as a part of the basis of adjustment of salaries. It was on the amount of stamps cancelled, not sold, that commissions were allowed. . . "Is a postmaster justified in refusing to deliver the mail from the inside of locked boxes?" In an inquiry that comes to us from the South. We cannot see that justification has any bearing on the matter; it is a question of courtesy between the postmaster and the boxholder, unless the latter has given a peremptory order not to deliver his mail matter from the box, in which case such an order should be obeyed. . . . "What can be done to stop the missending of letters to offices of similar name?" If it is a regular practice, report the delinquent postmaster to the Appointment Office, if only occasional, forward the letters to the right office, always stamping or writing missent on them. . . . We are obliged for some hints on the subject of unpaid domestic letters. In the shape presented however they hardly come within the scope of THE MAIL. . . We have several complaints of letters being addressed to the Department, and no replies being received. To these we can only suggest that where a reply is not received in reasonable time, the postmaster should write again, and be sure that he writes to the proper office, according to Section 34, Regulations 1866. . . . The facts stated by the postmaster at F——, La., it is likewise out of our power to explain, but her question respecting a daily mail without increased compensation we can answer by saying that a mere increase in the frequency of mails does not entitle a postmaster to increased compensation. . . . We have many complaints the past month of our paper not being received: as we almost invariably find the names entered on our mailing book, we must disclaim the responsibility for these failures, and throw it upon the surreptitious and forgetful borrowers mentioned in our last.

Unpaid Printed Matter to Foreign Countries.

Large numbers of newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, &c., are constantly accumulating at the New York office, sent there from other offices (especially from first class and other large offices), addressed to Great Britain, Ireland, Australia, South America, and nearly every other foreign country, with the postage unpaid. Of course every postmaster and clerk is aware that such matter cannot be sent forward until the whole postage is prepaid by stamps at the rates to be found in the table of foreign postages; and therefore it must be carelessness alone which causes the difficulty. Most of the matter referred to is transient, and directed to foreign countries, to which the prepayment of postage on letters is optional—being no doubt deposited by persons who mistakenly suppose that postage on printed matter to those places is optional also. Some publishers also appear to be under the impression that their publications can be sent unpaid by stamps to regular subscribers in foreign countries—whereas the Dominion of Canada is the only one to which such matter can be sent at other than transient rates prepaid by stamps. To Canada quarterly postage must be prepaid at the mailing office.

Transient papers, periodicals, &c., deposited without prepayment of postage by stamps are unmailable, and must be treated accordingly.

Registration of Letters.

We give below answers to various inquiries on this subject, which we have received during the past month:

B. K. S., M——, Ill.—The sheets of "Receipts for Registered Letters Delivered," and also those of the "Record of Registered Matter in Transit," are to be retained in the office. No copies of them need be sent to the Department. The registered package envelopes, after being used, are to be kept on file at the office to which they are directed. There is no limit fixed by the regulations as to the time for which they shall be kept, but they should be retained for at least six months from the date of their postmarks.

D. W. G., G—— C——, N. Y.—At every office at which a pouch containing a registered package envelope is opened, the date, postmark, number, and direction of the package envelope must be entered on the "Record of Registered Matter in Transit."

J. W. McC., P——, Mo.—There is no regulation calling for receipts from one postmaster to another for registered package envelopes. The return bills, which are sent back marked "correct" (if the letters entered upon it have arrived) by the postmaster at the delivery office to the postmaster at the mailing office, and the return receipts, which are signed by the persons to whom the letters are delivered (and which are also sent back in same manner) are sufficient receipts between postmasters. The only other receipts are those from route agents and railway post-office clerks to postmasters, and vice versa, and from and to each other.

H. W. E., J——, N. Y.—If you send two mails a day—one by route agent and the other by baggage master—send your registered matter by the mail which goes in charge of the route agent.

R. P. T., St. G——, Del.—It is very important that postmarks on registered package envelopes should be plain and distinct. A postmaster at whose office a registered package arrives direct which should have been sent through a distributing office, or which bears an illegible postmark, should report the delinquency to the Department.

C. W. K., S——, Mo.—The postmaster of an office on the line of a railroad, who delivers a registered package envelope to a route agent, is entitled to a receipt for it, whether the envelope originated at his office or not; but the postmaster at a route office is not entitled to such a receipt when the pouch passes through, and is opened at other offices before reaching the line of the railroad. See third answer above.

J. S. L., C——, S. C.—The first sentence of Sec. 9, Regulations in regard to Registered Letters, gives you plain directions as to your duty in the matter of collecting unpaid registration fees on letters arriving for delivery.

Answers to Correspondents.

Post-Office Directory.—S., B. & Co., P——, R. I.—We cannot tell when the new Post-office Directory will be issued by the Department. J. W. Disturnell, Cooper Institute, New York, issues the best that can now be obtained. It contains the names of new postmasters at principal offices, and other additions to the last official Directory. It is sold at $2 in paper covers, or $2.50 bound. Address Mr. Disturnell, as above.

Five Months' Postage, &c.—J. M. C., St. J——, Mich.—1. As not less than three months' postage is allowed to be collected at quarterly rates, a postmaster who receives from a subscriber (at the beginning of the second month of an official quarter) five months' postage in advance, cannot well enter in his quarterly returns an item which seems to show the receipt of less than three months' quarterly postage. It is therefore best to enter the whole amount in one quarter. The regulation referred to was probably not meant to include such exceptional cases. 2. There is no provision whatever for forwarding circulars after they have reached the office to which they are addressed. 3. Newspapers cannot be forwarded to a subscriber who has removed, except on prepayment of transient rates. If the subscriber will not take the trouble to notify the publisher of his removal, it is pretty good evidence that he is indifferent as to whether he receives the paper or not.

Dress Patterns.—D. J. T., S——, N. Y.—We think the decision referred to must have been made under some misapprehension of the terms of the question asked. As the postage on transient newspapers and flexible patterns is fixed by law at the same rate, we do not see how the change of a newspaper into a flexible pattern, by cutting, can work a change in the rate of postage.

Dime Novels.—C. M. K., S——, Mo.—Dime novels have been decided by the Department to be periodicals, and can be sent at that rate. No other novels are entitled to that privilege.

Forwarding Letters, &c.—J. B. L., T——, O., and T. S., M——, Ind.—1. Foreign letters when forwarded must be charged up the regular domestic rates, if the foreign postage has been prepaid; if not prepaid, then the domestic rates must be added to the foreign postage due on the letter. Domestic mail letters, but not drops, may be forwarded, and request letters may be returned free of postage. Act of June 12, 1866. 2. The postage on drop letters where there is a free delivery is two cents, elsewhere one cent. Sec. 261, Laws 1866. 3. The postage on letters to France can be learned by consulting our foreign postage table.

Papers Published in the County.—W. L. H., C——, N. Y.—A subscriber to receive a county paper free of postage, must be a bona fide resident of the county in which the paper is published. It is not sufficient that he receives his mail matter at a post-office within the county, on the contrary he may receive his county paper free, at a post-office out of the county, provided it is the office at which he usually receives his mail. It must be understood that it is only WEEKLY papers that can be received free of postage, as above. Sec. 156, Reg. 1866.

Newsdealers' Privileges.—R. W. H., C——, Ill.—Secs. 202 and 225, Reg. 1866, embrace the privileges acceded to newsdealers. By the former it will be seen that they can pay the postage on their packages of newspapers and periodicals as received, at the same rates that actual subscribers thereto pay quarterly in advance.

Publishers' Exchanges.—W. C. G., A——, Ga.—Publishers are entitled to receive their exchanges free of postage. Sec. 214, Reg. 1866.

Mail Carrier carrying a written Instrument outside the Mail Pouch.—H. S., ——, ———"Mail carriers, contractors, or stage drivers cannot lawfully carry out of the mail any letter or package, unless the same has been prepaid by a stamped envelope of suitable denomination." Secs. 43 and 48, Reg. 1866. See also note c, page 56, Laws 1866.

Post Bill, &c.—A. D. C., Fort W——, C. N.—1. The unpaid post bills are for unpaid letters from foreign countries, insufficiently prepaid domestic letters, prepaid one full rate, and such forwarded letters as are chargeable with postage, &c., &c. 2. You cannot be relieved of the responsibilities attached to your office, except by your removal by the Department, or the acceptance of your resignation. Should you remove to another town, your sureties would be liable for all loss or damage sustained thereby.

Franking Privilege.—W. E. S., O——, Iowa, W. H. H., L——, O., and Others.—1. Deputy collectors can frank only official matter to their collectors, and segars are not official in the orthodox sense. 2. Mail contractors have no right to frank to their subcontractors or vice versa, and if they refuse to prepay postage the matter should be sent to the Dead Letter Office. 3. A postmaster may send free of postage to another postmaster a request that he will forward mail matter. 4. Private citizens can send letters free when addressed to the Treasurer of the United States on official business.

Mode of Indicating Prepayment of Foreign Postage W. M. E. L., Ind.—As a post mark in red ink invariably indicates that the foreign postage is prepaid, we think you must have made a mistake, but cannot decide unless we should see the envelope in question.

Postage on Daily Papers commencing the Last Month of a Quarter.—J. S. R., S——, Pa.—Collect the postage for a quarter at the commencement, and enter it in the quarterly account for that quarter

UNITED STATES MAIL.

Increased Salary of Clerks and Route Agents.—F. D. W., C——, Pa.—You aboold address the Second Assistant Postmaster General in reference to your increased compensation.

Change of Name of Post-office.—R. A. B., E—— M——, Md. Neither a new appointment nor commission is necessary on changing the name of a post-office. The only change required is that of the bond, Sec 33, Reg 1866

Franking Privilege, &c.—W. H. B., Esq. H——, N. Y.—1. See preceding answer. 2. A postmaster cannot transfer the charge of his office to another, thus creating a sinecure, but his duties must be performed personally, or by sworn assistants to aid him when necessary. Secs. 10 and 11, Reg. 1866.

Delivering Papers Published in the Same Town.—C. A., B—— G——, Ky.—It is no part of a postmaster's duty to deliver through his office papers published in the same town, but he may do so if he please, provided that it does not interfere with his official duties. He cannot however charge postage.

Retaining Quarterly Accounts.—A. S. S., No. U——, Mass.—The original quarterly accounts kept in an office should be retained two years or more, and then sold, and the proceeds passed to the credit of the Department.

Distributing Papers that are Received in Packages.—J. E. S., E——, P.—We reply to this question by transcribing the section of the regulation, with the remark that it is clear and not open to misconception. "It is the duty of a postmaster to receive and deliver to subscribers newspapers, magazines, and periodicals which come in the mail, and to put the address on such publications sent to clubs, or to deliver them from a list of subscribers, provided such list is furnished, and the postage on the whole paid for one quarter in advance." Sec. 211, Reg. 1866.

Selling Books with Refuse Papers.—F. W. Van V., B——, N. Y.—Books when refused, or unclaimed from five to eight weeks, must not be sold, but must be returned to the Dead Letter Office, with the regular weekly or monthly return. Sec. 390, Reg. 1866.

Closing Mails, &c.—G. A. D., E——, N. Y.—1. Mails at other than distributing offices are to be closed at not more than half an hour before the hours of departure, unless the departure be between nine o'clock p.m. and five a.m., in which case the mail is to be closed at nine p.m. Sec. 76, Reg. 1866. 2. Whenever it is proper to send ordinary letters to a D. P. O., all other mail matter should likewise be sent to the same D. P. O. 3. "Every postmaster will mail direct to the place addressed all [ordinary] letters for his own State or Territory, and all letters for other States or Territories, which should not pass through a distributing office on their proper route to the office of delivery." Sec. 93, Reg. 1866. But registered letters, whether intended to go within the State or not, must be sent to the first distributing office on the route, except when sent under brass lock between first class offices.

Prussian Closed Mail.—D. E., P——, Pa.—By the Prussian closed mail is meant a mail, the bags of which are not opened till they reach the frontier of Prussia. One of its advantages is that the matter is less frequently handled. The rates of postage differ from rates by other routes, because they are the rates established by treaty between the United States and Prussia.

Dead Letter Bills, &c.—A. E. P., C——, N. Y.—If you have sent no dead letters to the Dead Letter Office during the quarter, it would be useless to send a bill with your account current, as such bill would have to be blank. Secs. 312, 319, Reg. 1866. 2. Misdirected stamped envelopes can be sent to the Department at any time during the quarter. Sec. 189, Reg. 1866.

Account of Unpaid Foreign Letters, &c.—B. C. F., B——, Ga.—1. You do not keep a separate account of unpaid foreign letters. 2. You need not send your post bills with your quarterly returns. Secs. 304 and 309, Reg. 1866. 3. The Department furnishes blanks for statement of box rents, but not blanks for keeping the account with boxholders.

Receiving Coppers for Postage.—S. C., I—— C——, Iowa.—The one cent coin is a legal tender to the amount of ten cents, and you will be obliged to receive them in such sums. If they accumulate on your hands, you will have to remedy the difficulty by disposing of them in making change, &c.

Newspaper Postage paid for More than One Quarter.—If postage on newspapers at regular quarterly rates is tendered you for one year, you must receive it, and account for it qunrterly. Sec. 154 and 811, Reg. 1866.

Postage on Linen and Cotton Goods.—W. D. H., T——, N. Y.—The postage on linen and cotton goods is the same as that on woolen goods. Read carefully Secs. 215 and 245, Laws of 1866.

Postage on Semi-Monthly Papers, &c.—W. W., N——, N. Y.—1. To ascertain why the quarterly rate of postage on semi-monthly papers is more than on weekly, we must refer you to the framers of the law which fixes the rates. 2. Valuable letters can be registered and sent free to government officers having the franking privilege. 3. A postmaster of a town not having a free delivery may deliver through his office newspapers published in the same town, but cannot charge postage on them.

Postmaster working on Roads.—G. T., P——, Ark.—Postmasters and their assistants must be governed by State Laws in respect to working on roads. Sections 39 and 40, Laws of 1866, exempt them from militia and jury duty, and no other.

Enclosures in Newspapers.—A. M. G., L——, Mo.—Publishers may enclose in their publications sent to regular subscribers the bills for subscription, but any other enclosure subjects the whole to letter postage. Sec. 209, Reg. 1866. This, however, does not apply to a regular supplement, as described in Sec. 226, Reg. 1866.

Letter Boxes.—F. G., T—— C——, Mich.—It is not allowable for citizens to erect letter boxes in a post-office at their own expense with a view to avoid the payment of box rents. The law expressly says "no box shall be assigned to the use of any person until the rent therefor has been paid for at least one quarter." Sec. 240, Laws 1866.

Unpaid Postage, &c.—W. D. B., ——, Ark.—1. Domestic letters or packages upon which one full rate of postage has not been prepaid, must be designated as held for postage, and sent to the Dead Letter Office. 2. No mails should be sent, either by steamboat or other conveyance, except in charge of a sworn agent, messenger, carrier, or contractor.

Mutilated Currency.—J. J. L., K——, Ind.—1. You cannot send mutilated currency to the Department, and get silver coin for it. It is redeemed at the Treasury Department in sums of not less than three dollars, by draft or by Treasury notes according to amount. 2. Postal or fractional currency, whether mutilated or not, must be received for stamps, if offered in legal amount, except fractional notes from which one-tenth part or more is missing. See article on "Mutilated Currency" in this number.

Every Postmaster will be careful never to send a registered letter "direct," when there is a Distributing Post Office between his office and the office to which the letter is directed. He must enclose it in a "Registered Package Envelope," directed to the Postmaster at the first Distributing Post Office on the route, and also send the Registered Letter Bill and Return Bill in a common envelope to the same Postmaster by same mail—just the same as if the letter were for delivery at the Distributing Post Office.

Postmasters at first-class offices will, of course, note the exception to this rule in their case. Fourth paragraph of General Instructions in regard to registering letters.

Post Office Blanks.

District No. 2—Supplies blanks for the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, California and Oregon, and Washington Territory. Postmasters in either of these States or Territories, wanting blanks of any kind, should address "Blank Agent, New York, N. Y."

District No. 3—Supplies blanks for the States of Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee, Texas, New Mexico, Utah, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Arizona, Nevada, Colorado, Montana, Idaho and Kansas. Postmasters in either of these States or Territories, wanting blanks of any kind, should address "Blank Agent, Buffalo, N. Y."

When the postages collected at an office amount to $100 a year, the name of the postmaster and of his office will be printed on the post bills. When the postmaster's compensation exceeds $12 50 a quarter, the postmaster is entitled to wrapping paper and twine, at the above agencies.

Applications for blank registers of arrival and departure of the mails must be made direct to the "Contract Office, Inspection Division, P. O. Dept." For special instructions, to the First Assistant Postmaster General.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

Instructions

FOR CARRYING INTO EFFECT THE PROVISIONS OF THE POSTAL CONVENTION LATELY CONCLUDED BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, August 20, 1867.

Whereas article 5 of the new Postal Convention, concluded between the United States of America and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, on the 8th day of July, A. D., 1867, provides that "international newspapers, book-packets, (including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, and so forth,) and patterns and samples of merchandise, (including seeds and grain,) shall be transmissible by either office at such charges, (not less than three pence in the United Kingdom or six cents in the United States per four ounces on book packets and patterns or samples of merchandise,) and under such regulations as the despatching office may from time to time lay down;" and whereas the provisions of the said article are to be carried into effect in each country on the 1st of October, A. D. 1867:

It is hereby ordered that the rates of postage to be levied and collected in the United States on and after the 1st of October, 1867, upon the international newspapers, printed matter, and other postal packets enumerated in the said article, posted in the United States and addressed the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, shall be as follows, viz.:

Newspapers and unsealed circulars, two cents each.

Pamphlets and periodicals, when not exceeding two ounces in weight, two cents each.

Pamplets and periodicals over two ounces in weight, and other printed matter, except books, including printed papers of all kinds, maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, and so forth, four cents per four ounces or fraction of four ounces.

Books, six cents per four ounces or fraction of four ounces.

Patterns and samples of merchandise, eight cents per four ounces or fraction of four ounces.

And it is further ordered that the regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States, with respect to the printed papere of all kinds and other postal packets enumerated in the said article, shall be the following, viz:

1. The postage charges herein established must in all cases be fully prepaid at the office of mailing in the United Stotes, by means of United States postage stamps affixed outeide the packet or its cover. If not so prepaid the packet cannot be forwarded.

2. Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books, or other printed papers, including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c., must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the enclosures being removed fer examination.

3. No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, (other than book packets,) may contoin any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks, or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contoin a letter or any communication in writing, or other enclosure.

4. No book packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries, merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent, shall not be regarded as a letter.

5. No book packet must exceed two feet in length or one foot in width or depth.

6. Any book packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter or communicotion in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of Postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an intriugement of the above conditions, to open and examine book packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets posted at, or passing through, their othces.

7. Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

8. No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight.

9. Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the address of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

10. There must be no inclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars which are allowed to be furnished under the preceding regulation must in all cases he given, not on loose pieces of paper, hut on small labels attached to the patterns, or samples, or the bags containing them.

11. Patterns or samples must he sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, &c., which cannot he sent in open covers, may he enclosed in bags of linen, or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

12. Patterns, samples, or other packets containing liquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail bags, or the person of any officer of the post-office, are positively excluded from the mails.

13. The law and regulation of this department which excludes obscene hooks, pamphicts, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar and indecent character from the mails of the United States are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character addressed to the United Kingdom or other foreign country.

14. Letters, newspapers, pamphlets, periodicals, or hooks, posted in the United States and addressed to the United Kingdom may he registered at the office of mailing upon paymont of a registration fee of eight cents in addition to the ordinary postage charges, both of which must he prepaid. But the reduced registration fee of eight cents on letters will not take effect until the 1st of January, 1868.

15. Newspapers or other kinds of printed matter, book packets, patterns, and samples of merchandise originating in the United Kingdom and addressed to the United States will be received in the United States fully prepaid, and must he delivered free of charge to the party addressed at the office of destination in the United States.

Article 5 of the aforesaid convention also prescribes the following specific regulations to be observed and enforced in each country, viz:

"Neither office shall be bound to deliver printed papers, the importation of which may be prohibited by the laws or regulation of the country to which they are transmitted.

"So long as any customs duty is chargeable in the United States on the importation from the United Kingdom of any of the articles enumerated above, such customs duty shall be leviable in the United States, and the proceeds shall accrue to the United States Treasury.

"Except as above, no charges whatever shall be levied in the country in which international newspapers, book packets, and patterns or samples of merchandise are delivered."

Postmasters are instructed to levy and collect in advance, on and after the first of October, 1867, the rates of postage as fixed by this order on the different kinds of printed matter and other postal packets herein enumerated, observing strictly the regulations herein established with respect to each classification of the same.

So much of the new convention as relates to international letters exchanged with the United Kingdom will not take effect until the 1st of January, 1868; and in the mean time the postage charge on letters will continue, as at present, at 24 cents for a single rate of half an ounce or under. But on and after the 1st of January, 1868, the single rate of postage on international letters will be reduced to 12 cents.

The offices of exchange on the side of the United States are New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Portland, Detroit, Chicago, and San Francisco.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

COMMUNICATIONS.

P. O. INNUBIUS, Aug., 1867.

Editor U. S. Mail:—It was my purpose last month, to make a "few remarks" on the subject of the letter of your correspondent B., published in the July number of THE MAIL. But hardly had I taken my pen in pursuance of this purpose, before I was interrupted by a lengthy and stupendous complaint upon a frivolous matter. It seems that my delivery clerk had delivered a letter to the father of a young lady, still in her incipient "teens," contrary to her express orders. I will not attempt even a synopsis of my lengthy interview with the fair complainant, nor tell of the appeals to law, and sense, and justice and kindness that were pressed into service on either side. Once, indeed, a promise was almost extorted from me

("For with the laundation of the eyes,
What flinty heart to water will not wear?")

that I would allow her letters to be delivered to none but herself, and I meutally exclaimed,

"When a woman will, she will, depend on't;
And when she wont, she wont, and that's an end on't;"

but a second reference to your article on delivering letters to minors determined me to adhere strictly to rules, and rather brave a storm for doing my duty than encounter one for neglect.

So much of my time was taken up with this interview, that on its conclusion, I could not fulfil my purpose of writing to you, and since that time "one thing or another" has always been in the way. Now, however, I see nothing in the way of a long letter; indeed, the indications are that it will be too long; for what with this already lengthy introduction, the ample time and leisure before me, and a very self satisfied and garrulous state of mind, my pen may prove the pen of a "rendy writer."

I started to make a few remarks on brother B's letter, for it has led me to look into the philosophy of some of the postal laws and regulations, and the unauthorized practices of postmasters. I cannot forbear thinking B. rather sensitive; for when we consider that letters are daily received at the Dead Letter Office, tersely marked "cannot be found," "held for postage," "refused," &c., &c., it seems to me there is nothing "lordly," or "overhenring" in marking a letter "Returned for better direction," in the same terse, unmistakable way. But let us look at the philosophy of returning a letter for better direction, and the authority therefor. I consider this philosophy sound; for, in the first place, such a letter should not have been mailed at all, unless to the Dead Letter Office: hence it is very proper that it should be sent back to the delinquent postmaster, who has authority to dispose of it, instend of kept flying over the country, finding no office of delivery, and no one with authority to arrest its course. Again, in a large majority of post-offices, the writer of such a letter would be known to the postmaster, and if not known, the letter would be sent to the Dead Letter Office, and returned to the writer through that channel much quicker and surer than it would reach either party interested in it, if it were kept going to find a destination by means of that unphilosopical and unauthorized "Try," which we sometimes see on letters. This leads me to speak of that bad practice of writing on a letter "Try so-and-so," for which there is no authority, even by implication. Every letter should be forwarded to some specific destination, and that destination is either the place named in the letter, (or intended to be named,) the Dead Letter Office, or returned to the writer; there should be no "Try" about it, and in my humble opinion, it should be a rule that the first post official, who perceives that the direction on a letter is not sufficiently accurate to insure its reaching its place of destination, should return it to the mailing office, to he either "better directed" or sent to the Dead Letter Office as "unmailable," if the writer is unknown.

A few words on the authority for "Returning for better direction." While there is no express authority for this practice, I conceive that it is implied; for clearly, a letter so directed that the place cannot he found, is "unmailable," hence the mailing it was an improper act on the part of the mailing postmester, and therefore the returning the letter is but proper, that he may correct his own errors.

In conclusion, I hope that the practice I commend may receive the sanction of the Department, and become a rule, and the one I condemn be abandoned at once. Many letters that now are "kliing" over the country, searching for a resting place, would speedily find it, while in future, many others would be prevented undertaking a bootless, limitless journey, to the regret of the correspondents, and the annoyance of those handling mail matter in transit. You and your readers will of course see that my remarks apply to letters on which the place of destination is at fault, and not the name of the person.

NICOTINUS.

Prepayment by Stamps.

Ed. U. S. Mail:—No branch of the public service has, within the last five years, made more rapid strides towards perfection than the postal service in the United States. Postmasters, who have served even less than that time, must be witness, that almost a total change, and all for the better, has been inaugurated, and that the improvement is still going on.

There is one principle which underlies the whole structure, and the nearer we approach it, the more perfect will the system he. This principle is "Prepayment by Stamps." The postage of a large number of letters sent without stamps in former years, was lost to the revenue. This is remedied by a strict adherence to the law, requiring the prepayment of domestic letters in all cases. Accounts have been simplified by requiring registered letter fees to be prepaid by stamps, instead of money, as heretofore—a move in the right direction. What is required next, is the extension of the system to the regular newspaper business of the country. Large amounts of money are annually lost to the national treasury by printed matter passing through the mail without being paid for; and still larger amounts for printed matter paid for, but not properly accounted for by the postmasters of the country

If a postmaster is not sharper than mortals generally are, he will lose many a dollar during the year for newspaper postage which should have been collected, but which, nevertheless, has escaped his observation; if he is careless or negligent he will forget to charge himself for postage actually received by him; if he is dishonest, he will strike from the newspaper account a round sum, and fix his accounts to suit the remaining sum, and no detection is likely to follow. The deed becomes a practice, handed down to the successors in office, as one of the emoluments of the office, not exactly legal, but allowed by custom.

"Lead us not into temptation," is now as necessary a prayer as it was 1800 years ago. It is the duty of all employers not to lead their employeee into temptation, but to make virtue and honesty easy—else part of the blame, if the employee fails, must he borne by the employer.

To remedy the evil spoken of, to remove the temptation spoken of, a further extension of the "Prepayment by Stamp" rule, seems to me necessary. Let the rule he predominant, that all and everything, passing through the mail, must be prepaid by stamps. Let the rate of newspaper postage be established by weight, and not by numbers; reduce it to as low a standard as may he thought proper and just; have newspaper stamps, and stamped newspaper wrappers, of such denominations that all different demands may ho supplied.

Such a change would leave the postmaster nothing to account for but stamps received from the Department. Neither carelessness nor dishonesty would deprive the Department of its revenue, and temptation would almost wholly he removed.

Postage collected on unpaid foreign letters, box rent, and stamps, would form the only items of account. Foreign letters are billed to the postmaster—a supervision therein is practicable; a mis-statement of box rent is improbable, as there is no inducement for it, as the P. M. salary is in part based on box rent, (although the present system of box rent is not beyond improvement;) the stamp account, finally, is so thoroughly under the control of the Department, that no loss can ever originate therein.

It is probable that publishers of newspapers would at first oppose such a change; but the working of the system would soon convince them that their patrons would rather pay them the enhanced price for their papers, and then receive them free through the mail, than to continue the present plan, and be called upon every three months for paper postage, which, in many instances is paid only with grumbling and bad feeling.

The convenience of the postmaster would be very much enhanced by the change. He knows that all papers, like letters, not legally franked, must bear stamps. Regular papers, the newspaper stamp; transient papers the customary stamp. A package not stamped is not forwarded, and an unstamped package received, charged to the receiver.

It is true, that under present regulations, the basis of salary would partly he removed; but that could easily be remedied by an order, that at the biennial count of stamps cancelled, the newspaper stamps should be counted by the receiving office, to form, as they do now, the basis of salary.

An exchange of views on tha snbject is solicited. H. W.

Cruel Treatment.

Editor U. S. Mail.—Will you allow a very humble, but very useful, fellow member of the Post-office Department a little space in your paper to complain of bad treatment personally, and of careless performance of duty on the part of some of those who have the dissecting of my "in'nrds." Although it is expressly forbidden that I should be thrown on the ground, see Sec. 80, Regulations 1866, yet I am flung from cars and wagons, trampled on, unmercifully dragged about, and subjected to treatment generally that would not be accorded to an old battered dry goods box. But even this I could endure, were it not that my feelings are so deeply wounded by the carelessness of which I have spoken. To see my contents emptied upon the table of a route agent or a postmaster, and then the proper party, with the aid of a half dozen volunteer, unsworn and ignorant assistants, fail to and separate and fling, helter skelter, the sacred missives which I was commissioned to hear thus far on their way, does wound my feelings and excite my anger. One particular instance that happened last week, will suffice as an example. I was flung into the mail car on —— railroad, the route agent was in attendance, and so was his crony, or one of them whom he intended to smuggle through. At last it came my turn to he handled, whereupon, my contents were emptied on the table, By this time, however, the "crony" had become tired of his position as volunteer Assistant Route Agent, and, after being the author of several missents, had resigned to accept the position of gentleman and taken a seat and a cigar. The route agent divided his attention between my contents and the jokes of his smoking friend. I cannot express to you my feelings on seeing him several times throw pieces into the wrong box; once, indeed, when he sent a piece over a hundred miles in a contrary direction, simply because he did not look at the state as well as town on the wrapper, I felt very much as if I would like to kick, if I had the wherewith, though I suppose if I had had, that wherewith would have been of no more use for kicking, than my capacious mouth is for scolding. Mr. Editor, I have made my complaint so long that I will close with the observation that I consider myself the best abused member of the Post-office Department, while I would like to be the best used, and used to the best advantage of society. To reflect on what I might be is very pleasant, to reflect on what I am is very sad.

MAIL POUCH.

A HINDOO LETTER.—In external appearance and construction of appearance, a Hindoo letter is worthy of notice. It is written on a palm-leaf, with an iron stile, four to six inches long, and sharp pointed at the end. In writing, neither chair nor table is needed, the leaf being supported on the middle finger of the left hand and kept steady with the thumb and forefinger. The right hand does not, as with us, move along the surface, but after finishing a few words, the writer fixes the point of the iron in the last letter, and pushes the leaf from right to left, so that he may finish his line. This becomes so easy by long practice, that one often sees a Hindoo writing as he walks the street. As this species of penmanship is but a kind of faint engraving, the strokes of which are indistinct, they make the character legible by besmearing the leaf with an ink like fluid. A letter is generally finished on a single leaf, which is then enveloped in a second, whereon is written the address. In communicating the decease of a relative, the custom is to singe the point of the leaf upon which the afflicting news is written. When a superior writes to an inferior, he puts his own name before that of the person to whom he writes, and the reverse when he writes to a superior.—N. C. Presbyterian.

STAMPING LETTERS.—A South Carolina papers says: An old negro woman, on Tuesday last, gave a letter to the mail agent on the Carolina train, at a station near Branchville, and asked him to send it for her. The agent said the letter must be stamped. The old woman became indignant, and said the darkies were free, and "Whar de use of freein' de culled pussons, ef you don't free de letters, too," and finally yelled ont, "How many stamps he want, eh?" The mail agent said "three!" Down went the letter and down went the old woman's heel. "Dar! Dar! Dar! Dar's three stamps;" and the bystanders were amused accordingly. The agent saw the joke, volunteered to pay the money stamp, and thus doubly stamped the letter was sent to its destination.

SEAL SECURELY.—Registered Package Envelopes, before being mailed, should he always securely sealed. As the flaps and tongues are covered with a considerable quantity of mucilage, to moisten it with the tongue is both inconvenient and disagreeable. A cup or box of gum water, to be applied with a brush to the flap and both sides of the tongue of a Registered Package Envelope will be found of great advantage both as to security and cleanliness.

Sundry Post Office Matters.

We have received a complaint respecting the carelessness of postmasters and others, in not regarding the difference between F and T. In other words, there are two post offices, the names of which differ only in the first letters. In his complaint, our correspondent does not spare the Department, for he says, "we have P. O. officials from Head Quarters, saying they have received no Monthly Mail-Register Returns sent to us, whereas this office being a way office has no such returns to make." We take the liberty of suggesting to postmasters, that in such cases the difference between Tweedledee and Tweedledum is of considerable importance. The same correspondent asks if it is necessary to address wrappers with the name of the county. Section 94, Regulations 1866, make it the duty of postmasters to direct packages mailed direct, with the name of the office, county and State. . . . Another correspondent sends us some suggestions on legibly addressing letters, and he, too, complains of the Department, as well as of postmasters, giving as instances the addresses on letters returned from the Dead Letter Office, which he says are often very difficult to read. . . . A postmaster sent to a publisher the usual notice that a paper was refused and not taken from the office, and requested him to discontinue sending it. The publisher replied that "he would not discontinue until arrearages were paid." The postmaster wants to know what to do. We do not think the law makes any provision for such cases, as it would seem that no man would send papers to a party who refused to receive them. Our advice is to sell the papers at the end of the quarter, they will be worth more than a quarter's postage. . . . To a complaint that sample copies, prospectuses, etc., are allowed to go through the mails without prepayment, and that on postage being demanded of the parties addressed, "postmasters, as well as publishers, are the object of bitter oaths," we can only reply, that there is a great deal of ingenuity displayed in evading the postal laws, so much that it is impossible to detect every attempt, while as for the "oaths"—they are an unavoidable part of a postmaster's "emoluments." . . . . We have a complaint that some postmasters charge postage on circulars at circular rates, viz: two cents for three circulars, while others charge at transient rates, viz: two cents for four ounces. We would refer postmasters to Sec. 250, Laws of 1866, where the directions are specific. that "three circulars shall pass at the single rate of two cents, and in that proportion for a greater number, directed to one address." . . . . . Several inquirers respecting salaries we must refer to the Laws of 1866, Sections 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and Act of June 12, 1866, Sec. 8. This Act was published in the MAIL for July, 1866. . . . . We have our usual complaints of our paper not being received. Until the race of borrowers is extinct, our subscribers must expect the annoyance of occasionally missing a paper. As a hint, however, to these borrowers, how they may honestly obtain the MAIL, we quote the language of a complainant, desiring only that they will avail themselves of his generous offer, and not holding ourselves responsible for his inelegance!—"Would willingly pay subscription for the case that takes my paper and forgets to return it, if he will furnish me with his name and address." Borrowers can learn his name by addressing Publisher U. S. Mail, N. Y.

A PATENT SAFETY PILLAR LETTER-BOX.—Messrs. Dennis & Co., of 57 Aldermanbury, London, have enbmitted to the post-office authorities for inspection, with a view to its adoption, a patent safety pillar letter-box, which will defy the attempts of thieves to abstract letters from it, and also prevent thefts by dishonest postmen. The invention has a large globe lamp on the top, which will not only mark the place where the letter-box stands, but will throw a strong light upon any one attempting to tamper with it. The shoot is guarded top and bottom by spiked protectors. When the flapper of the letter-box is opened far enough to admit the smallest letter, the operation closes the lower guard to receive the letter, and as soon as the flapper is released the lower guard falls down, drops the letter into a bag placed there to receive it, and regains its former position, and cannot be opened except by the flapper. This prevents the abstraction of letters. The man who collects the letters opens an outer door in the pillar, but before he can unlock the inner door where the letters are, he must pull out a rod. The result of that operation is to close the bag inside and fasten it with a spring lock, which can only be opened at the General Post Office. The man can then unlock the inner door and take the bag ont, which he must replace with another, and then lock the door. But should the man desire to steal and not hang the bag up, or not put the bag in at all, detection is certain. If the bag be not properly hung the inner door will shut and lock, but the outer one will not. The inner door having been locked without the bag having been put into its place, it cannot be unlocked, and can only be put in order by sending to the General Post-office for a key to open another compartment to rectify the irregularity.

AND

Post Office Assistant.

Established 1860. . . By J. HOLBROOK.
J. GAYLER, ... Editor.

NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER, 1867.

TERMS.—One Dollar per year, payable in advance. All communications to be addressed to the Publisher of the UNITED STATES MAIL, New York.

Subscriptions received at any Post Office in the United States.

☞ Letters containing remittances for subscriptions or in reference to the business department of this paper, should be addressed to "Publisher U. S. Mail," and not to the Editor.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster-General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL," [see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866,] and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster-General.

Special Notice to Subscribers.

Each wrapper enclosing a copy of the Mail bears a number in addition to the address. This number signifies that the term for which the subscription is paid expires with the corresponding whole number of the paper. Subscribers will please take this as a notification to forward the subscription for another year, when due, if they intend to renew. Those whom this number reaches, marked 84 or any lower number, will please remit at once.

[OFFICIAL.]

Marking and Rating Stamps.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, Aug. 2d, 1867.

Ordered: That Post-offices, the gross receipts of which amount to $50, and do not exceed $500, per annum, shall be furnished with circular marking stamps of class No. 3, and rating stamps of wood, upon application to the Appointment Office, by the Postmasters thereof.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

The following Circular has been issued to Postmasters at Distributing Post-offices:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
FINANCE OFFICE,
June 19, 1866.

SIR:—To facilitate the tracing of missing packages of stamps and stamped envelopes by Special Agents, you are requested to use Circular No. 16, furnished by the Department.

Upon the failure of a Postmaster to acknowledge, by due course of mail, the receipt of a package, or when notified of its non-receipt, you will, without delay, despatch a Circular, and upon its return to your office communicate the result to the Special Agent, as required by Section 184; Regulations of 1866, and transmit a copy of such Circular to this Office,

Respectfully Yours,
A. N. ZEVELY,
Third Asst. P. M. General.

Mutilated Currency.

In our last number we published the instructions issued in 1865 to Postmasters in regard to the redemption of mutilated currency. The following circular to Postmasters, which modifies those instructions to some extent, has since been issued by the Department:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Finance Office.

SIR:—In accordance with the rules of the Treasury Department, the Postmaster-General directs you to receive, in payment for postage stamps and stamped envelopes, United States Notes, of which not more than one-twentieth is missing, and fractional notes, of which not more than one-tenth is missing, if clearly genuine.

You are not required to receive mutilated notes, (by the term mutilated is meant notes not worth their full face value under the subjoined rules,) which notes are redeemable by the Treasurer of the United States, and by no other officer. Nor will you receive notes so much soiled or defaced that their genuineness cannot be clearly and satisfactorily ascertained. Notes received by you that are unfit for circulation should be returned to the "Treasurer of the U. S., Washington, D. C." for redemption. When remitted the notes should be assorted, strapped and labelled, as described in the rules subjoined, and remittances by mail should always be "registered." When the value of a package is one hundred dollars or upward, Postmasters have the privilege to forward the same by the Adams Express, and their connections, at the cost of the Treasury Department.

Each Assistant Treasurer or Designated Depositary of the United States, or National Bank designated as a Depository of the United States, will redeem fractional currency, not mutilated as shown by the annexed rules.

Through such agencies, also, mutilated currency can be transmitted to the Treasury Department. To them all applications should be made, when practicable.

The best method to prepare money for transportation to the Treasury is to make, of all the assorted notes, one compact package, sealed or neatly tied together, and then to place such a package, with an open and separate letter of advice, in another envelope or wrapper, which is to be sealed and addressed to the "Treasurer of the U. S., Washington, D. C." It is essential that a letter accompany each remittance of currency sent to the Treasury for redemption. Such letter should contain, in plain characters, the name of the owner or person to whom return for the money is to be made, the name of the post-office, county, and State, and the amount of the whole remittance. Letters of advice should be written upon paper not less than a half sheet of commercial note, that they may be filed. All parcels and packages of currency received at the Treasury without a letter of advice will be retained until such letter shall come to hand.

Very respectfully,
A. N. ZEVELY,
Third Asst. P. M. General.

The "Rules" appended to the above circular are the same as those published in our last.

Registration of Letters.

The following are replies to communications on this subject which we have received during the past month:

M. S., C——, Wis.—The plan you propose would not be a registration system, but one of insurance, which would not at present be practicable in this country, even if desirable. It should be remembered that the Post Office was not originally, and is not now, intended as a means of conveying actual money, but letters, and such representatives of money as checks, drafts, &c., although extensively used for the former purpose.

P. M., H——, Mass.—On all registered letters to the U. S. Treasurer or any other officer having the franking privilege, (except in the case of a registered letter from a P. M. to the Post-office Department,) the registration fee must be prepaid by stamps, even though the letter be entitled to pass free of postage. See article on this subject in another column.

C. A., A—— M——, Tenn.—1. Apply to Third Assistant P. M. General for a supply of Registered Package Envelopes. 2. A postmaster need not take a receipt for a Registered Package from a mail carrier to whom he delivers it in a locked pouch. He should put a filled-up receipt into the pouch, to be signed and returned to him, when he delivers such a package in a pouch to a route-agent. 3. Do not sell stamps in such quantities as to exhaust your supply before it can be renewed.

W. B., S—— D——, Pa.—Notwithstanding your objection, the answer in our last is correct. A Postmaster who sends a registered package in a locked pouch to another P M., does not "deliver" it to him. The route-agent, mail-driver, or messenger is the one to whom he delivers it—and in the majority of cases it is not "practicable" to obtain receipts from the two latter.

N. E., B——, N. Y.—In all cases registration fees must be prepaid by stamps. These may be affixed by the P. M., though it is the business of the sender of the letter to do so. You should always keep a supply of stamps.

J. M. B., F——, N. Y.—If a registered letter, directed to another office, is mis-sent to yours, you should at once re-register it to the proper office, notifying the mailing P. M. of his error, and returning the return bill.

REGISTERED LETTERS TO HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS, &c.—Among our "Answers to Correspondents" in July last, was one in which a postmaster was instructed as follows: "No registry fee need be paid on letters to Heads of Departments which you are authorized or required to send to them, registered, on official business; but all letters sent to persons entitled to the franking privilege are not entitled to be registered free," This was written in reply to a specific question asked by the postmaster to whom it was addressed, and was not intended to convey the idea that a postmaster could register, free, letters written by other persons than himself to Heads of Departments on official business. The Post Office Department holds that all letters addressed to any of the Executive Departments of the government, except letters from Postmasters to the Post Office Department, when sent registered, must have the registration fee fully prepaid by stamps.

Postmasters will therefore understand that on any letter to any Executive Department of the government, or to a Member of Congress, or to any other person entitled to the franking privilege, which the writer desires to be sent registered, the registration fee of twenty cents must be prepaid by stamps.

☞ We would call the attention of all postmasters to the fact that it is important that the Department be kept advised of the whole number of Registered letters mailed during each quarter. Blanks for this purpose are printed at the foot of the requisition of Registered Package Envelopes, and it is the duty of each postmaster, when ordering Registered Package Envelopes, to have the blanks carefully filled.

REPORTS OF MISSING REGISTERED LETTERS.—Missing registered letters should be at once reported to a Special Agent, as well as to the Department. Circular No. 46, (Inquiry for Registered Package Envelope,) has been supplied to all Special Agents, who will make use of them in all cases of reported loss.

The attention of Postmasters at Distributing Post Offices is called to an official order in another column, referring to Circular No. 16, in regard to missing registered packages of stamps and stamped envelopes.

Answers to Correspondents.

Postage on Photographs, &c., to Canada.—S. H. E., T——, Pa.—Postage on photographs and photographic views to Canada should be charged at letter rates. See. 261, Regulations of 1866, mentions only newspapers and periodicals as chargeable with the regular quarterly, or the transient rates of printed matter.

Postage on Daily Paper, published in the same town with Post-office of delivery.—W. J. E., N——, Mich.—Your P. M. is correct in charging postage on a daily paper published in the county. Weekly papers alone are entitled to circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Newspaper Extras.—J. H. B., D——, Wis.—The "Extra" you sent is a hand bill and not a bona fide extra, and its enclosure in the regular edition of the paper, subjects the whole to letter postage, Sections 209 and 225, Reg. 1866. If such letter postage is not paid by the party addressed, the sender is liable to a fine of five dollars for each offense. See letter of 1st Asst. P. M. General, in THE MAIL for August.

Delivering Papers published in the County —J. R., N—— P——, N. Y.—As the papers you mention are weekly papers, printed and published in the county, and come to your office through the mails, they should be delivered to subscribers free. The size of the town is not to be considered in deciding a question of this nature.

Delivering Papers bought outside the Mails Circulars, &c.—J. R., P——, Vt. and A. A., W——, Mass.—1. "Contractors and mail-carriers may carry newspapers out of the mails, for sale or distribution among regular subscribers, but when such papers are placed in a post-office for delivery, postage must be charged and collected." Sec. 50, Reg. 1866. 2. The sample sent is a circular, and can only be sent at circular rates, viz: three for two cents. Sec. 204, Reg. 1866.

Delivering Mail Matter addressed to another office, &c—G. A. D., E——, N. Y. and E. L. G., No. B —, Cal.—1. Postmasters cannot deliver letters from their respective offices which may be addressed to other offices, except where they are addressed to discontinued offices, when they are to be delivered from the nearest office. Sec. 63, Reg. 1866. 2. You doubtless understand that it is only weekly papers, printed and published in the county, that can be sent free of postage to subscribers living in the same county. A news agent is not a publisher, and cannot send the papers he deals in free within the county.

Making up Mails direct for New York, &c.—J C., T——, Pa. and J. R., H——, Del.—You should send your letters by the most expeditious route. Sec. 87, Reg. 1866. Those for other States, which must pass through a distributing office, should be sent to the first distributing office through which they should pass on their route to destination. Sec. 93, Reg. 1866.

Commencement of Quarters.—G. C., E—— C——, Pa.—The commencement of a quarter does not depend on the time of receiving a commission or key. Quarters commence respectively on the first days of January, April, July, and October. Sec. 293, Reg. 1866.

Letter bearing mark of having been Prepaid.—E. E. H., W——, Mo.—A letter bearing evident marks of having been prepaid by stamp, and received regularly in a mail pouch, should be considered as prepaid and delivered accordingly.

Selling Stamped Envelopes for more than their cost.—C. J. B., W——, Ill.—It would be impossible to sell one envelope for the cost only; and in such cases you would be at liberty to charge what would be necessary to enable you to supply the envelope without loss to yourself. Five envelopes, note size, can be sold for seventeen cents.

Post-office Scales.—S. S. H., A—— C——, Pa.—Apply to the Appointment Office, Washington, D. C., for the information you seek.

Returning Unsealed Circulars, &c.—J. G., St. M——, Minn.—1. Unsealed circulars are not to be returned upon request, unless the postage for such return is prepaid. Sec. 390, Reg. 1866. 2. Registered Request Letters must be returned (registered) according to request, the Registered Letter Bill kept on file, the Return Registered Letter Bill sent back to the mailing office, whether the letter is delivered or returned, (Sec. 8, new registry instructions.) The Registered Letter Receipt should be returned with the letter. 3. The changes of mail routes and mail service are under the control of the Postmaster General.

Number of Request Letters returned.—M. J., G—— B——, Wis.—The section to which you refer evidently requires only the number of the letters to be stated. Sec. 399, Reg. 1866.

Putting Mail Matter for different Persons in the same Box.—P. O. R., K——, Wis.—You are not obliged to put any mail matter in a box except by request of the person renting the box. If you adhere strictly to the rule requiring payment of box rent before a box is assigned to any one, you will have no difficulty or collecting the rent, if the party wants a box.

Returning an Insufficiently Prepaid Letter.—M. McD., O——, Ind.—If a person refuses to receive a letter on which there is postage due for insufficient prepayment, the postmaster should not send such letter back to the mailing office, but should treat it as refused, and send it to the Dead Letter Office.

Postmasters opening Packages in Transit.—W. W. T., C——, N. Y.—A postmaster should open only the packets addressed to his office, and none other. Sec. 68, Reg. 1866.

Two or more Money Order Advices to one Office.—V. O., P—— J——, N. Y.—You may enclose as many advices as you please in one envelope, provided that they are for the same postmaster.

Mail Carrier opening a Letter not Prepaid.—J. T. B., M—— I——, Cal.—A mail-carrier has no right to open a letter handed to him for delivery, if such letter is not prepaid. Nor has he any right to receive such a letter, unless at the same time he receives a stamp, or the money to procure one, and puts the letter into the first post office at which he arrives. Secs. 43 and 469, Reg. 1866.

Delivering Newspapers Published within the Town.—N. C. P., C——, N. Y.—If you deliver weekly newspapers published within your town, you cannot charge postage on them; but you are not required to deliver them, and should not do so if it interferes with the regular business of the office.

Making up Mails.—L. P. C., W——, Kas.—Section 88, Regulations 1866, are very clear on the duty of postmasters in making up mails. If you have serious cause of complaint, report to the Appointment Office.

Editors exchanging with Canada Papers.—B. F. S., I——, Mich.—The privilege of exchange of papers free extends to Canada, and the other British North American Provinces. Sec. 261, Reg. 1866.

Forwarding Miscellaneous Matter.—P. B. M., G——, O.—It is only domestic mail letters that can be forwarded free of charge, and there is no provision made for forwarding newspapers and periodicals, unless the postage is prepaid. If a regular subscriber removes, he should get a receipt from the postmaster of the former office, for quarterly postage paid, exhibit this receipt to the postmaster of his new office, where he will be entitled to receive his paper, without further additional postage, if it comes direct from the publisher. If, however, such matter is forwarded without prepayment, postage should be collected according to Section 150, Regulations of 1866.

Legal Tender, &c.—E. S., M—— P——, N. J.—1. We inadvertently stated in last month's MAIL that one-cent coins were a legal tender to the amount of ten cents, it should have been four. The law passed May 3, 1865, says: "The one and two cent coins of the United States shall not be a legal tender for any payment exceeding four cents in amount." 2. The postage charge of two cents on delivery of certain foreign newspapers is the charge fixed by the government in its postal conventions with those countries.

Postage by Prussian Closed Mail.—G. H. E., G——, Ga.—United States Postage Stamps are in all cases to be used for prepayment of postage on letters mailed in the United States, whether addressed to foreign countries or not.

Franking Privilege.—We have several inquiries on this subject. To answer each one separately would take too much time and space: we will therefore refer our correspondents to the Regulations of 1866, Chapter XV. As, however, some of these inquiries relate to officers of the Revenue Department, who are not named in that chapter, we will add, that, as a general rule, Assessors and Collectors may frank on official business to each other and to their assistants in their respective branches of service. But the Assistants in each branch can only frank to the principals therein, and to each other.

Weekly Papers "Printed" outside the County, where "Published."—W. B. B., M——, Vt.—Weekly newspapers may circulate free within the County where they are "PRINTED and published." A newspaper therefore must be both printed and published within a county in order to entitle its publishers to send it free through the mails to subscribers within that county. A paper printed at A——, in B — — County, but bearing the date of publication at C——, in D—— County, cannot circulate free in either county. If the case were otherwise, a publisher could defraud the revenues of the Department to any extent by simply changing the printed date of publication to suit his subscribers in each county.

☞ Much confusion and unfounded reports of losses of registered letters will be avoided if postmasters will be careful to send their return bills to the proper offices. Some postmasters after sending a registered letter (as they of course should do) to the first distributing office on the route, send the return bill to the office which the letter is finally intended to reach for delivery. This is wrong. Always send the return bill to the distributing office to which the letter was sent. Other postmasters, after receiving a registered letter through a distributing office, send the return bill to the office where the letter was originally mailed. This is also wrong. Always return the return bill to the office at which it is dated; but send the return receipt to the original mailing office.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

MODE OF INDICATING THE PREPAYMENT OF POSTAGE UPON LETTERS RECEIVED FROM FORRION COUNTRIES.

When the United States officinl postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as pnid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and tha postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decida any questions as to prepayment, by this simple criterion.

REGISTERING FORRION LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United Stetes for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, is five cents—to all other Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Our Posal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rate of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particulnr, in all cases, to collect tha United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregulnrities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Lettere addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters caunot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to nnd from Canada is 10 cents per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3d, 1863, all postegse due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails despatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, or Belgium, are collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of sach postage, and of the premium on a corresponding arcount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amonnt to be collected in U. S. notes, (in case coin is not offered,) is marked on each letter on its arrival at U. S. Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hance, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in tha account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

The above applies exclusively to the mails received froro the countries mentioned.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-Presidesit, or members of Congress, or, (on official bneiness) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the frankiug privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is estabished, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not estoblished the rate is 1 cent.

The single rate of postags on all domestic mail letters throughout the United Stetes is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three centa for each additional half ounce or fraction of n half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars or other printed matter which shall contain nay manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the samn rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thersef.

Newspaper Postage.

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by tbis postmaster must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, any four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actunl term of their subscriptions—that is for one-quarter and a third, one-quarter and two-thirds, &c. The lnw only requirse that at least one-qnarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more tbnn one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepoid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publiention, and mny also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publicatone the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages to one address at the rate of ons cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, nnd an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yasrly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers nnd periodicals to regular subscribers at the qunrterly rates, in the saros manner as publishers, and rosy also receive them from pnblishers nt subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publicntions issued without disclosing tha offica of publication, or cantaining a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters unless prepaid at the mailing office nt the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazinse and periodicals sent to regular subscribers from publishere) intended to go by mail westward froro the western boundary of Knnsas, or eastward from the eastern boundary of Califoroia, must be prepaid by stamps at letter postage rates. Sec. 259, P. O. Laws, Edition of 1866.]

BOOKS, not over 4 oz. in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over 4 oz. nnd not over 8 oz., 8 cts.; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 12 cts.; over 12 oz. nnd not over 16 oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER, (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blnnks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots nnd scions,) the postoge to be prepaid by stamps, is, on one packnge to one address, not over 4 oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz., 4 cts; over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz., 5 cts.; over 12 oz. and not over 15 oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster Gensral, the fifth subdivisian of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking out tha word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows: "The weigbt of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots nnd scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter, except seeds, must be so wrapped ar enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to exnroine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packagse must be reted with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter nt the estnblished rates.

Exchanga newspapers and periodicals cannot be remailed without being chnrgesble with postage.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received nt any post office directed to one address, and tha names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to tha postmaster, he shall deliver tha same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the Britieh North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chorgeable with the sama rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it cemse to the office of dalivery without prepayment, or short-paid, tha unpaid postege must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is nither prepaid at the mailing office, or at the dellvery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

RULES FOR RATING LETTERS, &C.

1. IN THE UNITED STATES AND BRITISH MAILS.—Letters exchanged with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or addressed to British Colonies and foreign countries, for transmission in the open mail via England, are charged with United States and British postage, at a single rate for each half ounce or fraction thereof, the same as domestic letters.

In the case of letters to be forwarded in the British mail for transmission fram England "via Marseilles," the French postage is rated at 6 cents the quarter ounce, except on lettere for Java, China, Labuan, Borneo, Japan, the Moluccas and Philipine Islands, which are rated at 8 cents per half ounce, and except, also, on lettere for Syria and Tunis, by French packet, when the single Freuch rate is 12 cents per quarter ounce.

2. IN THE UNITED STATES AND FRENCH MAILS.—Letters in the mail to France are to be charged with single rate of postage, if not exceeding the weight of one quarter ounce; double rate if exceeding a quarter, but not exceeding half an ounce; and so on, an additional rate being charged for each quarter ounce, or fractional part of a quarter ounce.

The rates by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz.: Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent via Suez, countries beyond seas via France, othere than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Java, Mauritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia, (except Belgrade,) Shanghai, Singapore and Spain. The limit of poyment to Spain, Portugal and Gibraltar, is Behobia; to Servia (except Belgrade,) Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria," the frontier of Turkey and Austria; to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries via Suez, the seaports of the Indies, or of the sea of China to which the English packets ply; and to places beyond seas, other than those designated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of destination.

3. IN THE MAILS TO PRUSSIA, OR TO BELGIUM.—Letters in the United States and Prussian closed mails, and in the mails exchanged with Belgium, are charged with single rate of postage if not exceeding half an ounce in weight; double rate if exceeding half an ounce, but not exceeding an ounce; quadruple rate if exceeding an ounce, but not exceeding two onnces; and so on, for greater weights, charging two rates for every ounce or fractional part of an ounce over the first ounce. As this scale of progression differe from that followed in respect to domestic lettere, great care is required to prevent mistakes.

4. IN THE MAILS TO BREMEN, OR TO HAMBURG, &C.—Lettere addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Hamburg; and letters addressed to the British North American Provinces, are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an ounce.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS:—Postmasters, should be careful where the postage is prepaid, to collect the proper amount. They should be particular to notice the route indicated on the envelopes of letters, and to collect postage accordingly. Lettere mailed at some offices, marked "via England," or "via Prussian Closed Mail," for a German Stats, are frequently takan upon the prepayment of Bremen rates, and those marked "via Bremen," at Prussian closed rates, &c.

To prevent mistakes at the exchange offices, it is desirable that the particular routes by which letters are to be forwarded from the United States to Europe, should be distinctly written on the covers. Lettere intended for transmission in the open mail to England, should bear the direction, "open mail via England;" if for transmission in the French mail, they should be directed, "via France in the French Mail;" if for transmission by closed mail to Prussia, they should be directed "via Prussian closed mail;" if for transmission in the closed mail to Belgium, they should be directed, "via Belgian closed mail;" and if for transmission by the New York and Bremen line to Bremen, or by the New York and Hamburg line to Hamburg, they should be directed, "via Bremen," or "via Hamburg."

It is important that letters addressed to Germany and other European countries, via France, where the single rate per quarter ounce is 21 cents, should be plainly marked to be sent "via France;" otherwise they may be mis-sent in the open mail to Liverpool, by United States packet, the 21 cent rate per half ounce being also chargeable on letters thus forwarded.

NOTE 1. When the letter "a" is prefixed, the foreign postage (which in such case, is 12 cents) is increased by an additional rate for every 7 1-2 grammes (1-4 oz.) or fraction thereof. The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which, in each case, on and after 1st January, 1868, is 10 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (1-2 oz.) or fraction thereof. Upon letters for all other places, an additional rate is reckoned for every 15 grammes (1-2 oz.) or fraction thereof.

NOTE 2. Where the letter "b" is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case, is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 2 cents, which is the United States postage on the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases, the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight.

NOTE 3. The rates set down for book packets and packets of patterns, &c., respectively, are to be charged for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof.

NOTE 4. The book and pattern post to Egypt extends only to Alexandria, Cairo, and Suez.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Registered Letters—a Suggestion.

BLANKVILLE, Sept., 1867.

Editor U. S. Mail:—When a genuine citizen of the universal Yankee nation finds himself involved in difficulty or perplexity of any description, he wastes no time in bemoaning tbe bard fate which has brought him into the scrape, but at once calls a meeting of all his faculties, and appoints from among them a committee on the ways and means of extricating himself from tbe surrounding unfavorable circumstances. And if he is a genuine Yankee, this committee is very soon prepared to report some practicable plan of operstions to meet tba emergency.

Now, although there isn't a rocking cbair or sny other article of furniture about my premises which "came over in the Mayflower"—and though none of my ancestors, that I am awara of, bad anything to do with the trial of King Charles the First—I still claim to be a Yankee. I am also a P.M.; and having lately found myself in a positiou of some difficulty in regard to an official matter, I have, after the manner of my trihe, endeavored to dig my way out—with what success I will, with your permission, relate for the benefit of such of your readers as may have been troubled in a similar way.

The post-office which has been entrusted to my charge is situated on the line of a railroad, and is the starting-point of a route over which the mail is conveyed by stage to four other offices—which I will call Oneville, Twoville, Threeville and Fourville. At the time the present registration system was put into operstion, I found that the route-agent ou the railroad placed in the pouch for my office, in addition to the registered package envelopes directed to me, all those directed to the other postmasters named above—for each of which I was obliged to give him a receipt: my duty was then, (after entering the numbers, postmarks and destinations of these envelopes on my Record of Registered Matter in Transit, with the dates at which I had received them) to forward them in the pouch in charge of the stage-driver. This I did for some time; and though I took no receipts for them from the driver, and did not expect any from the postmasters to whom they ware directed, I had no fears for their safety. The driver I knew to be "A 1;" the postmaster at Oneville is my wife's half-brother; the one at Twoville is an old schoolfellow of my own; he at Threeville is as honest as daylight, though perhaps a little careless; while the Fourville official is entitled to write "Rev." before his uame as well "P. M." after it. So, altbough it once or twice occurred to me that it might be a little awkward if one of those package envelopes for which I had given a receipt, and taken none were to disappear, the contingency seemed so remote that the thought of it troubled me but little.

About six weeks ago, however, I received from the route-agent a registered package envelope, (No. 250) directed to the postmaster at Twoville, for which I duly receipted, entered it on my Record, and placed it in the proper pouch, which was delivered to the driver, and gave myself no further anxiety about the matter until, about ten days afterward, I received a "Circular of Inquiry," signed hy a Special Agent, whieb stated that the Twoville P. M. bad reported tbat registered package envelope No. 250 had not been received by him. Though I was somewhat startled hy this intelligence, I had but little uneasiness on my own account—for my Record was all right, and I certainly remembered placing the envelope in the pouch, which was securely locked when I handed it to the driver. So, stating the facts on the back of the Letter of Inquiry, I forwarded it, as instructed, to the P. M. at Oneville, assuring myself that there was "only a mistake somewhere," and that the missing package had probably arrived by that time.

That same afternoon, however, my wife's half-brother (tbe Oneville P. M.) drove up to my door, and after a friendly salutation, inquired,

"What's the matter with that Twoville registered letter?"

"Jdst what I was going to ask you," I replied. "I sent it in the pouch that goes through your office."

"Guess not."

"I'll swear to it."

"I never saw it—I'll swear to that."

We stood and looked at each otber in the face for a moment or two. I suppose the thoughts of both could he expressed in about this way:

"Joe } Couldn't have stolen it!'
"Charley }

Then, both speaking at once, we said, "It's mighty strange;" and though we talked for some time longer, we were obliged to separste without further progress towards clearing up the mystery—Charley, for some reason, declining my invitation to stay for supper.

A week passed hy—and a more uncomfortable week I do not remember. I am very much afrsid that I allowed just a shade of suspicion to enter my mind concerning Charley. I am also very much afraid that he returned the compliment. To suspect, or be suspected hy, one of your own family—even though he be only half a brother-in-law—is not pleasant, and my nervous system and nights' rest were considerably disturbed hy my unpleasant reflections.

At the end of the week Mr. Special Agent made his appearance in person. He examinsd my Record, and cross-examined me rigidly but politely—then took bis departure in the direction of Oneville. Tha same evening he passed my office on his return to the cars, but did not stop. It may have been "only my fancy," but I did think his expression, as he coldly returned my bow, was not one which indicated entire confidence in me.

Two days afterward, I drove over to see Charley, to "have it out" with him. We did not offer to shake hands as we met, but both said "How are you?" and neitber replied. After sitting in silence a few moments, I suddenly asked:

"Look bere, Charley; do you think I stole that registered package?"

"I never said so, did I—do you think I stole it?"

"I can't believe it—but It left my office all right?"

"So you say."

"What do you mean?"

"What do you mean? I think it's a cowardly business to insinuate what you don't dare to speak out."

We both stood up. "If you call me a coward, I'll——;" and in another minute there would have been at least one P. M. (I don't say which one) damaged, if the entrance of a third member of the postal fraternity, in the person of the P. M. of Twoville, had not interrupted the proceedings, I suspect he had overheard some of our conversation, but he had the good taste to pretend that he hadn't.

"Isn't it 'most too hot to talk politics?" said he, as be entered! "Besides, it's a bad practice. I was busy talking politics when I let that registered envelope go hy the other day."

"Have yon found it?" exclaimed Charley and I, simultaneously.

"To be sure I have. You see I was bnsy arguing with Dr. Higgins when the mail came in, and I suppose I didn't shake the ponch ont thoroughly, so the registered package went on to Threeville, where the postmaster found it and put it very carefully aside, intending to send it to me by the down mail next day; but he got a telegram that nigbt and went off to Chicago to see about some law business, leaving his clerk in charga of tbe post-office, and forgetting all about the registered envelope. When he got back yesterday, he found it locked in the drawer where he had pnt it, and sent it to me to-day. As it reached him through mistake, he didn't put it on the Record, and so of course the trace was lost. It'll be a warning to me to be more careful about talking politics and attending to business at the same time But it must have got wedged crosswise in the pouch—for it seems Charley overlooked it too."

My half-brother-in-law and I looked at each other sheepishly, each thoroughly asbamed of his unworthy suspicions—and after the departure of the Twoville P. M., we mutually apologized, and now remain the best of friends. But as I drove home I thougbt I ought, for the credit of my Yankee blood, to devise some means to avoid getting into such a fix a second time—and the following plan is the result of my furtber cogitations. I can only say that it works well so far, and I would recommend it to all my official brethren who bave been, or are afraid they may be, brought into the sams difficulty I have described above:

When I bave a registered envelope directed to any of the four offices on the route I bave mentioned, (to Fourville, for instance,) I take a half-sheet of paper and write across the head of it:

I then affix my postmark and sign my name as P. M. When tbe driver calls for the mail, be comes into the office, and I put the registered envelope into the pouch in his presence, first letting him compare the number, &c., with the memorandum I have made on the half-sheet, which (after he has affixed his signature or initials) I then give to him in an envelope. When he hands the pouch to the Oneville P. M., he also gives him the memorandum. The Oneville P M. examines it, and, finding it correct, affixes his postmark and signature and returns it, with the pouch, to the driver. The same thing is done at Twoville, Threeville and Fourville; and on the down trip the driver returns it to me, and I keep it on file.

The Regulations require that postmasters and others shall take receipts for registered package envelopes from the person to whom they deliver them, "whenever practicable." My experience has convinced me that the above plan is practicable. When I now give a route-agent a receipt for a registered envelope, I feel sure that after it leaves my bands I shall have "something to show for it." And moreover, when one of the P. M.'s on the route don't at once find the envelope called for hy the mail-driver's memorandum, he shakes the pouch till he does find it. There are many other advantages which will readily occur to all postmasters, and which I need not now allude to. I should have mentioned, however, that the same plan is followed at all the offices on the route, with registered envelopes passing up or down To each it is of course a little extra trouble; but to each it is also an equal protection. I would earnestly recommend every postmaster to try it.

Yonrs truly,
J. S. D.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO,
August, 1867.

"Shem, Ham and Japhet went forth from the Ark, and from them the whole earth was peopled."

It matters little what became of the Ark after it had accomplished its purpose: It may have been sold at auction, broken up for firswood, or gone to decay. We merely advert to the fact, and in no spirit of levity repeat that these three individuals went forth, and standing on the threshold of an empty world, and casting their eyes abroad in different directions, determined it should be peopled—and they peopled it; and from them bave descended every variety of tbe human species which are now to be found upon this planet. It is reasonable to suppose that the descendants of each of these first settlers inherited the prominent traits of character of their respective progenitors, more or less modified, mellowed and harmonized by time and intellectual culture. Away down to our day we have, no doubt, much to thank them for; but the geneological trees have been pruned and grafted so often through a long line of generations, that their healthy growth has been much impaired, and their vigor is unlike that of the age when giants were. It would take more room than you can spare, and more time and ability than I possess, to enlarge learnedly on this subject; suffice it to say, that the virtues and vices of these three forefathers have come down to us, strengthened or weakened according to their nature, and increased or decreased by accretion or attrition, according to the channels through which they have passed to reach us; but I don't believe any have been lost or forgotten, particularly the vices. Yet I cannot help thinking that if laziness and selfishness had fallen by the way, the world would have been better off, and these twin-suggestors and fabricators of everything that is bad would not have the opportunity of demoralizing so many of the promising young men of our day. Singly, neither of these reprehensible qualities amount to much, but when they combine and dwell together, their possessor becomes a miserable stick, whose presence should be shunned, and whose influence should be avoided as pestiferous.

This contemptible admixture, in these days, shows itself nowhere so palpably in all its phases as on a railway train, or in a government office. Indeed, every salient point of character developes more quickly, frequently and powerfully there, but in a railway coach better opportunity is afforded to observe the bent of sudden, natural impulses than elsewhere, because the congregation of intelligent samples is confined within limits, which the critical eye can everywhere reach. Enter a car, upon every seat of which there is but a single individual, how quickly you can detect lazy, selfish people. This man feigns sleep, that, illness—this lady informs you that the seat is engaged, that fills it up with bundles and bandboxes—here some crusty old "cuss" and his veteran (no) better-half monopolize a section by turning over a seat—be sitting on one of them with his feet on the other, and she opposite to him doing the same thing, and both pretending to be very much impressed with the receding landscape, as seen from the car window; and all this, perhaps, while a lady not so wealthy or so well dressed is forced to stand up with a child in her arms, and possibly one or two others clinging to her skirts, as she stands in the aisle to prevent them from falling; and to finish the picture, some overgrown, nasty fellows have the floor under their feet all afloat with tobacco juice, the sight of which is almost enough to overpower a genteel chewer, and too much for any one seeking a seat, however tired and anxious they may be. These things all betoken selfishness, laziness, ill-breeding, and unfamiliarity with with the amenities of good society. You can set the offender down as any other but number one.

I have travelled during the month over a good deal of territory, sometimes under such heavy rains as almost to make one believe a second deluge was about to burst on our wicked heads—and thinking thus of the flood, Noah and his family naturally rose before the imagination; hence the introduction of Japhet and the other boys. The discomforts of crowded cars in other localities where hot weather and dust made travelling almost unendurable, and the discontrest of their inmates, furnishes a good excuse for anathematizing meanness—the first offspring of selfishness and laziness.

I think I hear some one ask, why I travel at all under such circumstances? To him I would say that my well-known desire to go about doing good brought me under the notice of "The Universal Cold-water Beverage and Bathing Company," and they tendered me the position of Recording Secretary, which I accepted, and at once assumed the duties of a position, the initiatory of which was to travel over various representative portions of the country, to gather and classify statistics as to the probable proportion of young men employed in important civil and OFFICIAL positions, who pay tribute to the master of vices—Alcohol—in some shape, and who believe there is no immorality in shouting at the top of their lungs, when the moral world is abed, this bacchanalian refrain:—

"We'll all drink strong wine:

and report thereon, with a view to their reformation, by the forced introduction of our new system of interoal and external joint-stock applications. I must confess, however, that my success was very limited—this I am sure was owing to the unfavorable weather. The continued rain in some quarter decreased dissipation, and juvenile bacchanals were scarce. At first I felt disappointed, and was disposed to rail at Jupiter Pluvius; but when I thought how selfish it was to scold the rain, which the hills and the valleys, the big streams and the little rills, the cattle and the birds, sometimes and in some places now need so much, and show their gratitude therefor so plainly by brighter tints, larger yields, and sweeter music, I felt ashamed, and mentally apologized. Selfishness avaunt! And yet you see it everywhere. Some of your readers may charge that my Paul Pry propensities to peep into post-offices are prompted by a selfish desire to right a wrong long ago inflicted on me. Not so. Selfishness has no other incentive than personal interest and personal gratification. My ambition in that respect is to advantage every one interested in the postal service.

Although the rain interfered materially with my calculations, yet I was able by close watching and perseverance to secure some hereafter-to-be-used important facts, and from the little data in my possession I could now give a pretty correct idea of the young men and boys on the road to ruin in certain localities which I have visited. In my unassuming way I have visited base-ball clubs, lounged into billiard rooms, squatted myself in saloons where lager, ice-cream, and other rougher and more injurious refreshments are served up; have mingled with the crowds which swarm about the depots of populous villages every night upon the arrival of trains, and have visited many other moral resorts where fast young men are to be found, and—I found 'em, and noted it. At all these places every industrial pursuit is represented—and at some of them I noticed that postal clerks were the leading spirits. Experts at billiards, dabsters at base-ball, and sturdy drinkers are some of them—and the late hours they keep show o' mornings in numerous yawns and bleared and blood-shot eyes, which many credulous postmasters attribute to fatigue and ill-health, superinduced by hard labor and close confinement to business. Poor souls! many of them retire to the bosoms of their families at dark, and suppose, of course, their clerks do the same—and many do; but I know that others are not very particular, and only go home when they can go nowhere else.

It would not be right to reveal to you, my dear MAIL, what I have seen, and where I have seen it; but in the hope that some of the young officials who are "running to the bad" will read and inwardly digest what I am going to write, and stop just where they are, I will yield to a sense of duty, and proffer some advice. A word in season, if taken properly, may prevent much mental anguish and remorse—sermons, domestic lectures, and tears can do no more. Young man, it is no small responsibility you take upon yourself when you assume the duties of a postal clerk, and solemnly swear to properly perform them; that obligation cannot be left behind you in the office, like the other hat or the other coat, or the other boots, when you go out. Whatever society you mix in, whatever place you visit, that obligation follows you and stays with you, no matter how much you may attempt to smother it, hide it, or prostitute it. You cannot shake it off, and its violation, gradual at first, will certainly bring you to grief, if you remain an official and persist in gratifying perverted tastes. Don't you know that you, more than any one else in the community in which you live, are the subject of conversation and observation? Don't you know that accordingly as your moral character is rated, people shudder, or feel thankful, when they think of their letters, containing the most sacred confidences, passing through your hands? When you commence and continue to wander from the plain path which you should follow, and, as you suppose, shielded by the obscurity of night, or a lack of vigilance by day, your gradual progress to ruin and despair is unobserved, you are laboring under a fatal mistake; lay not this unction to your soul: you are watched. All you say and all you do is recorded, and sooner or later the Nemesis on your track will drag into the bright sunlight your hidden sins; and then, poor, bewildered, stricken soul, you will ponder and wonder why you, for a little evanescent gratification, could so compromise yourself, and vainly regret that you did not listen to the moral monitor of your own heart, or to the kindly promptings of somebody's else.

I don't expect to make saints of sinners, but I am impressed with the belief that if some of your readers will glance over these lines, thanks some day or other will be mentally tendered to

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster-General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL," [see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866,] and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster-General.

[OFFICIAL.]

REDUCTION OF POSTAGE TO SCHLEISWIG-HOLSTEIN AND LAUENBURG, BY HAMBURG, OR PRUSSIAN CLOSED MAILS.

We are requested to state, that correspondence addressed to Schleswig-Holstein, or to Lauenburg, either by Hamburg, or Prussian Closed Mails, will hereafter be subject to the same rates of postage as are charged upon correspondence addressed to Prussia or the German Postal Union, viz:

By Hamburg Mail, 15 cents per single rate of letters, prepayment optional; and 3 cents each for newspapers, prepayment required.

By Prussian Closed Mail. For letters, 28 cents per single rate (if prepaid) and 30 cents if unpaid, and 6 cents each for newspapers, prepayment required.

VOLUME VIII OF THE MAIL.

The Eighth Volume of THE UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST-OFFICE ASSISTANT commences with the present number, and we think this an appropriate occasion to say a few words to our friends the subscribers to the paper. By every mail we receive letters from some of them, which allude to the benefit they derive from the perusal of THE MAIL in most flattering terms. "I must have it;" "Couldn't pretend to run my office without it;" "Worth to me five times the price of subscription," &c., &c., are common expressions of satisfaction from our subscribers. We are of course pleased to know that our efforts to deserve the name of a "Post-Office Assistant" are appreciated by our readers, and assure them that we shall endeavor to render THE MAIL as worthy of their good opinion in the future as it has been in the past.

There can be but few of our subscribers who do not know of one or more postmasters in their neighborhood who for some reason are not subscribers to THE MAIL. Some are too careless; others think that their compensation is too small to warrant even the expenditure of an annual dollar in acquiring the information furnished in our paper; others, who leave the management of their offices altogether to "the deputy," are willing to allow him to subscribe at his own expense if he desires to do so—which he often does not. Now those of our subscribers who are acquainted with those still outside the fold of MAIL-readers can benefit them, the service, and us, by using their influence in inducing them to send in their names as subscribers to our paper. We ask every one who finds THE MAIL useful to himself, to take some pains to recommend it to another, to whom it would be equally useful. Many have already done so, to whom we desire to express our thanks—and we hope the rest will follow the example.

G. W., C——, Ill.—Postmasters are not required to receipt to each other for registered letters passing through their offices, but there is nothing in the laws or regulations to prevent their doing so if they desire to. See J. S. D's. communication on first page

G. P. M., S——, Pa.—If the postmark on a registered package envelope passing through your office is illegible, enter it so in your record of Registered matter in transit.

☞ We have received several communications on the subject of the prepayment of all mail matter (including newspapers, &c., to regular subscribers) by stamps. We shall not be able to print all of them, for lack of room—nor any of them in the present number, for the same reason; but we hope to find space for one or more of them next month.

☞ The communication on our first page, referring to a plan to guard against errors and losses in the conveyance of registered packages over stage-routes, will be found to repay perusal.

Sundry Post-Office Matters.

Several correspondents have propounded to us questions respecting compensation, in the various forms of insufficiency, non-receipt, &c. We can only reply that we are familiar with the laws and regulations fixing compensation; but it is impossible for us to know their bearing upon individual cases. Why the Postmaster-General adjusts the salary of any particular office at a certain figure, or why postmasters or route-agents do not receive drafts, we have no means of ascertaining. . . . . To a complainant, who, by the way, does not seem to relish the inevitable "cursing", regarding printed matter having writing on it, we would say, that the law is explicit in subjecting such matter to letter postage, and making it the duty of postmasters to collect such postage on delivery; also subjecting the sender to a fine of five dollars. Sec 316, Laws 1866. . . . We are requested to furnish "the best plan to keep stamps, in the sheet, from sticking together." We know of no plan but keeping them perfectly dry, free even from damp. . . . . A correspondent complains of the rowdyism in his office. This is quite a common complaint. Many postmasters seem to think that they have no authority to keep order in their offices, unless specially conferred by postal law. This is a mistake; the fact of a man being postmaster, or of a room or rooms being used for a post-office, does not in the least alter the rights of the man as a citizen, or his authority to preserve order in any place under his control; nor have rowdies, or any others, any more right to create disturbance in a post-office than they have in a store or a private house. Considering that post-offices are visited by both sexes, of all ages and stations, and that these visitors have no choice, in their respective towns, but the one post-office, we cannot too forcibly impress on postmasters the duty of preserving the strictest order in and about their offices, using for this purpose both their official and private rights. . . . . A matter of courtesy between a postmaster and a boxholder has been submitted to us, involving the knotty question whether "a P. M. is required to look in lock-boxes for every one of a family that comes along?" That depends upon good nature and good temper. At the same time, we must acknowledge that among the petty, yet vexatious, annoyances to a postmaster is the repeated and useless calls for letters for the same family. We have known a half-dozen applications by different parties in less than half an hour. We were present once when the usual profane complaint was showered on a clerk for not being able to produce a newspaper, which it turned out had been delivered to the applicant's wife not ten minutes before by another clerk, who had soon after gone to dinner. And yet we say that the question involved can only be answered by good nature and good temper.

RETURNING ENVELOPE CASES TO STAMP AGENTS.—Postmasters who return the wooden envelope cases to the Stamp and Envelope Agent at New York, as instructed by the Department, should be careful to securely attach to each one a Registered Package Envelope, plainly postmarked, and directed to "Postmaster, New York." Always send them "direct."

Distributing Packages that come in the Mail from Newsdealers—A. W. T., W——, Pa.—The regulation requiring postmasters to distribute packages that come in the mail makes no distinction between those mailed by newsdealers or by publishers. Sec. 211, Reg. 1866.

Post-office Directory.—R. F N., C——, N. Y.—The last Department Edition of the Post-office Directory issued in 1862, was furnished free to post-offices. A revised edition was published a few months ago by J. W. Disturnell, Cooper Institute, New York.—Price $2.

☞ A lady who read of the extensive manufacture of odometers, to tell how far a carriage had been run, said she wished some Coanecticut genius would invent an instrument to tell how far husbands had been in the evening when they just step down to the post-office.

"Mr. late maJ and Bvtlcolaag

Was the address on a letter lately received at Washington, intended for a gentleman whose title is:

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign rountries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any questions as to prepayment, by this simple criterion.

Registering Foreign Letters.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed mails. Letters to Canada can be registered, but not to Newfoundland, or Prince Edward's Island. Postmasters will, therefore decline to register letters addressed to other foreign countries.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany" on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to roting all foreign letters.

Our Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provides that each country shall levy and collect its postage only, on newspapers, at the rote of two cents each, whether they are sent or received. Hence, newspapers received in this country from Great Britain come prepaid the British postage only, and postmasters must be particular, in all cases, to collect the United States charge of two cents on their delivery.

Canadian Correspondence.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to and from Canada is 10 cents per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian P. O. Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters, (including those to foreign countries when prepaid,) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or, (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rote of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is 1 cent.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United Stotes is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Dagnerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rote as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

Postage on Daily Papers to snbscribers when prepaid quarterly or yearly in advance, either at the mailing office or office of delivery, per quarter, (three months)..... 35 cents.
Six times per week, per quarter, (8 mos.). 80 "
For Tri-Weekly, " " .. 15 "
For Semi-Weekly, " " .. 10 "
For Weekly, " " .. 5 "

Weekly Newspapers (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actnal subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

Postage per Quarter (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on Newspapers and Periodicals issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the U. S.:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz..... 6 cts.
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.. 12 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.. 18 "
Monthly, not over 4 oz..... 8 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 6 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 9 "
Quarterly, not over 4 oz..... 1 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 2 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 3 "

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the postmaster must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, any four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one-quarter and a third, one-quarter and two-third s, &c. The law only requires that at least one-q narter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one qu arter and one year can therefore be prepaid at prop ortionate rates.

Publishers of Newspapers and Periodicals may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actnal subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Post Office Blanks.

District No. 1—Supplies blanks for the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Dakotah, Kansas, Nebraska, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico. When the postages collected at an office amount to $100 a year, the name of the postmaster and of his office will be printed on the post bills. When the postmaster's compensation exceeds $12 50 a quarter, the postmaster is entitled to wrapping paper and twine, at the above agencies.

Applications for blank registers of arrival and departure of the mails must be made direct to the "Contract Office, Inspection Division, P. O. Dept." For special instructions, to the First Assistant Post master General.

All postmasters whose rompensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

He must enclose it in a "Registered Package Envelope," directed to the Postmaster at the first Distributing Post Office on the route, and also send the Return Registered Letter Bill in a common envelope to the same Postmaster by same mail—just the same as if the letter were for delivery at the Distributing Post Office.

The limit of payment to Spain, Portugal and Gibraltar, is Behobja; to Servia (except Belgrade,) Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria," the frontier of Turkey and Austria; to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries via Suez, the seaports of the Indies, or of the sea of China to which the English packete ply; and to places beyond seas, other than those desiguated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of destination.

6. IN THE MAILS TO PRUSSIA, OR TO BELGIUM.—Letters in the United Stotes and Prussian closed mails, and in the mails exchanged with Belgium, are charged with single rote of postage if not exceeding half an ounce in weight; double rate if exceeding half an ounce, but not exceeding an ounce; quadruple rate if exceeding an ounce, hnt not exceeding two ounces; and so on, for greater weights, charging two rates for every ounce or fractional part of an ounce over the first ounce. As this scale of progression differs from that followed in respect to domestic letters, great care is required to prevent mistakes.

4. IN THE MAILS TO BREMEN, OR TO HAMBURG, &C;—Letters addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Hamburg; and lettere addressed to the British North American Provinces, are roted in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an

The Post Office in "Colony Times."

Mr. FRANK H. NORTON, the Librarian of the Brooklyn Mercantile Library Association, has lately published a limited edition of the "Journal of Hugh Finlay, Surveyor of the Post Roads on the Continent of North America, during his Survey of the Post Offices between Falmouth and Casco Bay in the Province of Massachusetts and Savannah in Georgia; begun the 13th September, 1773, and ended 25th June, 1774." The manuscript of the Journal, in Mr. Finlay's handwriting, was obtained by Mr. Norton at the sale of the effects of a Mr. John Hawkins, an Englishman, who brought it with him from England in 1854, and Mr. Norton, in printing it, has adhered strictly to the original. It is a valuable and interesting addition to the history of the Post Office in this country, as is also the Introdnction, by Mr. Norton, which contains copies of many curious laws and documents relating to Colonial postal matters. Mr. Finlay was, on the 25th of February, 1774, appointed "Depnty Postmaster General in North America, in the room of Dr. Franklin, removed;" and Mr. Norton, by certain internal evidence in the "Jonrnal," and other facts, is "forced to the conclusion that the sending of Finley to America was the preliminary step in the determined and afterwards successful effort to deprive Franklin of his position, which the emissary afterwards received as the reward for his services." We shall hereafter make some extracts from the Introdnction, and give below some portions of the "Journal:"

MR. FINLAY'S APPOINTMENT.

"In December, 1772, the Right Honorable Francis Baron Le Despencer, and the Right Honorable Henry Frederick Thyne, His Majesty's Postmaster General, appointed me to be Surveyor of Post Roads on the Continent of North America; in the month of March following, I was commanded to embark for New York, to be instructed in my duty as Surveyor by the resident Depnty General there.

"I arrived at New York in April; Mr. Foxcroft was then in Virginia: without waiting his return I proceeded to Canada in consequence of leave obtained in England, and arrived at Quebec on the last of the month.

"During my stay there I received orders from Mr. Foxcroft to hold myself in readiness to enter on service in September, by beginning the survey in exploring the uninhabited country between the most southerly settlements on the River Chendiere, in Canada, and the most northerly habitations on the River of Kennebeck, in the Government of Massachusetts Bay."

In pursuance of these instructions, Mr. Finlay left Quebec on the 13th of September. At a point about 53 miles southeast of Quebec he was met by the Indian guides he had engaged for the journey—also by two army officers—and

"On the 15th our little party, eleven in number, embarked in three birch canoes, with twenty days allowance of pork, flower and bisket, depending on our fusils and fish hooks for delicacys."

On the 30th September, after a toilsome journey through the "uninhabited country" he had been instructed to survey, Mr. Finlay arrived at "Falmouth, in Casco Bay," concerning the post office at which place he reports as follows:

"At the Post Office at Falmouth, in Casco Bay, 2d October, 1773.

"Mr. Child the deputy there represents, that no allowance has been made to him in lieu of the liberty of franking which was taken from him, and he got the promise of an equivalent,—he says that he advis'd the late Controller that he valued his postage at 40s. Str. per ann.

"He further represents that the employment is very troublesome to him, and of no manner of advantage, nay that it is a loss to him, for he cannot withstand the earnest solicitations of indigent people who have letters by the post, he delivers them, and never receives payment.

"Every person who looks for a letter or newspaper freely enters his house, be it post day or not; he cannot afford to set apart a room in his house as an office; he is continually disturb'd in his family, he therefor begs that some other person may be appointed in his stead, unless an office is allowed him.

"As naval officer, he gives dayly attendance at the Custom house, under that roof there is a small room to lett, which wou'd be a commodious office for him and convenient for the Publick.

"The people of Falmouth know Mr. Child, they wish he may continue to be Postmaster, as he is a careful man, and they are sensible of the advantage of a regular communication with the other parts on the continent."

The next office visited was

"At Portsmouth in New Hampshire, 5th October. Eleazer Russell, Dep.

"His office is small and looks mean, his books are in good form and up to this day; he is a careful regular officer, he understands his business and seems to have the interest of the office at heart.

"The Post from the Westward, that is the mails from Virginia, Maryland, Pensylvania, Jersey, New York and Boston arrive at his office at 11 o'clock in good weather—in winter after a fall of snow, or heavy rain, he seldom arrives before ten o'clock at night, when the wind blows hard from certain points, he is detained at the ferry at Newbury Port, for there's no passing there in a high wind.

"One Stavers some years ago began to drive a stage coach between Portsmouth and Boston; his driver hurt the office very much by carrying letters, and they were so artful that the post master con'd not detect them; it was therefore judged proper to take this man into the pay of the office, and to give two mails weekly between Boston and Portsmouth. This was of no disadvantage to the Post office because the mails brought to the stage coach did rather more then pay £10 str. Staver's yearly salary.

"At this day there's many stages between this place and Boston, and they hurt the office much.

"Mr. Russell says that the drivers cannot be detected, they have small sham bundles with each letter or they are given to the Passengers in the coach, who will without hesitation say that they are letters of recommendation which they carry.

"Mr. Russell advises to keep Stavers in pay because the people have been so long accustomed to have two mails weekly, the Publick would raise a clamour were one taken away, and as Staver's salary is paid from the amount of the letters he brings to the office, it is best to let things remain as they are for the present."

On Sunday, Oct. 10, Mr. Finlay arriveda at

"Newbury (22 miles) Bulkeley Emerson, Depy.

"Monday 11th.—Examined the books, they were in form and up to the day: he has no office, but receives and dellvers letters in his shop, he is a bookseller. He seems to be a stayed, sober man. * * * *

"Mr. Emerson thinks that the want of Postborns is a loss to the office, for by warning given by the horn many letters wou'd go by Post which are now sent by other opportunity's—the Post shou'd blow before the hour of shutting, and in passing on his way many letters wou'd be delivor'd to him."

On the same day Mr. Finlay visited "Ipswitch, James Foster Depy," who had "gone to the country," and the Surveyor proceeded to

"Salem, Edward Norice, Depy.

"Octeber 11th.—His books were not in good order, he follows the form, but they are dirty and not brought up regularly; he understands the business of a depnty. The office is kept in a small mean looking place. He teaches writing. He has no commission to act, he took charge of the office at the death of his father; he reports that every other day the stage coach goes for Boston, the driver take many letters, so that but few are forwarded by Post to or from his office. If an information were lodged (but an informer wou'd get tar'd and feather'd) no jury wou'd find the fact; it is deemed necessary to hinder all acts of Parliament from taking effect in America. They are they say to be governed by laws of their own framing and no other.

"While Mr. Norrice was making up his accounts I went down the 12th, four miles, to

"Marblehead, Woodward Abrahams, Deputy

"He was from home. * * * * In passing thro' the street on my way back to Salem, I met Mr. Abrahams on his return from the country. * * * He appears to be an intelligent man; he has an employment in the Customs, and keeps the Post Office where he does Custom House business.

"Noble the driver cannot go down to Marblehead at present. The small-pox is in Salem, and was he to go dawn with the mail he won'd he oblig'd to undergo the ceremony of smoaking, that is, to be fumigated with brimstone; as he is of a weakly constitution he cannot submit to it, therefore he leaves the Marblehead bag to take its chance of a conveyance; opportunitys happen once or twice a day, yet it sometimes lies for days at Salem—the people in Marblehead complain of this.

"During the stay I made in Boston, I was introduc'd to some of the principal people in town. I got information respecting the office, I learnt their complaints and heard their proposals for obviating all cause of discontent. * * *

"Mr. Hubbard receives the mails from the Westward, in the summer about 6 o'clock in the evening of Saturday, in winter the arrival of the Post is very uncertain, it is sometimes late on Sunday when snow, and high winds, with floating ice detains him at the different ferrys. He says, that the arrival of the post sooner than six o'clock on Saturday evening cannot benefit the trading body in Boston, as they have until Monday at two o'clock to answer their letters.

"The merchants nevertheless wish to have the arrival of the mails fix'd to 12 o'clock on Saturdays because if the fix'd and customary time is twelve, he may surely get in by the evening in bad weather and of course our letters will be deliver'd to us on Saturday night, at present six is the hour, but it is sometimes so late ere the Post arrives that we cannot get our letters out of the office until Sunday evening—for Mr. Hubbard's rule is to keep the office shut until sunset on Sunday. * * *

"Complaints are made of the stupidity of the man who attends the office at Boston. Mr. Hubbard is not blam'd in anything except for not employing a sharp lively fellow where expedition is always look'd for. There's no runner employed at this office; one wou'd be useful. The riders have no Post horns."

"The road is good tho' a little rocky in some places. John Carter is Deputy here, he is a printor, seemingly an active sensible man: he has had charge of the office two years.

"26th.—At the Post-office—or rather the printing office; for there's no apartment appropriated for the recie't and delivery of letters, tho' they are kept lock'd up." * * *

"Left Providence the 27th and the 28th arriv'd at

New Port, Thomas Vernon, Depy.

* * * * * "He says that theres two Post offices in New Port, the King's and Mumfords, [one of the stage drivers between Boston and New Port] and that the revenue of the last is the greatest. * * * It is common for people who expect letters by Post finding none at the Post office to say 'well there must be letters we'll find them at Mumfords.' It is next to impossible to put a stop to this practice in the present universal opposition to everything connected with Great Britain. Were any Deputy Post Master to do his duty, and make a stir in such matter, he would draw on himself the odium of his neighbours and be mark'd as the friend of Slavery and oppression and a declar'd enemy to America!" * * * * *

"7th November.—Got to the ferry at 9 o'clock in the morning and passed the River Thamee a mile wide to

"New London.

"The ferry is very well attended, it is not difficult—they grumble at being oblig'd to carry the Post over when it is dark, or when it rains or blows, they seem much inclined to refuse the service but they fear the consequence.

"8th.—Visited John S. Miller, the Depnty, he keeps his office in a room hir'd on purpose in the very centre of the town. He is a young man who talks sensibly of Post Office matters, and who seems to be a Post Master in his heart. His office is neat, his books fair and up, his papers are in order and everything is in due form. One bad custom has crept in at New London, the people in Mr. Chews time (the former Post Master) had free access at all times to the office; Mr. Miller has attempted to break this custom, but he finds he cannot without quarrelling with his friends." [Although the last sentence was written ninety-four years ago, there seems something about it very suggestive of modern times!—ED. U. S. MAIL.]

On the way to New Haven, Mr. Finlay makes this note: "Many people ask'd me if I had not met the Post driving some oxen; it seems he had agreed to bring some along with him." On the 12th he arrived at who complained bitterly of the Post riders, who, he says,

* * * "come loaded with bundles, packages, boxes, canisters, &c.—every package has a letter affixed to it, which the rider claims as his own property and perquisite; nay sometimes a small bundle of chips, straw or old paper accompanys a sealed packet or large letter, and the riders insist that such letters are exempted from postage.

"The riders have told Mr. Kilby that the Devil might ride for them if there way letters and packets were to be taken from them. * * * The portmanteaus seldom come locked; the consequence is that the riders stuff them with bundles of shoes, stockings, canisters, money or any thing they got to carry, which tears the Portmanteaus and ruins the lettere to pieces—this should be prevented by locking the mails."

At Norwalk, where "Mr. Belding" was Post Master, the same complaint was made in regard to the post-riders, who seem to have kept a sharp lookont for "perquisites" of all sorts. Mr. Finlay sums up on this point as follows:

"In short, I find that it is the constant practice of all the riders between New York and Boston to defraud the Revenue as much as they can in pocketing the postage of all way letters. Every Depnty Post Master complains against them for this practice, and for their shameful tardiness; likewise for the barefaced custom of making pack beasts of the horses which carry His Majesty's Mails.

"Every Post Master making complaint, or giving official information, begs that his name may never be mention'd as having made any of those representations."

On the 13th November, the Surveyor reached

"New York,

"Where the General Post Office is kept under the care of John Antill, acting for Alexander Colden Esq., the Deputy Post Master." * * *

"The hooks in this office are regularly kept, and the quarterly accounts regularly delivered to the comptroller.

"Great dispatch is given to the different riders, who are punctually sent off at the stated hours.

"Soon after the arrival of a mail the letters are quickly deliver'd by a runner always in time for answers to be return'd in course; this regulation gives much satisfaction to the public.

"There's some matters respecting the management of this office, and attendance given, which Mr. Foxcroft finds great fault with. As he is on the spot, he will check the acting Post Master and his clerk, and put everything on a proper footing." * * * * *

"POST DAYS AT NEW YORK.

"Monday.—A mail from Philad'a arrives at 8 and goes out at 10 in the morning, very regularly.

"At 12 the Boston Post by way of New Haven, New London, Rhode Island and Providence is dispatched. This is called the lower road.

"Tuesday.—The Quebec Post by way of Albany arrives at 4 o'clock P. M., he is very regular.

"Wednesday.—The Boston Mail by wey of Hartford called the upper road, is irregular in his arrivals for reasons assigned in this Journal under the Boston head, but in common he arrives between 5 in the evening and 10 at night.

"The Albany Post which carrys the Canadian Mails is sent of at 11 A. M. A mail arrives from Philadelphia at 10 and the Post returns at 12. The Packet Mail [for Europe] is made up and dispatched from this office the first Wednesday of every month at 12 o'clock at night.

"Thursday.—The Post for Boston by New Haven, Hartford and Springfield, called the upper road is sent off at noon.

"Friday.—The Post from Philadelphia arrives at 11 o'clock A. M. and returns at one o'clock.

"Saturday.—A Post from Boston by the lower road arrives between 5 and 10 at night, sometimes it is Sunday, for reasons assign'd under the Boston head."

From New York Mr. Finlay went by sea to "Charles Town in So. Carolina," where he found the post office kept "in a room in the most frequented coffee house in the most public part of the town;" and from thence he proceeded on a tour through some of the southern colonies—whither we should be glad to accompany him, did not lack of space forbid.

The "Journal," as published by Mr. Norton, is handsomely printed in quarto on tinted paper, and is embellished with two maps from Mr. Finlay's original drawings. As no doubt many of our readers would be glad to obtain copies of this interesting work, we would inform them that a few can yet be obtained by addressing Mr. FRANK H. NORTON, Librarian, Mercantile Library, Brooklyn, N.Y. The price is $10 per copy.

* Then, as well as Franklin, "Deputy Postmaster General."

Marking and Rating Stamps.

Editor U. S. Mail:—As the history of those unobtrusive but useful tools, hand stamps for marking and rating letters in post offices, has, I believe, not yet been written, I propose herein to give a few items, which may perhaps be of interest.

In days long syne—that is to say, perhaps forty years ago, prior to the burning of the old post office and patent office building in Washington, December 15, 1836—the Post Office Department was in the habit of furnishing certain offices with stamps made of brass. These were made by Wm. J. Stone; price, $15 for an office stamp.

About thirty years ago, Benjamin Chambers, an ingenious engraver of Washington city, began to make stamps of steel, and furnished them to the Department for some years. He invented ingenious machinery to aid him, made good stamps and received good prices. He made two qualities of office stamps at $10 and $15; rating stamps, 50 to 60 cents, and had the entire work for fourteen years at these prices, when other parties began to look after the stamp business, and he then made some little improvements and obtained a contract for four years, at $12. The first contract for stamps made by the Department was during Mr. Wickliffe's term of office as Postmaster General.

About the year 1850, or eighteen years ago, necessity, which is ever the parent of invention, was the means of introducing a much cheaper stamp to the notice of the Department and the public; and had it not been for this the Department would probably even now be paying much higher prices for stamps than it is paying. In that year, E. S. Zevely, then Postmaster at Pleasant Grove, Allegany county, Maryland, and engaged in teaching school, who had previously been a printer, editor and amateur engraver, after supplying his own office with stamps, conceived the idea of supplying others also. He was the first person who ever exhibited specimens of wooden post office stamps in the Post Office Department—which were approved, and an order obtained—at prices, however, which experience has since shown, were too low—only $1 for an office stamp, with dates, &c. These stamps have since been improved and largely manufactured; and wherever used with any sort of care and judgment, have given satisfaction, even in large offices.

At his solicitation the Department regulations as to furnishing stamps have been repeatedly modified, so that now all offices collecting, gross, even $50 or more a year, can procure stamps from the Department without cost to themselves—thus conferring a favor upon thousands of postmasters, amounting in the aggregate to thousands of dollars. And the Department itself has been benefitted to the amount of thousands of dollars, while the manufacturer (who has been a sort of post office benefactor), like many other pioneers, has not been adequately repaid for his years of toil and care. His idea has ever been—and in this he has been sustained by various officers of the Department—that ALL offices should be supplied with stamps, as with blanks and other matters, so soon as established. Not many years ago an office had to be worth $300 a year before being entitled to receive stamps free from the Department.

The late Major S. R. Hobbie, of the Post Office Department, was a warm friend of wooden stamps, and in an official report of his visit to Europe, on Department business, made special mention of the wooden stamps used in England, and recommended their introduction for various reasons—among the rest, not only on account of their cheapness, but from the fact that stamping with wooden stamps can be more rapidly and effectually done than with a metal stamp, since two or three impressions can be made with one inking, &c.

Hand stamps continue to be exclusively used in post offices, notwithstanding that various ingenious self-inking patent stamps and stamping machines have been from time to time brought to the notice of the Department, and tested in various ways. Practically these improvements do not seem to be available in post offices.

In the London post office wooden stamps have been used, an engraver being employed in the establishment, and this might be adopted with advantage in our largest cities.

The Department now lets the contract for stamps for four years to the lowest bidder, but the time will doubtless come when a stamp maker will be a salaried officer in the Department, located in the Department building, &c.

Within the last twelve years contracts have been twice awarded to parties in New York, to Messrs. Edmund Hoole and Fairbanks & Co.; at present the contractors are Messrs. Chambers, Jr., of Washington city, and Zevely, of Cumberland, Maryland

Editor U. S. Mail:—In the September number of your paper I was pleased to see an article under the above caption, by H. W., recommending that all newspapers, &c., passing through the mails, shall be prepaid by stamps.

He says, "Let the rule be predominant, that all and everything, passing through the mails, must be prepaid by stamps. Let the rate of newspaper postage be established by weight, and not by numbers; reduce it to as low a standard as may be thought proper and just; have newspaper stamps, and stamped newspaper wrappers, of such denominations that all different demands may be supplied."

He thinks that publishers of newspapers would at first oppose such a change, but I do not think so; I have been a newspaper publisher fifteen years, and have always desired that publishers of newspapers, &c., should be compelled to prepay postage on their prints, as it would be many a dollar saved in the pockets of publishers, for a publisher sometimes receives a letter begging him to send his paper to a certain address, and promising that the pay will be forwarded in a very short time. Some of these letters he listens to and sends the paper, and often never gets the promised dimes; but if he had to prepay postage on his paper he would be very careful not to send any paper until he was paid for it.

I have also been assistant postmaster and postmaster for two years, and I agree with H. W. that no matter how careful a postmaster may be he will certainly lose some money that should have been collected for newspaper postage, which, if he charges to himself, as he has sworn to do, is gone from him and his heirs forever; and if he does not charge the same to himself, he defrauds the Department, and should be kicked out of office. I, for one, am in favor of having all mail matter prepaid by stamps.

I now change the subject, Mr. Editor, by asking, Is there no law to compel postmasters to wrap all letters mailed at their offices? Hundreds of letters pass through my office every mail without any wrapper, and by thus being loose in the bags get badly worn, and consumes much valuable time at every separating office through which they pass. I have requested such postmasters to wrap their letters, but they reply that the Regulations only compel them to wrap packages of letters and contend that single letters (or where there is but one letter for a given place), they have the right to throw them in the bags without being wrapped.

I hope there will be a law to compel postmasters to wrap all letters mailed by them.

R. S. G.

Editor U. S. Mail:—The article, "Prepayment by Stamps," in September number of the MAIL, indicates a move in the right direction. The nearer we approach a system of universal prepayment by stamps the better it will be in every respect. For over six years I have made the "Newspaper Postages" an especial part of my business, and I believe have made every reasonable effort, and used due diligence in that branch of the business, and, after my long experience, I can conscientiously recommend the universal prepayment by stamps. I believe all postmasters will agree with me in saying that the entire newspaper postages would not pay for the time and expense appropriated to the collection. In the first place, it would do away with the use of all the blanks and books necessary for keeping the accounts, thereby avoiding a heavy expense to the Government. In the second place, it would save all postage overlooked by careless postmasters; and to postmasters who do charge the postages promptly to themselves, it would save what they lose in various ways too numerous to mention; and, in the third place, it would do away with a large number of extra help now employed in both large and small offices; and another, and that is the reduction of newspaper postage, which could be afforded by effecting these various savings.

M.

Editor U. S. Mail:—The September number of your indispensable "Assistant" contains some thoughts from one H. W., upon the highly important subject of "Prepayment by Stamps," which have very much impressed me, and met my humble but hearty approval.

I am one of the young ones in the Postal Service, and have already noticed the unparalleled improvements made of late years, and am proud of seeing more good work commencing. It is to be hoped that the day is not far distant when no matter, printed or miscellaneous, can enter a mail pouch unprepaid. When such becomes law the revenue will be immensely increased; the temptation to some postmasters to be dishonest will be almost entirely removed; the trouble and liability to mistake in making returns will cease; and, indeed, all will be for the better.

My office is surrounded by a newspaper-reading community, and I have had more perplexing labor in collecting quarterly postages, and in keeping the proper account thereof, than in all the other business pertaining to the office. My prayer is, let us have the prepayment system established immediately.

NEW YORK, NOVEMBER, 1867.

TERMS—One Dollar per year, payable in advance. All communications to be addressed to the Publisher of the UNITED STATES MAIL, New York.

☞ Letters containing remittances for subscriptions or in reference to the business department of this paper should be addressed to "Publisher U. S. Mail," and not to the Editor.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL" [see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866], and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

Special Notice to Subscribers.

Each wrapper inclosing a copy of the MAIL bears a number in addition to the address. This number signifies that tho term for which the subscription is paid expires with the corresponding whole number of the paper. Subscribers will please take this as a notification to forward tho subscription for another year, when due, if they intend to renew. Those whom this number reaches, marked 86 or any lower number, will please remit at once.

Affixing Stamps.

Many inquiries have from time to time reached us from postmasters, as to their duty in regard to affixing stamps on letters, &c., handed to them at the post office, accompanied by the necessary amount of postage in money. The "duty" of a postmaster in regard to this matter is very clear. It is to see that all matter sent from his office, on which prepayment is required, is prepaid by stamps. It is not his duty to prepay such matter himself; that is the business of the person who deposits the matter in the post office, and he should affix the necessary stamps, and not call upon the postmaster or clerks to do so. There are certain circumstances under which it is proper for a postmaster or clerk to affix them, as a matter of common courtesy or charity—as in the case of a woman, a child, a cripple, an aged or very ignorant person; but he is not only not required to do it in ordinary cases, but it is, for various reasons, very desirable that he should not make a practice of doing it. Where it involves a neglect of his regular prescribed duties, it should never be done. Without enlarging further on the subject, we will mention that this practice not long since led to the arrest of two clerks in a post office for a very serious violation of a law relating to the post office.

Postmarking and Sealing Registered Package Envelopes.

Will any thing short of a special dispensation of Divine Providence so clear and strengthen the intellects of some postmasters and their subordinates, as to enable them to comprehend the importance of plainly postmarking, numbering, and sealing Registered Package Envelopes?

We are receiving complaints from all quarters, and we feel it to be our imperative duty to enjoin upon all officials to look to this thing. Why do they fail to do it? With some slight modifications the new system is sure to prove a success, unless thwarted by the culpable carelessness, ignorance, or neglect of its, perhaps, unintentional official enemies. There is something wrong somewhere, these omissions are inexcusable under any aspect, and when and where they occur, the Department should be apprized of it promptly, as soon as discovered, so that the proper remedy may be applied. Of one thing we feel sure, that at offices where these derelictions of duty are tolerated, other, and perhaps greater, wrongs exist—upon the principle that there must be fire where there is a good deal of smoke.

We would suggest to Special Agents the propriety of keeping a record of these erring individuals and their offices.

☞ Mr. J. Willard Crane, of the Post Office Department of Nova Scotia, died suddenly at his residence in Halifax on the 9th of last month (October). Mr. Crane was universally esteemed, and was a great favorite in the Department.

Sundry Post Office Matters.

We have several inquiries respecting box rents. This subject has been so often mentioned in our paper, that we can only refer our correspondents to Chapter XLII. of the Regulations of 1866. It is there very clearly stated that the Department neither owns, erects, nor repairs boxes, but that if erected (at any time previous or hereafter) the rents must be accounted for in the quarterly returns. . . . . We are asked to whom a postmaster must tender his resignation. To the Postmaster General, and the resigning postmaster must wait patiently till his resignation is accepted and his sureties released from their obligations. . . . . A far-west correspondent complains of the irregularity of the overland mails. This is a subject of such general complaint that the Department has ordered an investigation, and we feel assured that the evil will be remedied. . . . . A correspondent inquires what disposition should be made of a letter addressed to box 80, there being but 50 boxes in the office. If the letter is simply addressed to the box number, it is undeliverable and should be sent to the Dead Letter Office, after being held the proper time; but if it bears a name as well as a box number, it should be delivered to the person whose name it bears. . . . . A correspondent asks what the quarterly rent on boxes is, and if a postmaster is in duty bound on the Sabbath to go to the office, &c. There is no fixed rate for the rent of boxes, in some places it is three dollars a quarter, in others six cents, the amount being fixed by the postmaster? a postmaster is not required to open his office on Sunday, unless a mail arrives on that day—see Section 27, Regulations of 1866. . . . . A California subscriber, in renewing his subscription, sends us several notes of fractional currency of the smallest denomination, and seems called upon to apologize, as "they are good for nothing as money in his 'diggings.'" We can assure our California friend, and all others, that any of the issues of the United States Treasury are exchangeable for the U. S. MAIL. . . . . We would cheerfully reply to all questions and complaints respecting salaries, but, as we have several times before stated, it is only the law applicable generally on which we can give advice; but besides this general law, there are circumstances affecting offices individually, which we can know nothing about, unless by a personal investigation, which it is not proper for us to make, except officially. . . . . A noticeable feature of our correspondence the last month is the number of complaints and inquiries respecting mailing letters on the cars. This is allowable, in cases of letters written after the mail has closed; but the privilege is in many instances abused, and letters that are written in ample time to be mailed at the post office are often sent to the railroad station, thus lessening the legitimate business of the post office where they should have been mailed. We do not see, however, in what manner the practice can be stopped. The Department really loses nothing, and whether it would interfere to protect the postmaster, is a question which he himself must have settled.

☞ Some of our subscribers and correspondents omit to name the State in which their post offices are situated. This gives us a great deal of trouble, and in some cases has prevented us entering the subscriber's name on our mailing book, until we have received a second letter from him inquiring for his first, in other cases we have been unable to answer inquiries. If the postmark on a letter is illegible, and the postmaster a recent appointment, we have no clue to guide us. When over you write to a publisher give the name of your post office, county and State; and write them distinctly.

☞ We have not heard, this month, from our valued and welcome correspondent, MONSIEUR TONSON; but as the late fine weather in the region "between Boston and Buffalo" has been particularly favorable for traveling, we do not doubt that Monsieur has largely availed himself of the opportunity, and that his keen insight has presented to him many facts, and his fertile fancy engendered many ideas, of postal interest. We hope he will present them in his own happy style in our next.

☞ We cannot give a special reply to each of the inquiries we receive concerning the numerous gift enterprise and lottery swindlers who send their circulars through the mails; but we will say, once for all that every lottery and gift enterprise in the country is a cheat and a fraud. Should any who have inquired of us in regard to this matter think that we may be mistaken, he can, by investing a few dollars in any of these schemes, find out to a certainty whether we are or not.

DON'T OMIT THE NAME OF THE STATE.—Those Postmasters (and there are too many of them) who omit the name of the State from their registered letters' return bills are perhaps not aware of the trouble and loss of time they inflict on the clerks whose duty it is to return them to "the office from whence they came." The attention of Postmasters is most particularly requested to the subject.

☞ To seal a registered package envelope by the envelope on the tongue only, is slovenly; to neglect to seal it at all is to be culpably careless; to moisten both tongue and flap and see that it is securely closed before being deposited in the pouch is the method adopted by all careful, neat and attentive postmasters and clerks.

Why Do You Go to the Post Office?

The Washington Republican publishes, under the above heading, the following article in regard to the relative merits of the "carrier" and "box" delivery systems. The superiority of the former, when efficiently conducted, over the latter, will yet be acknowledged and appreciated by the public, as we believe it is now by all Post Office officials who have carefully observed the workings of both systems:

There are employed in this city a large number of letter carriers. These men are selected with great care for their honesty, intelligence, temperate and industrious habits. They are appointed and their salaries fixed by the Postmaster General; and are required, in addition to subscribing to the usual oath of office, to execute a bond for $1,000, with good and approved sureties. They make three deliveries of mail matter from house to house, and four collections from the street letter boxes, daily, throughout the entire city, for which services they are forbidden to charge any fees whatever. These deliveries are made as early after the distributions of the mails as practicable, and as early as the number of persons served by each carrier could call at the office and get their mail.

At night, after the last street delivery, they are required to be at the office (carriers' window) to serve those who may call, so that the patrons of this delivery have every advantage that box-holders can have, besides the additional one of having their mails delivered at their homes or places of business several times daily, free of any charge therefor.

They likewise collect from the street letter boxes four times daily—take the letters to the office in time for each mail, and in time for the delivery of the city letters on the next round. Our citizens can, therefore, remain at their business—save time, patience and shoe leather—in the confident assurance that their letters will be promptly delivered to them.

But Jones objects that his mail is too important to be intrusted to a carrier. He prefers to pay $12 a year for a box, and go or send his "confidential boy" for his mail. Now, "confidential boys" are handy things to have about the house; but Jones has never served an apprenticeship in a post office, and whilst he knows his "boy" is trustworthy, he don't know that the cumulative experience of the post office agents is that a very large majority of the losses of letters is traceable to these very reliable "boys."

Besides, Jones does not know that, in the distribution of the mails, carriers' letters are handed directly to them by the distributing clerk, who performs his work in the presence of the office, and hence, if he were disposed, has no opportunity to secrete the letters.

The responsibility is now narrowed down to the carrier for the single district. Knowing this, and the almost certainty of detection should he violate his trust, the consequent loss of place, and fear of punishment, as well as the natural desire to maintain a good name, has he not extraordinary incentives to an honest discharge of duty? "Well, y-e-s," says Jones; "but my father always went to the post office." And so Jones goes; and perhaps all the little Jooses will go, to the third and fourth generations.

"Convince a man against his will,

We suspect there are several Joneses in this city.

POST ROUTE MAPS.—We desire to call attention to the advertisement in this number respecting the Post Route Maps of the New England States, just published by the Department. Every public library and county office in the States therein represented should be supplied with one of these valuable maps, and postmasters should do all in their power to promote their sale.

Registration of Letters.

The following are replies to questions on this subject which we have received from subscribers during the past month:

A. McL., A——, O.—Twenty cents in stamps must be attached to each registered domestic letter, in payment of the registry fee, in addition to the postage. So long as you have the plain instructions of the Department on this or any other postal subject, you need pay no attention to what "some one" tells you he has seen in "some newspaper" in relation to it.

B. C., T——, Mo.—The P. O. clerk at St. Louis is right, and you are wrong. The return bill must be dated at the mailing office, and must bear the same date as the registered letter bill.

J. T., Ft. H——, Wis.—There is no necessity for a postmaster "holding over" registered packages passing through his office, in order to enter them on his "Record of Registered Matter in Transit." If the "Record" is kept in readiness to be used as soon as the pouch is emptied (as it should be), only a few seconds need be spent in entering each package. The fact that the "Record" is stowed away and has to be searched for, the pen mislaid and the ink exhausted, is no excuse for delaying a registered package. These things should always be in readiness, as every pouch may contain one or more registered packages.

J. D. R., P——, Pa.—You are not required to send either return bills, registered letter bills or return receipts to the Department. The return receipts which arrive at your office with registered letters are to be sent by you (after they have been signed by the parties to whom the letters are delivered) to the postmaster at the office where the letters were originally mailed, who will give them to the persons who deposited the letters for registration and mailing.

ILLNESS OF GENERAL SKINNER.—Hon. St. John B. L. Skinner, First Assistant Postmaster General, was attacked early in the past month by a serious and painful illness, which it was feared at one time might terminate fatally. We are glad to be able to say, however, that more favorable symptoms have appeared, and that he is now in a fair way of recovery. We trust he may yet be spared many years to perform the duties of his office as faithfully and efficiently as heretofore.

☞ Postmasters of offices which are entitled to marking stamps are reminded that in order to obtain them it is necessary to make application for them to the First Assistant Postmaster General.

Answers to Correspondents.

Delivery of Mail Matter.—E. W. L., K——, Ind.—On this subject see Chap. VII., Reg. 1866, and MAIL for July last.

Letters Intentionally Underpaid.—C. R. L., F——, N. Y.—Such letters should not be forwarded, but "held for postage, and, if not paid by the mailing party, returned to the Dead Letter Office." See letter of First Assistant P. M. General in MAIL for July last.

Postage on Calico not sent as a Sample.—H. S. W., C——, Mass.—Such matter comes under the class mentioned in Section 245, Laws of 1866, and should be charged with letter postage.

Requisition for Stamps, &c.—S. J., E——, S. C.—Requisition may be made at any time for stamps, but postmasters are expected to order such quantity as, upon a careful estimate, may be deemed a sufficient supply for three months from the date of the order. Sec. 163, Reg. 1866.

Mailing Letters on the Cars.—A. J. P., L——, O., and others.—As it is the duty of Route Agents to receive letters written after the mail has closed (Sec. 470, Reg. 1866), citizens have the right to avail themselves of the privilege thus afforded, but they cannot require postmasters to send such letters to the station.

Postage on Semi-Monthly.—E. E. M., M——, Cal.—The paper you send is not a "religious, temperance, educational, or agricultural paper of small size"—and hence is subject to the regular quarterly rate of six cents. Sec. 202, Reg. 1866.

Postage on Regular Paper for Fraction of a Quarter.—W. A. M., H——, Miss.—Such paper must be charged either with transient postage, or with the full quarterly rate to extend into next quarter, or they may be charged with the proportional quarterly rate and the full rate for the whole of the next quarter. In the last case, as not less than three months' postage is allowed to be collected at quarterly rates, and as a postmaster cannot well enter in his quarterly returns on item which seems to show the receipt of less than three months' quarterly postage, you should enter the whole amount in one quarter.

Canceling the Stamps on Stamped Envelopes.—L. P. W., W— C——, O.—Postage Stamps affixed to letters, &c., and all stamped envelopes, must be immediately and effectually canceled in the office in which they may be deposited for transmission or delivery. If the canceling has been omitted at the mailing office, it must be done at the office of delivery, and the delinquent postmaster reported to the Postmaster General. Secs. 176, 177, Reg. 1866.

Notifying Publishers.—R. C., W——, Ill.—"Postmasters shall notify the publisher of any newspaper, &c., when any subscriber shall refuse to take the same from the office, or shall neglect to call for the same for the period of one month." (Sec. 286, Laws 1866.) This notice may be sent free to the postmaster, to be by him communicated to the publisher. Sec. 392, Reg. 1866.

Postage on "Internal Revenue Record."—J. P. R., B——, O.—This paper is subject to the usual postage, unless lawfully franked.

Filling up Advice of Money Order, &c.—R. K. S., Mt. C——, Ill.—1. Section 537, Reg. 1866, instructs postmasters how to fill up advices, in case of a firm enter the firm's name. 2. Bills of broken National Banks are not taken on deposit.

Postage to Demarara.—T. B., P——, Fla.—Postage to Demarara is charged under Section 270, Reg. 1866, at 10 cents the half oz.

Woolen Goods.—A. O. M., C——, O.—Woolen goods, except bona fide samples (Sec. 222, Laws 1866) and clothing to soldiers (Sec. 223, Laws 1866), are comprised in Section 245, Laws 1866, and subject to letter postage.

Delivery of Paper within the County of Publication.—A. L. C., J— C——, Pa.—A subscriber to a weekly paper may receive the same free if he lives within the county of publication, even though the post office at which he regularly receives his mail matter is without the county. Sec. 228, Reg. 1866.

Postage on Gloves, &c.—C. H. R., P——, Pa.—Read attentively Chapters IV. and XVII. Regulations 1866. Also see answer above.

Salaries.—W. B. B., M——, W.—See Section 28, Laws of 1866.

Directing Wrappers of Letter Packages.—T. C. D., W— H——, Mass.—Wrappers should be plainly directed, with some indelible substance, and not with an ordinary lead pencil. Sec. 94, Reg. 1866.

Crediting Postage Stamps.—J. P., P——, Mich.—Postage stamps are not charged in the General Account, but in the Quarterly Account Current, under Article 21. Sec. 312, Reg. 1866.

Postage on a Large Package of Back Numbers of a Weekly Paper.—J. A. A., S— S——, Tenn.—1st. The limit of weight is four pounds, bound or unbound. (Secs. 213, 220, Laws 1866.) 2d. Such package should have been prepaid. (Sec. 250, Laws 1866.) 3d. Not having been prepaid, you should charge postage at transient rates of 2 cents per four ounces. (Sec. 150, Reg. 1866.)

Box Rents, &c.—J. S. D., S——, Mo.—"Boxes are the property of the postmaster who puts them up, but the revenue thereof must be paid over to the Department." Every postmaster, however, receives this revenue in the form of salary. Chap. XLII., Reg. 1866.

Delivery of Newspapers from England, &c.—W. W. M., P— C——, Utah.—The regulations for carrying into effect the terms of the new Postal Convention with the United Kingdom, provide that newspapers originating in the United Kingdom and addressed to the United States, must be delivered free at the office of destination. See these Regulations in the MAIL for October.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no donbt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any questions as to prepayment by this simple criterion.

Registering Foreign Letters.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hambnrg, or Prussian closed Mails. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick can be registered, but not to Newfoundland or Prince Edward's Island. Letters can he registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labnan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New Mouth Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of twenty-eight cents up to December 31, 1867, and of sixteen cents on and after January 1, 1868. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany," on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

Canadian Correspondence. — Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

Letters addressed to Canada must be mailed to a United States Exchange Office. Letters cannot be sent direct to Post Offices in Canada.

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is ten cents per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian Post Office Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

Collections in Coin.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belginm, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, tho same is to he accepted in lieu of coin. The amonnt to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

Domestic Postages.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Diagrees, photo-types, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

Postage on Daily Papers to subscribers, when prepaid quarterly or yearly in advance, either at the mailing office or office of delivery, per quarter, (three months) ..... 35 cents.
Six times per week, per quarter (3 mos.) 30 "
For Tri-Weekly, " " 15 "
For Semi-Weekly, " " 10 "
For Weekly, " " 5 "

Weekly Newspapers (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

Postage per Quarter (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on Newspapers and Periodicals issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the United States:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz..... 6 cts.
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz. 12 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz. 18 "
Quarterly, not over 4 oz..... 1 "
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz..... 2 "
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz..... 3 "

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the postmaster must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

Publishers of Newspapers and Periodicals may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages, to one address, at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

Newsdealers may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters, unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazines, and periodicals sent to regular subscribers from publishers) intended to go by mail westward from the western boundary of Kansas, or eastward from the eastern boundary of California, must be prepaid by stamps at letter postage rates. Sec. 259, P. O. Laws, Edition of 1866.]

Books, not over four ounces in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 8 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 12 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 16 cts.

Circulars, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 3 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

On Miscellaneous Mailable Matter (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions) the postage to be prepaid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over four oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 4 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 6 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows: "The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter, except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings, or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address, and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

Marking Stamps.

Post Offices, the gross receipts of which are over $1,000 per annum, will be furnished with circular marking and rating stamps of class No. 1; less than $1,000 and over $500, with stamps of Class No. 2; less than $500 and not less than $50, with circular marking stamps of class No. 3, and rating stamps of wood, on application to the Appointment Office.

Postmasters at offices, the gross receipts of which are less than $50 per annum, if they use rating stamps, must obtain the same at their own expense.

Letter balances, upon the like application, are furnished to offices which collect in postages $75 a year.

Every postmaster will be careful never to send a registered letter "direct," when there is a distributing post office between his office and the office to which the letter is directed. He must inclose it in a "Registered Package Envelope," directed to the postmaster at the first distributing post office on the route, and also send the Return Registered Letter Bill in a common envelope to the same postmaster by same mail—just the same as if the letter were for delivery at the distributing post office.

Postmasters at first-class offices will, of course, note the exception to this rule in their case. Fourth paragraph of General Instructions in regard to registering letters.

Post Office Blanks.

District No. 1—Supplies blanks for the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Dakotah, Kansas, Nebraska, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico. Postmasters in either of these States, wanting blanks of any kind should address "First Assistant Postmaster General, Washington, District of Columbia."

District No. 2—Supplies blanks for the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, California and Oregon, Washington Territory and Nevada. Postmasters in either of these States or Territories, wanting blanks, should address "Blank Agent, New York, N. Y."

When the postages collected at an office amount to $100 a year, the name of the postmaster and of his office will be printed on the post bills. When the postmaster's compensation exceeds $12 50 a quarter, the postmaster is entitled to wrapping paper and twine, at the above agencies.

Applications for blank registers of arrival and departure of the mails must be made direct to the "Contract Office, Inspection Division, P. O. Dept." For special instructions, to the First Assistant Postmaster General.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. VIII., NO. 3. NEW YORK, DECEMBER, 1867. WHOLE NO. 87.

REPORT OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.

We give below so much of the Annual Report of the Postmaster Genornl as we are able to find room for this month. We shall make further extracts from it in our next.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT, November 26, 1867.

SIR: The revenues of the department during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1867, were $15,237,026 87, to which should be added amounts drawn from the treasnry under the acts making appropriations for carrying "free mail matter," $900,000, and amounts under the special appropriations for overland mail and marine service between New York and California, $900,000; steamship service between San Francisco, Japan, and China, $41,666 67; and between the United States and Brazil, $250,000 (including $100,000 on account of service performed during the previous fiscal year); for new mail routes, $150,000; and to supply deficiencies, $1,500,000; making the receipts from all sources $19,978,693 54. The expenditures of all kinds, including the foreign mail transportation, and service for which the above special appropriations were made, say $1,191,666 67, during the same period, were $19,235,483 46, showing an excess of receipts over expenditures of $743,210 08.

The ordinary expenses of the department, not including mail transportation provided for by special appropriation, were $18,043,816 79; and the ordinary receipts, including the amount drawn under appropriation for carrying free mail matter, were $16,137,026 87, showing an excess of expenditures of $1,906,789 92, which has been met by the unexpended balances of former appropriations. No appropriation for the past year is therefore needed.

The receipts for postages, as compared with the previous year, show an increase of 6 per cent, and the expenditures an increase of 25 3-10 per cent. The amount of revenue concentrated in the depositories and draft offices was $6,164,728 16; collected by the auditor, $2,197,113 66; retained by postmasters for compensation and office expenses, $6,314,156 55; and remaining in the hands of postmasters, awaiting collection, $561,028 50.

POSTAGE STAMPS AND STAMPED ENVELOPES.

During the year 371,599,605 postage stamps of the value of $11,578,607; 44,563,150 plain stamped envelopes, representing $1,290,588 50; 16,664,750 stamped envelopes bearing printed cards and requests, representing $491,712 50; and 1,857,750 newspaper wrappers, valued at $37,155, were issued—an aggregate value of $13,401,063.

The issue of postage stamps, compared with the previous year, shows an increase of about 6.5 per cent., whilst the issue of stamped envelopes has increased almost 61 per cent. This increase is attributable to the introduction of printing business cards and requests for return if not delivered, without additional cost. The issue of this class of envelopes during the year was increased 106 per cent. over that of 1866.

NEW POSTAGE STAMPS.

Experiments are in progress with a postage stamp printed on embossed paper, which seems to afford good security against fraud. The fibres of the paper being broken, canceling marks almost necessarily penetrate, so that they cannot easily be removed without destroying the stamp. The adhesive properties are also promoted, and other advantages secured which commend the invention to favorable notice.

The number of packages of postage stamps lost in the mails during the year ended June 30, 1867, was nineteen, representing $3,830. The number of packages of stamped envelopes lost during the same period was seven, valued at $1,191 90.

During the year twenty-eight cases of claims on account of robberies by armed forces have been acted on. Twenty-four of these, amounting to $6,064 05, have been allowed, and four, amounting to $383 27, have been disallowed.

CONTRACTS.

There were in the service of the Department on the 30th of June, 1867, 6,376 contractors for the transportation of the mails.

Of mail routes in operation there were 7,743; aggregate length, 203,245 miles; aggregate annual transportation, 78,982,789 miles; aggregate annual cost, $9,336,286; including the compensation of postal railway clerks, route agents, local agents, mail messengers, mail-route messengers and baggage masters in charge of mails, viz.: $1,020,871. The aggregate annual cost was $10,357,157. This service was divided as follows, viz.:

Railroad routes—Length, 34,015 miles; annual transportation, 32,437,900 miles; annual cost, $3,812,600; about 11.75 cents per mile.

Steamboat routes—Length, 15,094 miles; annual transportation, 3,210,740 miles, annual cost, $472,206; about 14.7 cents per mile.

Celerity, certainty and security routes—Length, 153,136 miles; annual transportation, 43,334,149 miles; annual cost, $5,051,480; about 11.65 cents per mile.

The length of routes was increased over the preceding year 22,324 miles; the annual transportation, 7,143,875 miles, and cost $1,705,812; to which add increased cost for railway postal clerks, route, local and other agents, $241,161, makes an aggregate of $1,946,973.

OVERLAND AND TERRITORIAL MAILS.

No changes have been made in the overland California mail since the last annual report, at which time the department was buying daily service from the ends of the railroad, by both the Smoky Hill and Platte routes, as far as Denver, where the lines united and formed the single day route via Salt Lake City and Virginia City to the Central Pacific Railroad connection.

During the spring and summer months the complaints as to the manner in which the service was being performed, and the great delay in the arrival of mail from the east at Denver and Salt Lake, were more numerous and pressing than at any time since the present route has been in operation. It was charged that the Indian troubles, complained of by the contractor and given by his agents as an excuse for non-performance of service, were a pretence, and that there was no reason why the mails should not be conveyed regularly and within schedule time. The official reports, however, of General Sherman and other officers of the army, referred by the Secretary of War to this department, proved conclusively that the most serious troubles did exist on the plains, and that there was no safety for either passengers or mails except under ample military escort, which could not be furnished daily. A special agent of the department, lately sent over the route for the express purpose of reporting as to the manner in which the service had been performed during the summer, and also as to its present condition, has, under date of November 4, 1867, made his report, which is accompanied by the affidavit of the postmasters at the principal offices on the route, and also by the statements of several officers commanding military stations on the line. The burden of this proof is summed up as well, perhaps, in the affidavit of the postmaster at Denver as in any of the other papers submitted. He says: "On that portion of the route from Denver to Omaha City, or terminus of railroad, Indian troubles of a serious nature commenced as early as February 16, and, notwithstanding the contractor, supported by the military, put forth every effort in his power to clear the road and keep it open, no mail was received at this office over that route from February 23 to March 2. During the month of March our registers show eighteen failures. From June 8 to September 1 regular trips were made on alternate days, and from that date to the present we have had daily service. I am reliably informed that the delay was, in many instances, caused by loss of stock driven off by hostile Indians, at points where it was impossible to replace it without prolonged delay. This was more especially the case on the route from Denver to Salt Lake City. Late in the winter the Union Pacific Railroad was blockaded by snow, followed soon by high water, which caused another delay of three weeks and the diversion of the mail from the Platte to the Smoky Hill line. From the best information I can obtain the causes of all of the detentions and irregularities complained of were unavoidable on the part of the contractor, and of such a character as to have precluded the possibility of any man or set of men making regular trips over that route, unless securely guarded by an armed force of considerable magnitude." From papers submitted by the contractor to the inspection division, it would appear that from April 1 to August 15, 1867, the Indians robbed him of three hundred and fifty head of stage stock; burned twelve of his stage stations, with large amounts of grain and hay, destroyed three coaches and express wagons, severely wounded several of his passengers, and killed outright thirteen of his most reliable employes.

The Santa Fe route, although more fortunate than the overland, was also besieged by Indians during the greater part of the summer. Several of the stations were robbed of their stock, which, of course, seriously delayed the transmission of mail matter. At this date, however, the route is working well, and the registers show that the service is being performed even within the lately shortened schedule time, which gives great satisfaction to the residents of the entire Territory.

A daily mail having been ordered on the route from Salt Lake to The Dalles, Washington Territory, letters and papers from the east for Northern Oregon and Washington are distributed so as to be forwarded by that line.

POST ROUTE MAPS.

These maps, the general outline of which was suggested by and inaugurated under the administration of Postmaster General Blair, are intended to embrace a system to exhibit of the postal service of the United States, on a plan adapted to keep up with the periodical changes and gradual improvement of the service.

It is needless to do more than refer to the advantages of this graphic mode of representation, for a general view of mail connections, over the tedious reference to books of entry.

Owing to the vast extent of our national domain, and the great number of post offices and routes to be shown, with the requisite amount of detail, each maps can only be compiled in successive groups of States.

During the past year, a map of the mail service in the States of New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, with parts of New York and Maine, has been completed by the topographer, and distributed to postmasters and other agents of the Department, as also to officers in other branches of the public service, and has already secured numerous testimonials to the usefulness of such an official production.

These first demands having been met, copies of the map are for sale from the Department (Second Assistant Postmaster General's Bureau) and from agents in Boston, Portland, New York and Philadelphia.

The next in the series, the map of the State of New York and its immediate connections, is nearly completed by the engraver, and will be issued this winter; and the third map, embracing the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia, being well advanced, will follow soon after.

MAIL BAGS, LOCKS AND KEYS.

A table is annexed showing the number, description and cost of mail bags, locks and keys, purchased during the year; the amount expended for mail bags being $80,440, which, though an excess of $28,812 50 over the expenditure of the previous year, is less by $11,275 86 than that of the year next preceding.

RAILWAY POSTAL SERVICE.

There are now in operation in the United States eighteen railway postal routes, extending in the aggregate over four thousand four hundred and thirty-five miles, upon eight hundred and seventy-nine miles of which twice daily service is performed, making a total equal to five thousand three hundred and fourteen miles of railway postal service daily each way. There are employed on this service one hundred and sixty men, as head clerks and clerks, at a cost of one hundred and eighty-seven thousand nine hundred dollars per annum. It would require to perform this same service by route agents, in the ordinary way, eighty-six men, at salaries of ten hundred and eighty dollars per annum, the compensation now allowed to route agents on first-class routes, making the cost ninety-two thousand eight hundred and eighty dollars per annum. Thus:

160 postal clerks cost	$187,990 00
86 route agents would cost	92,880 00
Increased cost of postal clerks over route agents	$95,029 00

But, in making this statement, it is proper to state that the reduction of clerical force in distributing and other large post offices incident to the introduction of the railway postal service should be taken into consideration. It is impossible to give the exact number of clerks saved to those offices; but it is certain that in the force of the Chicago, Cairo, St. Joseph, Buffalo, Washington, Richmond, Memphis, and Chattanooga offices, an aggregate reduction of thirty men has been made; and it is fair to assume that, without the railway postal service, these same offices, instead of decreasing, would have increased their force by the addition of at least thirty. The saving may therefore be set down at sixty men, at an average compensation of $1,000 per annum each, say $60,000 per annum, thus reducing the balance against the railway postal service, as at present in operation and organized, to about $35,000 per annum.

The reduction of labor in the New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore offices must, of course, be as much in proportion as the reduction of labor in the offices first mentioned; but, leaving out New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, and assuming that the railway postal service on these 5,000 miles is costing $35,000 per annum, or an average of $7 per mile over the ordinary or old route agent service, the fact that twelve, twenty-four, and often forty-eight hours are saved in the transmission of all the mails passing over these 5,000 miles would seem sufficient to justify the increased expenditure.

STATISTICS.

The aggregate amount of postage upon the correspondence exchanged with foreign countries was $2,441,242 52, an increase of $152,023 22 over the previous year. Of this amount $1,969,605 55 accrued on the correspondence exchanged in the mails with Great Britain, France, Prussia, Bremen, Hamburg and Belgium; $348,303 88 on correspondence exchanged with the British North American provinces, and $123,333 09 on mails transmitted to and from the West Indies, Mexico, Central and South America, the Sandwich Islands, Japan and China. The United States portion of the postage on correspondence exchanged with Great Britain and the continent of Europe amounted to $871,223 45; with the British North American provinces, $196,848 13; and with the West Indies, &c., $123,333 09, making the total United States postages on foreign mails $1,191,404 67.

The number of letters exchanged with foreign countries (exclusive of the British North American provinces) was 10,298,234, of which 5,312,401 were sent from, and 4,985,833 received in the United States. Of this number 9,442,111 were exchanged with European countries, an increase of 877,264 as compared with the previous year. The estimated number exchanged with the British provinces was 2,806,000, making a total of over 13,100,000 letters exchanged in the mails with foreign countries.

The number of newspapers sent to foreign countries (exclusive of the British North American provinces) was 2,956,599, and the number received 1,871,710, making a total of 4,828,482. Of this number 4,418,482 were exchanged with European countries. As no postage accounts are kept with the British provinces, the number of newspapers exchanged between the United States and these provinces cannot be stated, even approximately, although it is known to have been large.

The trans-Atlantic steamship lines employed in the service of foreign governments conveyed mails the postage on which amounted to $1,091,189 55, and those employed in the same service by this Department conveyed mails the postage on which amounted to $878,416.

MAIL STEAMSHIP SERVICE TO JAPAN AND CHINA.

The mail steamship service between the United States and China, authorized by the act of Congress approved February 17, 1865, was commenced on the 1st of January, 1867, by the departure of the steamship Colorado from San Francisco with the mails for Japan and China, and two additional round trips have been performed between San Francisco, Yokohama and Hong Kong by that steamer, departing from San Francisco on the 3d of April and 4th of July, and delivering return mails at that port on the 15th June and 15th September, respectively. The average duration of the three voyages of the Colorado were as follows, viz:

	Days.	Hours.	Min.
From San Francisco to Yokohama...	22	17	41
From San Francisco to Hong Kong, including detention at Yokohama..	30	11	10
From Yokohama to Hong Kong.....	6	2	48
From Hong Kong to Yokohama.....	7	12	46
From Yokohama to San Francisco...	21	9	0
From Hong Kong to San Francisco, including detention at Yokohama..	30	22	7

The Great Republic and China, built expressly from this service, have been placed upon the line. The Great Republic has just completed her first round voyage, begun at San Francisco September 3, 1867, and ended November 19, 1867, and the China entered on her first voyage from San Francisco on the 14th October, 1867. The contractors expect to have the Japan, the third steamship building for the line, ready for service about the 1st of July, 1868, and the fourth steamship, not yet named, but now on the stocks in a state of forwardness, will likewise be ready for service in January, 1869. They are unable at present to indicate the time of commencing the full monthly service required by the contract.

APPOINTMENTS.

Number discontinued	6,111
Decrease of offices	4,226
Number of post offices in operation on the 30th June, 1866, including suspended offices in the Southern States	29,389
Total number in operation on the 30th June, 1867	25,163
Number of offices subject to appointment by the President	237
Number by the Postmaster General	24,326
Appointments made to fill vacancies by resignation of postmasters	4,065
By removals	3,444
By change of names and sites	135
By death of postmasters	215
By establishment of new offices	1,885
Total number of appointments	9,744
Number of cases acted upon	15,960

A large majority of offices discontinued are in the Southern States, the service at which was suspended by order of the Postmaster General in May, 1861, and were not in operation thereafter, but not regularly discontinued.

These offices were reported by the auditor to the appointment office as having failed to make returns for five years, and their discontinuance recommended as necessary to enable that officer to close the accounts of the late postmasters on the books of his office, and for that reason it was deemed advisable to formally discontinue them.

The free delivery of letters by carriers has been in operation during the past year in forty-seven of the principal cities. The number of carriers employed was 943, at an aggregate compensation of $699,934 34.

This mode of delivery continues to grow in public favor, as is shown by the increase of postage on local matter, the reduction of the number of post office boxes, and the large decrease of advertised letters in several of the cities where the system has been more efficiently conducted. Experience so far justifies the belief that it will supersede the present system of box delivery, increase correspondence, especially in large cities, and not only pay its expenses, but yield a revenue to the Department.

DEAD LETTERS.

The number of letters consigned to the dead letter office during the past fiscal year was 3,619,062 dead domestic letters, partly estimated; 443,786 unmailable letters, chiefly held for non-payment of postage; 179,466 dead letters mailed in foreign countries, and 64,194 letters mailed in the United States, and returned as "dead" from the foreign countries to which they were originally addressed; making a total from all sources of 4,306,508—a decrease of 892,097 letters from the same total as estimated for the previous year.

The whole number of dead letters, of domestic and foreign origin, and returned from the local offices of the United States, was 3,798,528; a decrease of 789,514 as compared with the returns of the previous year; the percentage decrease of such as were of domestic origin being about eighteen, while the decrease of such as were of foreign origin was only four and one-half per cent.

The whole number of unmailable letters was 443,786, a decrease since last report of 94,337. Of the number received, 7,961 letters were directed to places having no mail service.

The letters received were disposed of according to the regulations governing the classes to which they belonged, as follows:

The number of money letters containing sums of one dollar and upwards was 21,365, enclosing $138,365, of which 668, containing $3,574 56, were registered. There were restored to owners 18,577 letters, containing $127,135 43. The remaining letters have been filed, or are held for future disposition.

The number of money letters containing sums less than one dollar was 13,770, enclosing $3,869 24; of these 10,372, containing $3,485 09, were restored to owners.

The amount of money taken from unclaimed letters, filed prior to July 1, 1867, was $19,914 67; which, together with $5,159 20 realized from the sale of waste paper, amounting to $25,073 87, was deposited in the treasury.

The number of letters enclosing bills of exchange, checks, deeds and other papers, classed as "minor" letters, was 21,262, with a nominal value of $5,109,554 48. Of this class, 19,991 letters were restored to owners.

The number of letters enclosing photographs, jewelry and other articles classed as "property" letters, was 49,386, of which 34,892 were restored to owners.

The public sale of property belonging to this class realized a net amount of $435 05.

The number of Congressional and official letters returned to the proper departments was 17,304.

The number of letters containing stamps and articles of small value was 97,059; returned to owners, 86,679.

The number of foreign letters returned unopened to the countries where they originated was 186,189, and the number received from foreign countries was 64,194.

The number of ordinary letters remailed to writers was 1,977,875; of these, 1,421,871, or 84 per cent, were delivered—fully sustaining the policy of the free return of dead letters to their writers.

It thus appears that of the 4,306,508 letters consigned to the dead letter office during the year, there have been restored to owners 1,611,686; filed and held for future disposition, 18,553, and returned to foreign countries, 186,189, leaving a balance of 2,490,080 indicative of the number that were properly or unavoidably destroyed. Of these, about 1,500,000 were worthless, being mostly circulars and gift or lottery advertisements; 256,004 were sent out but not delivered, leaving about one million without signatures, or so written as to be unintelligible.

During the year, 5,469 written applications for lost letters were received. The number found and forwarded to applicants was 1,140; or about twenty per cent. The registered letters found reached the proportion of nearly ninety per cent, while the proportion for ordinary letters was but five per cent. These results indicate the value of registration, on the one part, and, on the other, that applications for letters having no enclosures are useless.

POSTAL MONEY ORDER SYSTEM.

The whole number of money order post offices now in operation is 1,224, of which 458 have been established since the date of the last annual report. This increase has occurred mainly in the Western and Southern States, where the facilities of the system for the transmission of money appear at present to be most needed.

The number of orders issued during the year was 474,406, of the aggregate value of	$9,229,327 72
The number paid was 461,876, of the value of	$8,977,874 71
To which is to be added the amount of orders repaid to purchasers	93 366 02
	9,071,240 73

During the previous fiscal year, ending June 30, 1866, the total amount of orders issued was $3,977,259 23, and of orders paid and repaid $3,903,890 22.

A comparison of these amounts with the corresponding transactions of the last fiscal year, as above exhibited, will show that during the latter period the money order business has been more than doubled.

The average sum for which money orders were issued last year was $19 45, an increase over that of the previous year, which was but $16 32.

The number of duplicate orders was 2,069, of which 1,915 were issued as substitutes for originals lost in the mails or otherwise, 141 were in lieu of orders rendered invalid because not presented for payment until more than one year after date, and 13 to replace orders made invalid in consequence of bearing, contrary to law, more than one endorsement.

The receipts and expenditures for the last fiscal year, as adjusted and stated by the auditor, were as follows, viz:

RECEIPTS

Fees on money orders issued	$70,888 57
Premium received on exchange	1 00
	$70,889 57

EXPENDITURES.

Commissions to postmasters	$49,835 03
Clerk hire	2,948 28
Remittance lost in the mails	3,562 00
Incidental expenses for stationery and fixtures	1,183,65
		44,628 96
Excess of receipts over expenditures		$26,260 61

—Being the gross amount of revenue derived from the transaction of the money order business. It is proper to state that the cost of the blanks used by postmasters, which are furnished by the Department of Public Printing, is not included in the foregoing statement of expenditures.

To forge or counterfeit a money order is made a penal offence by the act of May 17, 1864. But one instance of this kind has happened since the establishment of the system. A late postmaster abstracted, in June last, fifty-two blank money orders, specially prepared and numbered, from the book which he delivered to his successor, filled them up in the usual manner, so that they appeared to have been duly issued on several postmasters for small sums, and forged upon each the signature of the postmaster. Payment of twenty-nine of these forged orders, to the aggregate amount of $1,322, was obtained on presentation. The fraud was speedily detected and the guilty person was recently convicted of the crime of forgery at the United States Court at Cleveland, Ohio, and duly sentenced to three years' imprisonment and hard labor, and to pay a fine of $500.

By existing law a postmaster at a money order office is not authorized to issue an order payable by himself. Hence money order offices cannot at present be established at the stations or sub-post offices in the large cities, although in some instances these stations furnish ordinary postal facilities to a larger population in their vicinity than that of many considerable towns. It is evident that the convenience of residents within the delivery of such stations would be sensibly promoted if they were allowed to purchase and receive payment of money orders at these stations, instead of being compelled, as now, to resort for such facilities to the central post office of the city. The latter would moreover be relieved, to some extent, of a great and constantly increasing pressure of applicants for the purchase and payment of orders. It would also prove useful in the sparsely settled States, where the county town usually has a money order office, through which, under the proposed modification, small debts could readily be paid in any part of the county by means of money orders issued and payable at the post office in the county town, which is habitually visited by residents of the county.

I would therefore recommend that the law be so far modified as to permit a postmaster to issue orders payable at his own office.

MISCELLANEOUS.

It is gratifying to be able to state that notwithstanding the increase of expenses of the Department, growing out of the increase of compensation of clerks, agents, and employes of the Department, and increase in the extent and expense of the mail service throughout the country and on the sea, the disbursements were not only kept within the estimates for 1867, but there remained an unexpended balance of over seven hundred thousand dollars to be applied toward the expenses for the current year. So great is the constant demand for increased mail service by the people of the Territories, and to supply the necessities of the older States, and so important is it to pnt into full operation the service in the States lately involved in the rebellion, that a considerable deficiency is estimated for the year 1869. A more detailed statement of anticipated revenues and expenditures will be found in another part of this report. It cannot be anticipated that the revenues of the Department derived from the sale of stamps and stamped envelopes, and from other sources, independent of specific appropriations, can equal the necessary expenditures of the Department while the service is being constantly increased, at great cost, to meet the wants of the people in sparsely settled Territories. The faster the new Territories are peopled and their material resources developed, the greater will be the postal revenues coming back to reimburse the Department for its outlays. Until the whole country is well settled by a stable, producing, thrifty population, it cannot be assumed, with certainty, that the Post Office Department can become self-sustaining. New channels of postal communication are opening everywhere, and necessary expenses grow faster than legitimate revenue increases. When the waste country becomes better settled, and the facilities for mail transportation increased and cheapened, as they will be in a very few years, the increase of revenues and comparative decrease of carrying expenses will entirely change the relation of the taxes and resources of the Department, and, at the present rates of postage, it will not only be self-sustaining, but furnish no inconsiderable revenue to the government. There is no appropriation of public money which brings back, directly or indirectly, so large a return to the government and the people as that made in aid of the postal service. Only one other department of the government gets back a revenue anywhere near its expenses, in return for the outlays of public money.

I repeat, also, my recommendation that authority be given to appoint a superintendent of the opening and distribution of dead letters.

The subject of connecting the telegraphic system of the country with the postal service has attracted public attention, and it received, to some extent, the consideration of my predecessor. It has recently transpired that the telegraphic system of Great Britain has been put in charge of the British Post Office Department. It is a matter of very great importance, and its propriety and practicability ought to be thoroughly investigated by Congress. The most efficient mode of examination of the subject, in my judgment, would be the appointment of a special commission to inquire into the working of the new arrangement in Great Britain, and into its feasibility in the United States, and to report to Congress for such action as may be wisely taken.

I am compelled again to call attention to the gross frauds perpetrated upon the Department by violations of the franking privilege, in almost all parts of the country. The fac simile franks of different members of Congress are freely used to circulate obscene books and papers, lottery circulars, business cards, &c., and to cover all kinds of business and domestic correspondence of persons not authorized by law to frank mailable matter. Unless something is done speedily by Congress to check this serious mischief, the annual appropriation to cover the transmission of free matter will have to be increased from seven hundred thousand dollars to at least one million of dollars. To avoid the continuance of this serious abuse in the use of the names of members of Congress without their knowledge or consent, I again urge that the law be so changed as to require the written signature of the person exercising the franking privilege upon the matter franked, and, to relieve the heads of departments and bureaus of great labor, that a franking clerk be authorized by law for each department of the government, with the authority to frank all matter pertaining to the department for which he is so appointed.

The commercial enterprises of the people of the United States are carried on to a very large extent by the use of foreign ships. The ocean mail service also is performed to a very great extent by foreign ships. The commercial and postal interests of the country ought to be made aids to each other. We are too dependent upon the enterprises of other peoples in the transaction of our business. Some encouragement ought to be given in some way to our own shipbuilders, and citizens engaged in ocean commerce, to build ships, and buy ships, and own ships, to be used in our own business. It is to be hoped that Congress will relieve labor and shipbuilding materials of taxes and impositions, so that our own ships may be built in our own waters, to bear our commerce and carry our mails. As long as subsidies are paid by other governments to aid in establishing and maintaining lines of ocean steamers to and from European ports, giving them the command of the carrying trade, with comparatively little competition, it is due to the citizens of the United States that like aid should be furnished to American enterprise. This can, in my judgment, be very properly and profitably done by subsidies to lines of steamers already established, or to be established, as a consideration for carrying the ocean mails. Respectfully submitted,

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

To the PRESIDENT.

[OFFICIAL.]

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, November 1, 1867.

Agreeably to notice received from the Bremen Post Department, the single rate of letter postage between the United States and Schleswig-Holstein, by Bremen mail, will hereafter be 15 cents per half ounce, or fraction thereof, prepayment optional.

JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Chief Clerk, P. O. D.

A NEBRASKA POST OFFICE.—In the Far West, where the settlements are thin, it is not possible to establish regular post offices, and therefore a box is affixed to an upright post in the prairie near the traveled road. The post-boy, as he rides along, drops into this box the mail matter for settlers ten miles or more in every direction.—Exchange Paper

It is not necessary to go as far as Nebraska to see such things; but there, there is some excuse for such looseness. By an arrangement between postmasters and the inhabitants in some venerable localities, these boxes are stuck up at cross-roads and elsewhere, in which letters and papers are placed by mail carriers, and they are thus left to the mercy of any dishonest person who comes that way.

People have the right to order their letters put there, and the Department of course is relieved from all responsibility; but the practice is unsafe, and should be discontinued, whether it is inconvenient or not to call at the post office.

UNITED STATES POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

AND

Post Office Assistant.

Established 1860. . . By J. HOLBROOK.
J. GAYLER, ... Editor.

NEW YORK, DECEMBER, 1867.

TERMS—One Dollar per year, payable in advance. All communications to be addressed to the Publisher of the UNITED STATES MAIL, New York.

Subscriptions received at any Post office in the United States.

☞ Letters containing remittances for subscriptions or in reference to the business department of this paper should be addressed to "Publisher U. S. Mail," and not to the Editor.

☞ Our apology for the tardy appearance of the MAIL for this month is to be found in the fact that we were anxious to publish our usual synopsis of the Postmaster General's Report, which, of course, could not be done until after the transmission of the President's Message to Congress.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL" [see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866], and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

Special Notice to Subscribers.

Each wrapper inclosing a copy of the MAIL bears a number in addition to the address. This number signifies that the term for which the subscription is paid expires with the corresponding whole number of the paper. Subscribers will please take this as a notification to forward the subscription for another year, when due, if they intend to renew. Those whom this number reaches, marked 87 or any lower number, will please remit at once.

The Gettysburg Humbug.

"The Gettysburg Asylum Association" publish an advertisement of a lottery or "gift distribution," professedly in aid of an asylum for disabled soldiers, and insert therein a recommendation, signed by Hon. A. W. RANDALL, Postmaster General, that all postmasters should aid the enterprise.

We are authorized by the Postmaster General to say that at the time he was induced to sign this recommendation he believed the enterprise was a praiseworthy one, and intended to aid a noble charity; but that he has become convinced that the scheme has been perverted to fraudulent purposes, and desires to withdraw the recommendation he then made. We will add the advice to postmasters to let this and all other lotteries—charitable or otherwise—severely alone.

The Postmaster General's Report.

On our first page will be found a considerable portion of the Annual Report of the Postmaster General, which shows the affairs of the Department to be in a most gratifying present condition, and progressing encouragingly toward further improvement and efficiency. We have no space at present for extended comment upon the Report, nor is it necessary; but we commend it to the careful attention of all our readers, who will find in it evidence that the management of the postal interests of the country is in hands competent to the task and capable of appreciating its importance as one of the foremost promoters of our national wealth, intelligence and growth.

New Post Office at Suspension Bridge.

The Government has recently purchased a large building at the eastern end of Suspension Bridge, which is to be re-arranged and remodelled for the use of the Treasury and Post Office Departments. The edifice stands on the bank of the Niagara River, and affords a grand panoramic view of the Canadian dominion on the other side. A liberal but judicious appropriation has been made to carry into effect the plans and designs of the supervising architect of the Treasury Department, and the Post Office will soon be in the occupancy of premises admirably adapted to the wants of the community and commensurate with the importance of the locality.

The gallant Major who will preside over this shrine of letters we trust will not feel too proud of his new office. Let him bear his honors meekly, and not be above shaking hands with his old friends as usual.

☞ Postmasters will remember that on and after the FIRST OF JANUARY next the postage on letters to England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales will be reduced to twelve cents per half ounce, or fraction thereof.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO,
December, 1867.

Those who have traveled much through the Atlantic States during the months of October and November, and have given any attention to the weather, must have been surprised at its extraordinary and frequent changes. There has been every variety of temperature, almost, within the scope of the thermometer. Within the cycle of a day it was nothing unusual to pass from summer's heat to winter's cold—from snow-clad hills to sunny valleys, in which, were it not for the hushed music of birds, and the faded and fallen leaves, those emblems of human decay and death, it would scarcely be believed that spring did not reign eternal. In some localities the rains descended to such an extent as to almost inundate the country, while in others not a drop trickled from the celestial reservoirs to moisten the parched landscape that with bared bosom seemingly yearned to give succor to man and beast.

Big streams shrunk to rivulets, and hitherto never failing rivulets dried up. Wells were waterless, and mills stopped operating; for there was not dammed water enough in the whole region to turn even an old-fashioned flutter wheel. There were hills upon which a man could stand and point to "water, water, everywhere," and in the opposite direction to where there was "not a drop to drink."

One day the air would whirl and whistle through space freighted with ice-barbed arrows; the next it would be as mild and delicious as the spicy breeze that blows soft o'er Ceylon's Isle. On terra firma, the highways and byways (not under the control of corporation rings) were buried under a coating of the muddiest of mud or the dustiest of dust, anywhere from two inches to two feet deep. Had such roads existed in early times, when weary pilgrims wandered, staff in hand, from shrine to shrine to pay penance, or perform vows, there would no doubt have been a postponement on account of the weather or a compromise; but in our day it is so common to see "a stick-in-the-mud," or to have "dust thrown in our eyes," that we have grown weary; and if a fellow undertakes to "pad the hoof" from Portland, Maine, to Portland beyond the Rocky Mountains in a given time, and fails to connect, a "cloud of witnesses" could not convince the balance of the world that it was not a "put up" job, for somebody to make a pile out of, no matter if even every limb of the loser were swollen far beyond the compass of small clothes.

I took advantage of all the bright days, however (and there were a good many of them, although the mornings and evenings were gradually creeping closer together, making them shorter and sweeter), to ply my vocation as a general observationist, and to promote as much as possible the usefulness of the new organization (of which I spoke in my last letter), which had honored me with its confidence, and claimed me for its itinerant representative. I saw much which pained me; but I accomplished nothing to increase the popularity of the B. and B. Company, or to enhance the value of the stock.

In the dry districts water was scarcer and more expensive than fluid rye, fluid corn and other burning fluids, and of course its use was very limited; while, in the wet sections, to recommend it was absolutely hazardous (to the subscriber); for the skies wept incessantly, and stimulants were essentially and vitally necessary to strengthen the nerves and stiffen the sinews of the already water-soaked individuals for whose welfare our society was so benevolently inclined to labor. Either the weather, or the election, or both, or something else, entirely upset my calculations, and somewhat ruffled my temper; so, rolling up the records I had made, carefully superscribing the package, and ornamenting it with red ribbon and waxen seals, I stowed it away in my baize carpet-bag, and deeming it discreet to wait for a more suitable season, I smothered my grief and determined to devote the balance of my unoccupied time to watching without warming, and hearing and seeing, without being seen, the various officials who passed before me in form as palpable as age, size and salary could be molded into.

On account of old associations post offices had a right to expect, and they received, the lion's share of my attention—and I would here ask, before I forget it, if there is such a work extant as "Keeping a Post Office Made Easy; or, Post Office-ing Without a Master?" If so I am sure I know some functionaries who have studied it carefully and follow its teachings understandingly. Pray don't give me any credit for sagacity or originality in making this discovery. Happily the number is limited, and it would be miraculous to avoid some mistakes where so many selections are made.

In our country appointment to office is not contingent on high birth or reached by royal roads, but every citizen has the right to seek for official elevation, and ability, intelligence and influence most generally secure it. But in exceptional cases (such as those to which I have alluded) the attainment of the much coveted and zealously struggled for distinction is followed by a gradual collapse of energy, had the successful incumbent in a half comatose state preaches convincingly to himself the Utopian doctrine that mental and physical labor is a humbug, and relies upon luck and his subordinates to see him through; or, devoted to other pursuits, he regards this office only as an additional source of revenue, and delegates others to perform all the duties except wearing the honors and drawing the compensation.

I do not wish to be understood as intimating that capacity and executive ability are the personal property of such an official, which he carries about with him, and that his office suffers for the want of him when he is absent. Not at all. The smallest in size and the greenest in years is his employ may be able to teach him everything, from the "simple copulation of units to the hidden mysteries of fluxions;" but I do think the closer the head of any establishment watches the details of its business, whether he knows it all or not, the more satisfactory are the results. In a Post Office I think this is peculiarly so. Feeling his responsibility, and having a realizing sense of what is expected of him by his superior officers on the one hand and the community at large on the other, the efficient Postmaster manages his office himself, controls his own affairs, and exercises a dignified and wholesome restraint over his subordinates. He keeps up with the current laws and regulations, and carefully and comprehendingly carries them out. He does not stop to question new orders which are issued from time to time as exigencies arise requiring their promulgation and operation. He does not set up his opinion in his limited territory in opposition to the frequent improvements introduced into the system by the Postmaster General and his assistants, which, while they increase its usefulness and facilities, keep a little in advance of its requirements. In short, he has an abiding faith in the combined judgment which originates, regulates and manages these matters at headquarters; and his good sense teaches him to respect measures which have been matured at the expense of much research and calculation, and the occupation of much valuable time.

Rules are laid down by him, order exists, discipline is observed and a mutual respect is established between him and his assistants which shows itself on all occasions. There is a marked difference of deportment between the gentlemen employed in such an office and those in one that figuratively speaking, ruins itself. A careless postmaster makes careless clerks, and careless clerks sooner or later get into trouble, and when they get into trouble they generally stay there a while—at least, such is the impression among as unofficials.

Of course in very large cities, the offices are proportionately large, and it is impossible for postmasters to personally superintend the details of the business, and the necessity devolves upon them of selecting competent gentlemen to assist in the administration of their duties; but in the regions where I have been traveling, quietly, as all old persons should travel, no such necessity exists, and the inclination to live up to the instructions of the Department is not embarrassed by a sufficient amount of business to prevent its gratification.

MON. TONSON.

The Romance of the Post Office.

Editor U. S. Mail:

I see many articles in your paper giving reproof—which is justly needed—speaking of the trials with, and ignorance of, the people—which is justly true—and answering questions, some of which were so laughably simple that I should think your editor's chair would fall to pieces under the mirth generated by their simplicity. THE MAIL, from the necessity of criticising and correcting continually, has the tone of sternness and rigid discipline. Will you accept a little sentiment and romance dashed in just for relief?

There are touching episodes witnessed by the observing post office clerk that cheer and break the wearying routine, and might be acceptable if collected. Through a post office clerk's hands pass the weal and woe of all human hearts and lives. By observing the general run of letters, without curiosity for particular correspondence, they can very soon trace the whole life of persons; and as their passions and interests crop out in their correspondence the clerk attains an instant sympathy with their joys and sorrows. There is something beautiful in being thus trusted unquestioningly by the community. No word on either side, but a look, a sigh, a smile, shows the clerk the language of the missive, and it is tenderly and carefully dispatched.

Not long since an old lady with patient, pale face appeared at the window day after day with eager eye and tone.

"Is there ever a letter for Mrs. McT?" I always looked, although I know there were none.

"Indeed, and sure my son must be sick, and he was a good son to me."

She would turn away and move her fingers as if the Ave-Marias were counting through. Each day that eye and tone grew more eager. At last a letter came from the City Hospital, in the fair, plain handwriting of the Sisters of Charity. I handed down the letter when she called; her eye brightened, but mine did not. She gladly seized it and hurried away. In my heart I bade her good-bye for weeks, since that the night train would bear her to the city.

She came no more. One day I heard the tramp of a long procession, and on inquiring, found that the "good son" was passing, silent and coffined. Thinks I, she will come once more to send money for the coffin—that will be a sacred debt to her. Then I will see her no more; for her friends now all lie under the grave-sod.

The next Monday she sent me $20 to transmit a money order to the undertaker. Last week I spied the blue eyes and white face through the black veil, and went out to hand her the receipt from the city, and say a kind word. She raised her eyes to heaven and clasped her hands, "Yes, I have seen trouble, thank the Lord." There was submission under chastening beyond any consolation of mine. From sympathy acquired by post office experiences I almost wove the fate of that woman for four weeks.

If you like, I will come again; for I have a desk full of incidents that transfigure clerkly duty into a world of beauty for me.

SANFORD, ASST.

Answers to Correspondents.

Affixing Stamps to Unpaid Letters received for Delivery.—H. W., W— I—, West Va.—The postage on unpaid letters sent to your office for delivery, is charged against your office, and you have to account for the money collected on this charge (sec. 312, paragraph Reg. 1866), therefore if you should affix the proper stamps to such letters you would lose the value of the stamps.

Request Letters, &c.—D. M., D— P——, Mass.—1. A statement of the whole number of request letters sent back to the writers during each quarter, is all that is required. (Sec. 399, Reg. 1866.) 2. The items to be included in a Dead Letter Bill can be found in Section 380, Regulations of 1866.

Postage on Lawyers' Brief in Manuscript.—F. P. C., D——, Ill.—Postage on such matter must be charged at letter rates. Book manuscripts are held to include only manuscript for bona fide books, and not for magazines or newspapers.

Publishers' Exchanges.—W. A. T., S——, Pa.—The privilege of publishers exchanging free is limited to one copy of each issue, and exchanges can only be sent free when sent direct from one publisher to another. (Sec. 214, Reg. 1866.)

Mailing Letters on the Cars.—J. W. R., A——, N. H.—1. Section 470, Regulations of 1866, makes it the duty of route agents to "receive letters written after the mail has closed, and all way letters prepaid by stamps." Hence we cannot see that there is any objection to a route agent receiving properly pre-paid letters at a station a mile and a half from a Post Office. 2. You cannot forward letters addressed to your office without an order from the person addressed, or from the writer of the letter. You may, however, write to the Postmaster, and inquire, through him, if the party addressed wishes to have his letters forwarded.

Carrying the Mail between a Station and a Post Office, &c.—J. W. S., M——, N. J.—1. Apply to the Contract Office, Washington, D. C., for authority to employ a mail messenger, (Sec. 471, Reg. 1866). 2. A cheap, plain desk is all the furniture allowed in "the contingent expenses, but, before purchasing, application should be made to the Auditor's office for directions," &c. (Sec. 323, Reg. 1866).

Franking to Publishers.—G. H. J., W— P——, Ga.—Postmasters cannot frank to publishers. If they wish to notify publishers that a paper is not taken out or refused, they should inclose the notice to the Postmaster, to be by him communicated to the publisher (Sec. 392, Reg. 1866).

Advertising Letters.—P. M., K——, N. Y.—By regulations appended, act of June 12, 1865, no allowances were to be made after October 1, 1866, for advertising letters, except at first-class offices.

Postage on a Monthly Religious Paper.—C. R. H., M— S——, Pa.—Religious papers of small size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages at one cent for four ounces, payable quarterly or yearly, in advance. If sent to Canada, this postage must be paid at the mailing office. (Secs. 202 and 261, Reg. 1866.)

Date of the Postmark on Letters.—H. S., A——, O.—Letters must bear the postmark and the date on which the mail containing them is actually sent off. (Sec. 91, reg. 1866). This does not prevent you effectually canceling the stamps immediately after the letters are deposited in the office. It is not necessary that the operation of postmarking and canceling stamps should be done simultaneously.

Postage on Sunday School Papers.—A. J. P., L——, Pa.—Such papers, if of small size and issued less frequently than once a week, can be sent to one address at the rate of one cent per four ounces, payable quarterly or yearly in advance. (Sec. 202, Reg. 1866.)

Resignation of Office.—M. B., V——, N. Y.—Send your resignation to the Postmaster General, and you will receive instructions how to act.

Photographs.—L. S. D., S——, O.—Photographs are included in class 3, and should be so wrapped that the package can be examined without destroying the wrapper; or it will be subject to letter postage.

Forwarding Letters.—R. Y. W., M——, O.—By a strict construction of Laws and Regulations, postmasters should not forward letters on their own responsibility, but should wait for orders from those interested. The Act of June 12, 1866, provides that prepaid and free letters shall be forwarded, at the request of the party addressed, from one post office to another without additional postage charge. (See this Act in the MAIL for July, 1866.)

Postage on Package of Transient Papers Addressed to a Postmaster.—E. B. C., C——, N. Y.—If a package of transient papers addressed to a Postmaster or to a Post Office, containing other packages or single papers directed to different individuals, reaches a Post Office, postage at transient rates must be collected before delivery from each person addressed. (Sec. 250, Laws 1866.)

Procuring Marking Stamps.—A. W. P., J—, Miss.—Application for marking stamps should be made to the Appointment Office, Washington, D. C. (Sec. 14, Reg. 1866.)

UNITED STATES MAIL.

Steamboat Letters.—P. M., U.——, Va.—The master of a steamboat, if under contract to carry the mail, may receive one cent each, and if not under contract with the Department, two cents each from the postmaster in whose office he deposits prepaid letters received by him on the route, and such letters should be delivered to their address without any charge beyond the amount prepaid. But if not prepaid, they should be treated as ship letters, and are chargeable with a postage of six cents if delivered at the office at which the vessel shall arrive, and two cents in addition to the ordinary rate of postage if destined to be conveyed by post to another place. In the latter case, the master of the vessel is entitled to receive two cents a letter. (Sec. 242, Reg. 1866.)

Franking by Deputy Collector.—W. A. P., I— F——, Iowa.—Deputy Collectors cannot frank notices to delinquent taxpayers.

MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

Domestic Postages.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Parific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no donbt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any questions as to prepayment by this simple criterion.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for Germany, or any part of the German Austrian Postal Union, by Bremen, Hamburg, or Prussian closed Mails. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick can be registered, but not to Newfoundland or Prince Edward's Island. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of twenty eight cents up to December 31, 1867, and of sixteen cents on and after January 1, 1868. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters to Germany, or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, via Bremen or Hamburg, or by Prussian closed mail, and to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, is five cents—to Great Britain and Ireland, twenty cents. All registered letters must be prepaid in full to destination. See "Foreign Miscellany," on fourth page of this paper, for full information in regard to rating all foreign letters.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE. — Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is ten cents per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian Post Office Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazines, and periodicals sent to regular subscribers from publishers) intended to go by mail westward from the western boundary of Kansas, or eastward from the eastern boundary of California, must be prepaid by stamps at letter postage rates. Sec. 259, P. O. Laws, Edition of 1866.]

BOOKS, not over four ounces in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 8 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 12 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions) the postage to be prepaid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over four oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 4 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 6 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows: "The weight of parkages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter, except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings, or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address, and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

Every postmaster will be careful never to send a registered letter "direct" when there is a distributing post office between his office and the office to which the letter is directed. He must inclose it in a "Registered Package Envelope," directed to the postmaster at the first distributing post office on the route, and also send the Return Registered Letter Bill in a common envelope to the same postmaster by same mail—just the same as if the letter were for delivery at the distributing post office.

Postmasters at first-class offices will, of course, note the exception to this rule in their case. Fourth paragraph of General Instructions in regard to registering letters.

Post Office Blanks.

DISTRICT No. 1—Supplies blanks for the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Dakotah, Kansas, Nebraska, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico. Postmasters in either of these States, wanting blanks of any kind should address "First Assistant Postmaster General, Washington, District of Columbia."

DISTRICT No. 2—Supplies blanks for the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, California and Oregon, Washington Territory and Nevada. Postmasters in either of these States or Territories, wanting blanks, should address "Blank Agent, New York, N. Y."

When the postages collected at an office amount to $100 a year, the name of the postmaster and of his office will be printed on the post bills. When the postmaster's compensation exceeds $12 50 a quarter, the postmaster is entitled to wrapping paper and twine, at the above agencies.

Applications for blank registers of arrival and departure of the mails must be made direct to the "Contract Office, Inspection Division, P. O. Dept." For special instructions, to the First Assistant Postmaster General.

All postmasters whose compensation is less than $12 50 per quarter, can purchase a reasonable quantity of wrapping paper and twine, provided the net proceeds of the office exceed twenty dollars per year.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

TO THE BRITISH N. AMERICAN PROVINCES.

Cape Breton, Prince Edward's Island, and Nova Scotia. To Newfoundland prepayment required. To Canada and New Brunswick, 10c. per ½ oz., any distance.

*10c. when not over 3,000 miles from the line of crossing.
*15c. when distance exceeds 3,000 miles.
Prepaym't optional.

Steamers of the Cunard line sail from Boston twice each month, touching at Halifax, and when letters are sent by that conveyance for Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Cape Breton and Prince Edward's Island, the U. S. postage is 5 cents the single rate, to be prepaid. The inland rate is collected on delivery. On newspapers by this route, the postage is 2 cts. each.

RULES FOR RATING LETTERS, &c.

1. IN THE UNITED STATES AND BRITISH MAILS.—Letters exchanged with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or addressed to British Colonies and foreign countries, for transmission in the open mail via England, are charged with United States and British postage, at a single rate for each half ounce or fraction thereof, the same as domestic letters.

In the case of letters to be forwarded in the British mail for transmission from England, "via Marseilles," the French postage is rated at 6 cents the quarter ounce, except on letters for Java, China, Labuan, Borneo, Japan, the Moluccas, Philippine Islands, which are rated at 8 cents per half ounce, and except, also, on letters for Syria and Tunis, by French packet, when the single rate is 12 cents per quarter oz.

2. IN THE UNITED STATES AND FRENCH MAILS.—Letters in the mail to France are to be charged with single rate of postage, if not exceeding the rate of one quarter ounce; double rate if exceeding a quarter, but not exceeding half an ounce; and so on, an additional rate being charged for each quarter ounce, or fractional part of a quarter ounce.

The rates by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz.: Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent, via Suez, countries beyond seas, via France, others than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Java, Mauritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia (except Belgrade), Shanghai, Singapore and Spain. The limit of payment to Spain, Portugal and Gibraltar, is Benobia; to Servia (except Belgrade), Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria," the frontier of Turkey and Austria; to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries, via Suez, the seaports of the Indies, or of the sea of China to which the English packets ply; and to places beyond seas, other than those designated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of designation.

3. IN THE MAILS TO PRUSSIA, OR TO BELGIUM.—Letters in the United States and Prussian closed mails, and in the mails exchanged with Belgium, are charged with single rate of postage if not exceeding half an ounce in weight; double rate if exceeding half an ounce, but not exceeding an ounce; quadruple rate if exceeding an ounce, but not exceeding two ounces; and so on, for greater weights, charging two rates for every ounce or fractional part of an ounce over the first ounce. As this scale of progression differs from that followed in respect to domestic letters, great care is required to prevent mistakes.

4. IN THE MAILS TO BREMEN, OR TO HAMBURG, &c. Letters addressed to the German States, &c., when sent via Bremen or Hamburg; and letters addressed to the British North American Provinces, are rated in the same manner as domestic letters, one rate being charged for each half ounce or fractional part of half an ounce.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.—Postmasters should be careful, where the postage is prepaid, to collect the proper amount. They should be particular to notice the route indicated on the envelopes of letters, and to collect postage accordingly. Letters mailed at some offices, marked "via England," or "via Prussian Closed Mail," for a German State, are frequently taken upon the prepayment of Bremen rates, and those marked "via Bremen," at Prussian closed rates, &c.

To prevent mistakes at the exchange offices, it is desirable that the particular routes by which letters are to be forwarded from the United States to Europe should be distinctly written on the covers. Letters intended for transmission in the open mail to England, should bear the direction, "open mail via England;" if for transmission in the French mail, they should be directed, "via France in the French mail;" if for transmission by closed mail to Prussia, they should be directed, "via Prussian closed mail;" if for transmission in the closed mail to Belgium, they should be directed, "via Belgian closed mail;" and if for transmission by the New York and Bremen line to Bremen, or by the New York and Hamburg line to Hamburg, they should be directed, "via Bremen," or "via Hamburg."

It is important that letters addressed to Germany and other European countries, via France, where the single rate per quarter ounce is 21 cents, should be plainly marked to be sent "via France;" otherwise they may be miscent in the open mail to Liverpool, by United States packet, the 21 cent rate per half ounce being also chargeable on letters thus forwarded.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO, January, 1868.

I am not familiar with the details of a printing office, nor with the peculiar manipulations necessary to transform manuscripts into published matter; for if I were I would know whom to blame for the awkward mistakes which crept into some of my letters. If they went directly from the compositor's fingers to the public, I would blame myself as much as anybody else—for, to be frank about it, I do write an indifferent bad hand—but if I understand the matter at all, there are persons detailed or employed by every publisher whose duties are to correct all typographical errors, and when necessary improve the subject matter of the author. No doubt printers have to battle with much bad writing, bad spelling, bad grammar, and bad punctuation; but if they do not make many mistakes, it is because they are perfect masters of their art. A clerical friend, to whom I was talking on this subject, told me that he was almost frightened into abandoning his calling by some blunders in his first published sermon. In his case, the type-artist, who proved to be a cross-eyed boy, made putty out of "pretty," salts and senna out of "saints and sinners," leg of mution out of "legitimate," and that butter mould out of that "better world." Upon a subsequent examination of the MS. by some of his (the Dominie's) indignant sympathizers, it was evident that the youth was not to blame, for the author's words looked more like what he took them for than anything else; but one or two of the strict construction deacons did not feel quite certain but that the young divine had intentionally introduced them for the purpose of getting up a hot-house notoriety, and that his chagrin and mortification were all simulated. This occurred not very long ago, nor very far away. The vehicle of communication was a weekly paper, and the force upon it was the editor and the aforesaid boy. The multiform duties of the head of the concern, domestic, magisterial and editorial, gave him but little time to read proof, and the paper generally went to press with all its imperfections. In this case both parties were at fault—one lacked the pen power, and the other man power. It is different, however, with THE MAIL. I do not propose to point out the errors which have been overlooked; nor do I propose to war with your Argus, who acts as usher between the press and the public—"for striving to better, oft we mar what's well;" but in the meekest manner imaginable, I ask him to spare me the mortification of seeing my epistles misprinted. Goodness knows they are bad enough at best, and were you as critical as you are forbearing, they would no doubt be consigned to "that bourne" from whence no rejected manuscripts return.

Writing for the press is not one of my accomplishments, and only the wish to be useful to the postal service and those it is designed to accommodate, could nerve me to rush into print. You know I have a reason for devoting myself exclusively to this subject. I certainly will not hesitate to speak my mind when I see glaring official imperfections tolerated—I might say cultivated. Now your paper furnishes abundant information for the special use of Post Office people, and I presume there is not one in the country who fails to familiarize himself with its contents. It is published almost exclusively for their benefit, and keeps them en rapport with headquarters. If they err in acts of commission or omission, there is no excuse for a repetition. Your columns are open to them, and there is positively nothing to prevent them from receiving advice and instruction on uncertain points, if they will take the little trouble to ask therefor; and it strikes me that nothing but a deliberate determination to do the wrong instead of the right thing can account for the simulated ignorance and sluggish disposition of many apparently intelligent and popular functionaries, where matters of easy comprehension, but great utility, are involved.

On the threshold of the New Year it might be well enough to be a little forbearing, and in speaking of official weakness I might practice a little more delicacy; for possibly many in reviewing the past twelve months have seen much to condemn, much to wish undone, and much to improve upon. Those therefore who intend turning over a new leaf need not take to heart anything I have said or am about to say in this letter; but to those impregnables, upon whom "line upon line, and precept upon precept" are wasted, I particularly address myself. That there is a right way and a wrong way to conduct any kind of business, civil or official, is a truism palpable to every mind of the most ordinary capacity, and it is likewise a fixed fact that the wrong way, although it may temporarily lead to selfish ease and soft indulgence, results generally, if followed up, in a damaged exchequer or a damaged character. It involves more brain and body labor, kills confidence, chills sympathy, and leaves its lonely, friendless follower to plod his weary way through life with a reputation for weakness or wickedness, either of which, God knows, is hard to bear up under. In official life, however, there is less chance of inflicting permanent injury, for the allotted term soon passes away and the inevitable successor presents himself, politely asks for the keys, and takes possession of the records. Laying aside the many ways by which my cherished friends in the mail service may passively or actively go astray, I will confine myself for the present to showing how they improperly but materially aid in snaring ignorant and credulous people, and allowing them to be preyed upon by cowardly swindlers, who screen themselves behind the names of some high sounding firms, benevolent enterprise, or titled philanthropists. These miscreants generally have their caves in the large cities, but they do their dirty work through country post offices—they rent boxes or drawers under fictitious names, into which responses from their victims are placed, to whom circulars, carefully worded, have been previously sent from their city dens, promising, for a small investment, a fortune, a wife or husband, renewed health, or a receipt by which any one can make, at a nominal cost, soft, solid or liquid, everything metalic, mineral, fossil or fungous, which is or may be made useful in advancing humanity towards perfect mundane bliss. It may seem strange that such foolish things can catch gulls in a country so generally enlightened as ours, but it is nevertheless true, and many a poor laborer, many a son or daughter, the sole support of aged parents, and thousands of operatives in our varied manufacturing establishments are robbed of the fruits of their honest toil, and entail upon themselves and others misery and want.

I do not suppose there is any law prohibiting these circulars from being sent through the mail nor can a postmaster refuse to deliver them; but it strikes me that an official must be possessed of but little astuteness if he cannot, by legitimate, adroit inquiries find out if strangers taking boxes are who they represent themselves to be, and if their business is honest and proper. No honest man will stand by and see his neighbor's pocket picked without giving the alarm, and I see no difference between these modes of attempting to get money, unless it be that the latter can boast of most bravery.

These jackals know, or suppose they do, the accommodating localities and individuals for their business, and if they are correct their sagacity is more commendable than the conduct of their instruments is honorable.

I would not for the world suppose that many, or even any officials, principals or subordinates, are in collusion with these harpies, but their indifference gives "the leer of invitation," and supplies fabulous parlors for modern spider and fly transactions. There are offices, and a great many of them too, that these fellows would no more approach to ask for facilities to ply their vocation, than they would the gates of a prison, and why? Because they know that officially the postmaster would become familiar with their business, and as a citizen and neighbor would aid in punishing them for their sneak-thief transactions.

To those functionaries, therefore, only, who are imposed upon I would say, where is your pride? Where is your love for your neighbor? Where is your official vigilance, so much a part of your nefulness? Where is your manhood? I am sure if these fellows were to openly insult you, or bring ridicule upon you, you would resent it; but indirectly they are doing worse, and you can't see it, or else you don't want to. Now be advised by one who occasionally goeth about, unofficially of course, covered with a broad brimmed hat, and clad in loose garments, and is never, sleeping or waking, without spectacles on his nose, and whose years are enough to give his words the worth and weight of experience—be advised to commence this New Year, with the determination to properly do anything you can to advance the interests of the Government, and at the same time protect the interests of your neighbors and friends at home, be they strong and intelligent, gentle or simple, from the designe of "artful dodgers," who would make you the "wooden horse" to get them, unsuspected, inside your postal citadel, to despoil the unsuspecting and unsophisticated. You can thwart these fellows without the use of man traps, spring guns, bugs placards, or public announcements by a bellman.

Lamb said, "the greatest pleasure in the world was to do a good action secretly and have it found out by accident." There's a suggestion free of expense. I tender you the compliments of the season.

MONSIEUR TONSON.

Newspaper Postage.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL: Prepayment of all mail matter, printed or written, transient or "regular," at the mailing office, is imperatively demanded. This would save an immense amount of time and labor, and consequently money. The present system imposes an enormous burden on Postmasters, from which they ought to be relieved. With all the pains they can possibly take, their accounts never can be accurate; there always will be omissions, and thus a considerable amount of postage will be lost.

One uniform rate of postage by weight should be established for all serials, whether published daily, weekly, monthly or less frequently. It is high time to do away with all counting in newspaper and circular postage, as it has already been done away with in letter postage.

Rate of Postage.—I propose one mill for each and every half ounce; packages weighing less than two ounces to be rated at four half ounces, and charged four mills.

My reason for proposing this rate of one mill for each half ounce is to disturb as little as possible the present established rate, which is five cents per quarter for weeklies, or twenty cents per annum, and in the same proportion for papers issued more frequently.

Now, four mills a week comes to twenty cents and eight mills per annum, and I have found, by actually weighing nearly fifty daily and weeklies (all that I have been able to lay my hands on,) that their average weight was 1.57 oz.—only five weighing over two ounces, none over that—the heaviest weighed being the Waverly Magazine, twenty-three numbers of which weighed sixty-one and a half ounces, or 2.67 oz. on an average.

From this it appears that the proposed rate would give to the great mass of weekly papers, when only one is sent in a single package, an annual postage of twenty cents and eight mills, and in the same proportion for dailies. But when several papers are sent in the same package (and all sent to one Post Office would of course make one package,) there would be no inconsiderable reduction of postage. And yet, in consequence of the saving of time and labor, and the stopping of leakages, the Post Office Department would undoubtedly be a gainer pecuniarily.

By the proposed scheme, the postage on a small number of papers would be raised to twenty-five cents, and on a very small number to thirty-one cents and two mills per annum, when sent to single subscribers; somewhat less when sent several in the same packags. Surely, neither publisher nor subscriber would be so unreasonable and selfish as to complain.

In what manner shall the prepayment be made? I answer, in whatever manner shall be most convenient to the publisher, all necessary precautions being taken against frauds.

The safest way would doubtless be by stamps attached to every package. And this would not be found so tedious an operation as might at first blush be supposed. The mailing clerk might ascertain the average weight of the papers by weighing fifty or a hundred of them, and then, when addressing the several packages affix the proper stamps, the number of papers in the package at once indicating the weight.

But if effectual precautions against fraud can be devised, let the publisher send his daily or weekly issue in a mase to the Post Office, to be all weighed at once. Five minutes time would then suffice to ascertain the number of half ounces, and the consequent number of mills of postage to be paid.

J. GAYLER, ... Editor.

NEW YORK, JANUARY, 1868.

Subscriptions received at any Post office in the United States.

☞ Letters containing remittances for subscriptions or in reference to the business department of this paper should be addressed to "Publisher U. S. Mail," and not to the Editor.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL" (see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866), and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

Special Notice to Subscribers.

Each wrapper inclosing a copy of the MAIL bears a number in addition to the address. This number signifies that the term for which the subscription is paid expires with the corresponding whole number of the paper. Subscribers will please take this as a notification to forward the subscription for another year, when due, if they intend to renew. Those whom this number reaches, marked 88 or any lower number, will please remit at once.

Advertising Letters.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
December 5, 1867.

Considering the small proportion of advertised letters delivered, and the consequent loss to this Department:

Ordered, That the instructions of this Department concerning the advertisement of letter lists in newspapers be and they are hereby modified so as to prohibit entirely, at all Post Offices, the allowance of pay for such advertising, when any publisher of a newspaper can be found willing to do the work without charge.

Ordered, That all newspapers offering to publish without charge shall have the privilege to copy lists simultaneously.

This order to take effect on January 1, 1868.

ALEX. W. RANDALL, Postmaster General.

☞ The entire "reconstruction" of our Table of Foreign Postages—rendered necessary by the numerous changes which went into effect on the 1st inst.—will account for the delay in the issue of this month's MAIL. Many of the rates under the new treaties could not be ascertained until after Jan. 1, and we presume our readers prefer a complete Table, although at the cost of some delay.

The New Year.

It has long been the custom of most newspapers to issue to their subscribers at the Beginning of the year a "New Year's Address" in poetry—or, at least, in rhyme—touching upon the various events of public interest which have transpired during the year that is past, and wishing prosperity and happiness during the year that is to come. And although THE MAIL does not "keep a poet" on its editorial staff, and consequently cannot address its patrons in the orthodox metrical style, but must confine itself to plain prose, we feel bound to honor the custom to the best of our ability by wishing to all our readers a Happy New Year in all their relations, whether social, domestic or official. As our intercourse, however, is mainly confined to official matters, it is perhaps in that direction that our good wishes toward them chiefly extend; and we will therefore particularize a little on that branch of the service:

May complaints of missing letters be few and far between.

May no entanglements or misunderstandings vex your souls and puzzle your brains in the matter of the quarterly accounts.

May you be always able to satisfy newspaper subscribers that they haven't "paid that bill for postage already"—however positive may be their opinion to the contrary.

May the man who sent the letter containing $10 to the gift enterprise swindlers cease to hint that "it never left the Post Office."

May you never be forced to the humiliating confession that you "made a mistake" in registering a letter.

May the man who always asks to be trusted for a stamp fall heir to a fortune large enough to save him from the necessity of doing so again.

May the man who thinks he would make a better Postmaster than you find no one in authority to agree with him, unless his opinion should happen to be correct—which, of course, is not at all likely.

May all the grumblers and fault-finders be deprived of all just cause or provocation for grumbling at or finding fault with you or your office; and if they still continue in their evil ways, may they be removed—to some other neighborhood.

In short, may peace, happiness, good order and content reign during all the year in your Post Offices; and as a principal means to that all-desirable end, may you be sure to remember the renewal of your subscription to THE MAIL, which now tenders you

"THE COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON."

Sundry Post Office Matters.

Box rents, in one form or another, seem to be a source of considerable difficulty to Postmasters; sometimes it is—who shall have the rents, the Postmaster or the Department? or again, trouble arises between the Postmaster and the boxholders. In a letter before us, we are asked if the Department allows a box to be rented to several families. There is no rule of the Department in this respect. We think, however, it would be better for Postmasters to make a rule for themselves, that but one family or firm, at one time, should hold a box. * * * * The practice of dropping unpaid letters and loose money to pay postage on them in lotter boxes, is a very uncertain way of paying postage; for if there are more letters than money, it is difficult to decide to the payment of which letters to apply the money, and the overplus must be sent to the dead-letter office, as "Held for Postage." We knew a gallant P. O. Clerk, who always selected letters to ladies first, and if there were too many of these, would "toss up" to decide which should be mailed. Closing the letter box is not the proper remedy for the evil in question. A notice, conspicuously posted, of the liability of such letters to be sent to the dead-letter office, would probably have a good result. * * A correspondent writes to know if the new Postal Convention with Great Britain includes Canada. No; Canada has her own Post Office Department. * * And another wants to know "Where he can procure Holbrook's 'Nine Years among the Mail Bags.'" Holbrook's "Ten (not Nine) Years among the Mail Bags," is out of print. We ourselves would be glad to purchase several copies, but do not know where they are to be had. * * And another, How to clean marking and rating stamps? Benzine is probably the best article with which to clean marking stamps. Soda or lye will answer, but if you use either of these, you must wash the stamps thoroughly in clean water, and dry them immediately. Use good ink. Francis & Loutrel have an article prepared purposely for Post Officenee; their advertisement will be found on our third page. * * And another, whether he must recognize stamps on the backs of letters? Although we consider the placing a stamp on the back of a letter a vexatious and reprehensible practice, yet, in the absence of any law or regulation designating the proper place for a stamp, we consider that Postmasters are bound to examine all letters thoroughly to ascertain if the postage has been prepaid. Of course, in such an examination, stamps on the backs of letters would be seen, and must therefore be recognized for their value. * * We have many complaints the past month of the failure of THE MAIL in reaching subscribers. One writes that he has received his copy "crumpled and dirty, and without a wrapper." We repeat our assurance that THE MAIL is properly mailed. While we are gratified to find there are others than subscribers who like to read THE MAIL, we must express the wish that they too would become subscribers, so that every one might receive his paper promptly and in its original wrapper, and not after a two week's delay, and crumpled and dirty.

Our Post Office Calendar.

We have the pleasure, in this number of the "UNITED STATES MAIL," to lay before our readers the list of Establishments, Discontinuances and Re-establishments of Post Offices, together with changes of name, which have been ordered by Postmaster General Randall, during the months of November and December, 1867. Our arrangements are now completed for the monthly receipt of these lists up to the date of publication, together with various other matters of interest to our postal readers generally, and to all others, for our determination is to render THE MAIL a welcome visiter to every household.

We may here add, that an old friend, one of the most "advanced" in our Postal history, assures us that he will, from time to time, contribute a letter of the "olden time," which will be read by the families of our Postmasters with considerable interest, and serve to while away an hour in innocent mirth, while it may not be devoid of sound instruction and historical reminiscences.

Licensed Sale of Postage Stamps.

The Postmaster General has issued an order instructing the Postmasters at the principal cities, to sell to a certain number of business men, postage stamps and stamped envelopes, at a discount of two per cent., to a limited amount, the parties to whom they are sold signing an agreement to sell them to the public in sums not exceeding five dollars, and at not less than their par value, and also agreeing to keep on hand a letter-scale and a printed schedule of the rates of domestic and foreign postage. This step is intended to supply the residents of the larger cities with facilities for purchasing small quantities of stamps and envelopes, without being obliged to call at the post office or branch stations, as they formerly were—sometimes to their great inconvenience. The plan has long been in operation in England, and appears to work well there.

We would remind Postmasters who are making selections of persons for this purpose, that the provisions of the agreement in relation to the "schedule of domestic and foreign postages," can best be complied with by suggesting to each person who purchases stamps at the above rate of discount, to subscribe to THE MAIL, and keep it at his place of business for the use of the public.

Registration of Letters.

Particular attention should be paid by Postmasters to the changes in the registration fees on foreign letters, and also to other modifications of the regulations as to registering foreign letters and other mail matter, which we publish in this number of THE MAIL.

The following are answers to inquiries which we have received on the subject of registration during the past month:

E. S., M——, Iowa.—The return bill must be dated by the Postmaster at the mailing office, with the date the letter leaves his office. The instruction (sec. 8, Registered Letter Regulations) which you suppose to be contrary to this, refers to the dating of the return bill with the date on which the letter arrives—which, of course, is done by the P. M. at the office where the letter is received for delivery or distribution.

M. H. H., S——, Texas.—You should have received your stamps by way of New Orleans D. P. O. Write at once to the Third Assistant Postmaster General for a supply of Registered Package Envelopes and Instructions.

O. L., E——, N. C.—See first answer (to E. S.) which is correct, notwithstanding the authority you mention. Correspondence will be held on the subject.

O. L. & Co., P— B—, N. Y.—The registration fee must be placed on the letter, in stamps, which must be cancelled by the P. M. at the office where the letter is mailed and registered. Your question as to "what disposition is to be made of the 20c.," is difficult to understand. Of course, Postmasters are charged with all the stamps they sell, whether for postage or registration fees.

J. S, A——, Wis.—We cannot republish the instructions in regard to registering letters. If you have mislaid your copy, write to the Third Assistant Postmaster General for another, and take good care of it.

E. L., Ft. G——, Ga.—See remarks below:

Postmasters will remember that the Regulation which required the Registered Letter Bill and Return Bill to be sent from the mailing office together, without being separated, was RESCINDED BY THE DEPARTMENT IN JULY LAST. The proper method now is to fill up both bills alike, (putting the date of mailing on both), SEPARATE them, put the Registered Letter Bill in the Registered Package Envelope along with the registered letter or letters, and send the Return Bill in an ordinary envelope among the unregistered letters, addressing it to the P. M. at the office to which the Registered Package is directed.

Answers to Correspondents.

Among our "Answers to Correspondents," in THE MAIL for September last, is an article on the Franking Privilege, in the last sentence of which an error appears. It reads, "But the Assistants in each branch (of the Internal Revenue service) can only frank to the principals therein, and to each other. What we wrote we cannot now tell, but we certainly did not intend to say that Assistants could frank to each other, for on this point the law is perfectly clear and plain. We think we must have written, "and not to each other," using this phraseology to more forcibly draw the attention of Postmasters to the fact that while Assistant Assessors and Collectors can frank to Assessors and Collectors, they cannot frank to each other.

Franking Privilege in England, &c.—Outsider, D——, O.—Personal franking has long been abolished in England. Official correspondence passes free in envelopes officially marked, "On Her Majesty's Service." 2. The Department is desirous of encouraging the use of stamped envelopes, for several reasons—among others, that their use prevents "holding for postage," and its consequent inconvenience to the public, and increase of labor at the Dead Letter Office. The printing of business cards on "request" envelopes, costs the Government nothing.

Postage on Package of Revenue Stamps.—T. B., P—— du S——, Wis.—Postage on Revenue Stamps, not lawfully franked, should be charged at lotter rates.

Advertising Letters, &c.—M.B. McD., N.—J——, Iowa.—1. Section 361, Regulations 1866, has been abrogated. By an order of the Postmaster General, published in the present number of THE MAIL, no office will be allowed to pay for advertising letters when a publisher can be found who is willing to print the same gratuitously. 2. Dead letter Bills are furnished by the First Ass't P. M. General. Ask for form 24.

Postmaster and Mail Messenger.—N. G. R., S——, Pa—Postmasters cannot draw pay for Mail Messenger service. Sec. 471, Reg. 1866.

Printed Statements of Accounts.—R. T. N., C——, N. Y.—A printed statement of account is a circular, within the meaning of the postal laws.

Posting Letters with Cancelled Stamps.—L. P., C— I—W——, N. Y.—A P. M. has no right to cancel a stamp on a letter at the request of a person who desires to post it at another office, and of course the P. M. at the other office cannot forward it in the mail if the stamp is cancelled when the letter is placed in his office.

Circulars.—J. J. D., Z——, O.—Three Circulars, each from a different firm, to one address, cannot pass at a single circular rate of postage; but three from one firm, relating to different branches of their own business, can pass at that rate.

Forwarding Drop Letters.—W. R., S——, Ill.—Drop letters, when forwarded, must be charged with letter postage.

Postage on Package of Newspapers.—W. B., R—— M——, O.—No reduction can be made in the postage on newspapers by the quantity. News dealers, however, may pay postage on their packages as received. Sec. 202, Reg. 1866.

Oath of Mail Carriers.—A. D., L——, Me.—Postmasters cannot administer the oath to mail carriers.

Notifying Publishers.—J. G. C., M——, Pa.—After you have notified a publisher, according to the law, your duty is done. The papers that, after such notice, still continue to come to an office, should be sold at the end of the quarter, and the proceeds credited to the Department. Secs. 391 and 392, Reg. 1866.

Postage to British Colombia.—L. G. W., O——, N. Y.—The postage to British Colombia should be noted according to section 270, Regulations 1866—viz., 10 cents per half ounce.

Nett Proceeds of Office.—E. E. J., U—— M——, Wis.—The nett proceeds of an office are the proceeds after deducting all claims or payments on account of the Department.

Distributing News Dealers' Packages.—*A. W. MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, ars sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no donbt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyauce to the writers.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britalu or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black lnk, as unpaid, and the postage is to he collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any questions as to prepayment by this simple criterion.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) also for Belgium and The Netherlands. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Labuan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to he charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE. — Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is ten cents per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must he prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must he made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optionnl for the Canadian Post Office Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursnance of the provisions of a resolntion of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, Fmnce, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amonnt of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to he collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United Stntes Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should he entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain nnchanged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No oewspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications, when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to he enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not he regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any book-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter, or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot he received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS ON SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pattern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pattern or sample is so great that it could fairly he considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 inches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot he sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must he no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to he furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases he given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to he of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other materiul, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other packets containing liquids, poisous, explosive chemicals, or other urticles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must he prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half ounce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughout the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

Postage on Daily Papers to subscribers, when prepaid quarterly or yearly in advance, either at the mailing office or office of delivery, per quarter, (three months) ..... 35 cents.

Six times per week, per quarter (3 mos.)	30	"
For Tri-Weekly, " "	15	"
For Semi-Weekly, " "	10	"
For Weekly, " "	5	"

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent by the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the United States:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz.	6	cts.
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	12	"
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	18	"
Quarterly, not over 4 oz.	1	"
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	2	"
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	3	"

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received hy the postmaster must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and no more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other, from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of an all size, issued less frequently than once a week, may be sent in packages, to one address, at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspapers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the quarterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to he prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters, unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazines, and periodicals sent to regular subscribers from publishers) intended to go by mail westward from the western boundary of Kansas, or eastward from the eastern boundary of California, must be prepaid by stamps at letter postage rates. Sec. 259, P. O. Laws, Edition of 1866.)

Books, not over four ounces in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 8 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 12 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic paper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions) the postage to he prepaid by stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over four oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 4 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 6 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 43d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking out the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows: "The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof-sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter, except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or scions, maps, engravings, or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Exchange newspapers and periodicals cannot be remailed without being chargeable with postage. Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address, and the names of the club of subscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not apply to weekly newspapers which circulate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries bordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must he collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

SHREVE'S POSTAL INDICATOR

Will keep the amount of STAMPS CANCELLED, or Number of Letters Received for Delivery, Undercharge Account, Amount of Stamps sold, of Box Rent and Postage Collected, &c. Can be used in a Post Office of any class; will indicate the account of the day, week, month or quarter, and banishes all the perplexing modes heretofore employed. By its use the postmaster can, with little trouble, keep these accounts all the year, and have a correct knowledge of the amount of business he is doing.

This system embraces the shortest and most accurate mode of recording the amount of Stamps defaced, and for this purpose alone is worth its cost. Full instructions accompany each Indicator. Forwarded by mail, on receipt of $3 00, to any part of the United States. Address

The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which in each case is 10 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (½ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—Where the letter b is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case, is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 3 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases, the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight, when sent in British mail.

UNITED STATES MAIL

AND

POST OFFICE ASSISTANT.

VOL. VIII., NO. 5. NEW YORK, FEBRUARY, 1868. WHOLE NO. 89.

THE POST OFFICE IN COLONY TIMES.

SECOND ARTICLE.

In a late number of THE MAIL, we gave some extracts from the "Journal of Hugh Finlay, Surveyor of the Post Roads on the Continent of North America; begun in September, 1773 and ended June, 1774," published by Frank H. Norton, Esq., of Brooklyn, N. Y., showing the condition of postal communication in the Colonies at that time. From Mr. Norton's introduction to that work, we give below some further interesting items on the same subject. From Parton's Life of Franklin, Mr. Norton quotes:

"In the American Colonies, the postal service began thus: Letters arriving from beyond the sea were usually delivered on board the ship into the hands of the persons to whom they were addressed; every family sending a member on board for the purpose of receiving letters. Letters not called for were taken by the captain to a coffee-house near the wharf, where they lay spread out on a table, waiting the coming of their owners. Persons coming from adjacent settlements called at the coffee-house and carried away not only their own letters, but all the letters belonging to the people in the neighborhood, which they either delivered in person, or deposited at the house of the minister or magistrate, or some relative of the individual to whom the letter was addressed.

"Hence the custom grew of depositing at the ship coffee-house, letters written in the town and destined to a place in the interior, as well as letters brought from the country and directed to an inhabitant of the town. As the settlements grew in number and magnitude it became usual to leave letters directed to one of them at the inn most frequented by the inhabitants of that settlement.

"Thus, several years before there was a post office or a post rider in the Colonies, a rude, slow, unsafe but neighborly system of letter-delivery had sprung up; and long after the establishment of a post office, this neighborly method continued to be the main dependence of the people for the transportation of letters for short distances."

MASSACHUSETTS

"seems to have been foremost in in the establishment of a legal post office system, since in the year 1639, the General Court of that Colony issened the following decree:

"It is ORDERED, that notice be given that Richard Fairbanks, his house in Boston, is the place appointed for all letters which are brought from beyond the seas, or are to be sent thither, to be left with him; and he is to take care that they are to be delivered or sent according to the directions; and he is allowed for every letter a penny, and he must answer all miscarriages through his own neglect in this kind."

"Ueder date Jannary 6th, 1673, the General Court reports as follows:

"The Court mett ahont the time.

"Whereas the publick occasions of the country doe frequently require that messengers he sent post, and as yet, no settled allowance stated in such cases, it is ordered by this court and the authority thereof, that from henceforth every person so sent upon the publicke service of the country shall be allowed by the Treasurer after the rate of three peoce a mile to the place to which he is sent, in money, as full satisfaction for the expence of horse and man, and no inholder shall take of any such messenger or others travayling upon publicke service more than two shillings pr bushell for oates, and fower pence for hay, day and night

"In the year 1677, in auswer to the reqnest of several merchants of Boston, declaring that "they have heard of many complaints made by merchents and others that have hinn eencible of the losse of letters, wherehy merchants with their friends and imployers in forreigne parts are greatly demnified, many times are imputed and throwne upon the exchange, that who will may take them up; no person without someeatisfaction being willing to trouble their houses thorewith; therefore hnmbly desire, the court to deputo some meete persou to take in and convey letters to yr direction," * * * this court judgeth it meete to to grant the petitioners requeet hereie, and have made choyce of Mr. John Hayward the Scrivener to he the person for that service."

"In 1680, John Hayward (or Haywood) was appointed postmaster of the whole Colony, and in 1689 Richard Wilkins was appointed 'to receive all letters and to deliver out the same, and to receive on each one Penny.'"

CONNECTICUT.

"[Before General Court, Hartford, 1674.]

"This Conrt heing made sensihle of the great damage that may accrne to the publique hy a liherty or holdness which some persons may take to themselves (when employed hy order of authority for the conveyance of letters, post, and other important occasions of this colony) hy profuse and extravagant spending at the ordinaries and other places on the road upon the countryes acct, and allso hy great delayes oe journeyes, very prejndiciall to the colony, which willing to prevent, doe therefore order that the allowance for those persons (who shall he employed on such service) for their wages and expences of themselves and horsee, shall he as followeth, from the first of May to the middle of October: [Here follows a long list of prices at various places, too extensive to copy.] And from the middle of October to the last of Aprill, to be eight pence more than the above, for every night they lye ont, for oates to the horses, wherein great care is to he had hy the ordinary keepers, that hyred horses are not deprived of their allowance. Also, the differences in the ahovesayed sums is to he the stated wages from towne to towne, if they go not to Hartford; and the like proportion hy the mile to those whoe shall he imployed in this Colony where their wages is not stated.

"It is further ordered, that all posts their forridge shall ho on the country's acconnt, and that the ordinary keepers in the respective plantatioos shall provide suitahle accommodations for men and horse, whose allowance for the man hy the meale shall he sixpence, and for the horse at grass, fower pence a night, and for oates, fower pence the halfe peck, and for hay the night, fower pence.

"It is allso ordered, that whosoever upon these tearmes shall unnecessarily stop or detayne his journey forth or back, or shall he necessarily stopped or detayned by authority or other just occasion, such person or persons shall heare the penalty or receive recompence extraordinarily as the authority who sent them shall judge right to he abated or augmented in his wages."

MAINE.

"In Maine, previous to the Revolntion, the post came at the oftenest hut once a week from Portland to the West, hut it was hy no means regular. It was not until about 1760 that a weekly mail was estahlished further east than Portsmouth; before that time it was not sent until a sufficient number of letters were collected to pay the expense."

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

In New Hampshire a post office was established hy the Colony in 1693 by an Act of the Legislature of the Province, which, after reciting that Thomas Neale, Esq., had "ohtained from their most Excelent Majesty full power and authority hy Letters Pattents under the great seal of England, hearing date the seventeenth day of February, 1691, to erect, settle and estahlish within their said Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in America an Office or Offices for the receiving and dispatching of Letters and Pacquetts," &c., continues:

"Bee it therefore Enacted and ordained hy the Lieut. Governor Council and Representatives convened in general assembly. And it is hereby Enacted and ordained hy authority of the same, that a Post Office and Officer he henceforth appointed and settled in some convenient Place within the Town of Portsmouth for receiving and dispatching away, according to direction, all Letters and Paoquetts that shall he brought thereinto. And no person or persons whatever shall presume to carry or recarry any Letter or Letters for hire hut only such as helong to the Post Office, deriving their power and authority from the afore said Thomas Neale, except such Letters of Merchants and Masters which shall he sent hy any master of any ship, hoat or other vessel of merchandize or any other person employed hy them for the carriage of such Letters aforesaid according to the respective directions, and alsoe precept Letters sent hy any private friend or friends in their way of Journey or Travel or hy any Messenger or Messengers sent on purpese for or concerning the private affairs of any person or persons.

"And whoever offends against this act shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds, one half to their Maj'ties towards the sopport of the Government of this Province, the other half to the Post Master General, who shall sue and prosecnte for the samo."

NEW YORK.

In 1672, the government of New York established a monthly mail to Boston, edvertising,

"Those that he disposed to send letters to hring them to the Secretary's office, where in a locked hox they shall he preserved till the messenger calls for them; all persons paying the post hefore the hagg is sealed up."

PENNSYLVANIA.

"In July, 1683, William Penn issned an order for the estahlishment of a Post Office, and granted to Henry Walday of Tekonay, authority to hold one and 'to sapply passengers with horses from Philadelphia to New Castle or to the Falls.'

"The rates of postage were, to wit:

"'Letters from the Falls to Philadelphia 3d., to Chester 5d., to New Castle 7d., and to Maryland 6d.' This post went once a week, and was to he carefully published 'on the meeting-house door and other pnhlio places.'"

VIRGINIA.

"In Virginia, the Colonial law of 1657 required every planter to provide a messenger to convey the deepatches as they arrived, to the next plantation, and so on, on pain of forfeiting a hogshead of tohacco for default." And in 1692, in the reign of William and Mary, the Colonial General Assembly of Virginia passed 'An Act for encouraging the erecting of a Post Office in this Country,' which gave the same power and authority to Thomas Neale as were coeferred on him hy the New Hampshire Legislature in the succeeding year in the act quoted ahove."

The work from which we have made the above extracts, contains a number of other interesting facts concerning our early postal history, hoth hefore and after the Revolution, for some of which we may find room hereafter, as we cannot at present.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Monsieur Tonson Again.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND BUFFALO, February, 1868.

Did you ever see anybody who was perfectly contented with his lot in life? Probably you have; but my impression is that such cases are as rare as realized dreams. No condition of life furnishes an exception. The poor want to he rich, the rich, richer; the weak, strong, and the strong, stronger; the had, good, the good, better, and the hetter, hest. Love, law, religion, politics, ambition, and possession, are all fruitful sources of discontent, disappointment, and immediate or remote unhappines, and those who are free from wounds in their religion, their conscience, or their domestic associations, are the fewest nnmber. In fact, every passion of the human heart, operating openly or covertly, furnishes propelling power to keep mind or body, or hoth, in perpetual motion, so that contentment, which everyhody thinks everyhody else has, emounts to nothing more than the reflection in a mirror, which an attempted embrace would crnsh, leaving nothing hnt fragments of wood and glass.

Everybody says there is no place like home; hut everyhody differs in regard to the idea of what a home is, or what it ought to he. Some want it on the "sea, the open sea;" others on the "mountain brow;" nnmbers want to "fly to the free, far distent west," to live "in the woods," among the nnout timber, or "ont on the prairie," entirely fearless of fire and furies in the shape of "hig Indians." "A cottage on the cliff," or "a cottage hy the sea," ie decidedly the theory for many; cloud-capped hills, or sequestered valleys will only suit others; and the "Love me, leave me not," go in for a "quiet little islo of their own," snhject to very mild variations of the seasons; or, if a little etherealized, will he satisfied with nothing short of "Islands, where the leaves never change and the skies never weep." The inhabitants of cities flee to the country for change of air, change of scene, and ease of hrain and hody; while their provincial cousins, for the same object, hasten to town, and, gazing with great round eyes on the recently-deserted palatial mansion, quietly rail at heaven for its injustice, and wonder why ench nneqnal distrihntion of property is permitted. Narrowieg the question down to the choice of a home in the city or country, a good deal can he said on hoth sides. Cities are better adapted to money-making and money-spending; rnralclom for money-getting and money-keeping. Cities are hnge grindstones, where humanity sharpens its wits; in the country, a keen edge is not so essential. In the city, candor is comparatively a scarce commodity; in the country, it is a feature in almost every household. A city life is a continnous struggle for wealth and position; a conetry life is satisfied with a competency and the provincial respect which its proper management commands. Aotive minds, however, almost always drift into large cities; and art, science, and ingenuity fied patrona there for their theoretical or practical ercations, which rustic simplicity fails to appreciate. Poets, painters, preachers, and physicians find a far more favorahle field for fame there, and speed to the husy metropolis for gold and glory.

The ambitious clerk and artisae, infected with the same disease in a milder form, bids adieu each to his respective "Sweet Anhurn," with heavy heart, hut which soon lightens in the hurrying, scurrying excitement of the new life, and presently, becoming metamorphosed into a worshiper of the "glass of fashion," or the glass of rum, he rises above or sinks below the level of his "native heath," and soon entirely forgets, or is forgotten. "He pays his money and he takes his choice, my dear."

In the city, resources can he found to meet every requirement of mental or physical appetites; in the country it is vastly different: hut it does not follow that the country people are less healthy, intelligent, or happy. As I remarked before, a good deal can be said in favor of a home either in town or country; but it ought to he one thing or the other—"half and half" does weh enough for ale, but it ought to stop there. Of course, I have not the slightest idea that what I am saying to you will he the meane of permanently fixing the life limits of anyone's domestic tent, hnt it is well enough to pnt these things on record. For my part, I think a home in a delightful, well-shaded, well-watered, well-paved, and well-located village, convenient to a large city and to the railway leading thereto, infinitely preferable to the city itself. You have nearly all the advantages, with very few of the annoyances, and ahundant facilities for getting to and from your city duties; and at home you have your morning and evening papers of the day on your table. In an emergenoy, the telegraph office is almost at your elhow, on one side; and for your business, or family correspondence, you have the advantage of a nice, tidy, well regulated, careful and safe Post Office on the other. Yes, that is if it is a "nice, tidy, well regulated, careful and safe office." I don't mean an office that during the day is turned into a hutcher's, haker's, tailor's, tinner's, undertaker's, or green grocer's shop, or a Dogherrien magistrate's office to try cases, or a lawyer's office to squeeze tears and treasure ont of clients, or a doctor's office to deplete patients and purses, or an express office, or a railway ticket office, or a butter hnyer's, or a cheese hnyer's, or a wool or wood hnyer's office, or a news dealer's office, or a room for committees on fairs, plank roads, oil welle, all kinds of mines, sheep raising, cattle hreeding, and horse trotting, to meet in; or a "sample room" for liqnors and segars, "ice oold lager," or "ale drawn from the wood." I don't mean that kind; nor do I mean that kind that at night is turned into a rendozvous for smokers and jokers, gossips and gigglers, singing olnbs, base ball experts, first olass skaters, Thespian prodigies, hanjoists, fiddleists, fintists, cornet-a-pistonists, trombone and heef-honists, funny storyists, or into a geeeral council for the settlement of the affairs of the nation, state, county or town, hy "Yonng Men's Association," or "Ladies' Sewing Societies." I don't mean tha. kind, hnt I mean jnst what I said, "a nice, tidy, well regulated, careful and safe Post Office," where politeness, promptness and close attention to business is the rule; where letters are not liable to he bethnmbed or inspected hy impertinent or unauthorized persons; where nothing improper or disagreeable offends the eye or ear; where husiness is not interfered with or delayed hy longers and idlers; where modesty is not put to the hlush, poverty to pain, and distress to grief; where misery is not mocked, deformity derided, ingenuousness misled, and Christianity scoffed at; in brief, I mean an office where Heaven's first law, ORDER, is paramount, and where the golden rule, "Do to others as you would have others do unto you," is the precept and the practice.

A home in such a village as I have described, with such a Post Office, and all the other adjuncts and conveniences there to he fohnd, is, in my opinion, the place; hut perhaps you and your readers may differ with me. I will not therefore urge my views on that snhject; hut if post office people don't heed what I say, I will, as a private citizen, not only maintain what I have said, hut I will pile on more. I might possihly say more now, hnt it is difficult to write without spectacles—I lost mine in a snow storm while endeavoring to secure my hroad hrim hat with the hooked handle of my umhrella, in doing which I dropped my carpet hag, and in striving to pick that np my glasses fell from my nose into the soft snow, and at the same moment a gust of wind inflated my nmbrella and carried it across the fields. I had just time to get on board the cars with my hat and hag, a little ruffled in temper, and very red from exertion, when the train started. I quietly said "good-hye specs and umbrella," —opening Harper's Weekly, I amused myself with looking at the large pictures, and soon forgot my loss. MONS. TONSON.

The Money Order and Registry System.

EDITOR U. S. MAIL:—Since "Ontsider" in the Jannary MAIL has opened the snhject of a change in postage rates and payments, I wish to open another snhject—that of money orders and registered letters. There should he many more money order offices opened, as a great convenience to the people, hnt the rates for small orders should ho reduced. At present a $20 order costs ten cents, and if I wish to remit a one dollar order to pay my snhscription to the UNITED STATES MAIL, it costs mo ten cents for the order, the same as though your snhscription price was twenty dollars. There should be a $10 class of orders, that should be sold for at least five cents, to accommodate small snms mostly sent oy snbscribers for papers, and hy poor servant girls, ont of their small earnings, to their widowed mothers to help them live, and educate yonnger brothers and sisters.

And a word ahout registered letters. Why charge twenty cents for registering a letter to he sent anywhere in the United States, and charge only five cents if it goes to Canada, and eight cents if it goes to Holland, Austria, or the German States? Why this discriminatioe against our own citizens? W. S. W.

An Amusing Mistake.

In Albany, N. Y., a few days since, a young woman, apparently a servant girl, who had been entrusted with a couple of letters to he mailed, made a laughable mistake. She had received the letters, donhtless, with instructions to deposit them in one of the many Post Office boxes attached to the lamp-posts. The attention of passers-hy was attracted by noticing her endeavoring to insert her letters through a crack in a hydrant, situated near an engine-house. After protracted effort, she succeeded in accomplishing this feat, and walked away with the consciousness of a duty discharged. Without informing her of her mistake, one of the employees at the engine-honse procured a key and unlocked the hydrant, taking the letters therefrom, and depositing them safely in the nearest Post Office box.

If the hlunder had not been discovered, it is prohable that the postmaster at Albany would have received a complaint from the girl's employer, stating that two letters were deposited in a street letter-hox "hy a trusty and faithful messenger," and had been "stolen hy somebody in the Post Office."

J. SAYLER, ... Editor.

NEW YORK, FEBRUARY, 1866.

Terms.—One Dollar per year, payable in advance. All communications to be addressed to the Publisher of the UNITED STATES MAIL, New York.

Subscriptions received at any Post office in the United States.

☞ Letters containing remittances for subscriptions or with reference to the business department of this paper should be addressed to "Publisher U. S. Mail," and not to the Editor.

A Reminder.

The subscriptions of a great many of our subscribers expired with the January number, and those of many others expire with this number. We are sure that they all wish to renew, and that they will do so if they do not forget it. If each one of them will inclose the price of his subscription in a letter to us, and post it, AS SOON AS HE HAS FINISHED READING THIS PARAGRAPH, he will avoid all risk of forgetting it, and will greatly oblige

THE PUBLISHER.

Official Recommendation.

The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the UNITED STATES MAIL, and his desire that it should be in the hands of all connected with the postal service, in the following official recommendation:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 7th, 1867.

The Postmaster General recommends that all Postmasters and others connected with the Postal service subscribe for the "UNITED STATES MAIL AND POST OFFICE ASSISTANT," a monthly journal, published in the city of New York by a Special Agent of the Department, and devoted to the diffusion of information in regard to Post Office matters, the publication of the Postal Laws, Official Regulations and Orders of the Department, Lists of newly established and discontinued Post Offices, Rates of Foreign and Domestic Postage, &c., &c.

The Rates of Postage to Foreign Countries are liable to constant changes, which, as they occur, are published in the Table of Foreign Postages in the "UNITED STATES MAIL" [see Sec. 259 P. O. Regulations of 1866], and it is therefore desirable that all Postmasters should provide themselves with that paper, in order that they may at all times be prepared to charge the proper rates on mail matter to and from Foreign Countries, as well as to keep themselves informed of all current changes in Postal Laws and Regulations.

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

Special Notice to Subscribers.

Each wrapper inclosing a copy of the MAIL bears a number in addition to the address. This number signifies that the term for which the subscription is paid expires with the corresponding whole number of the paper. Subscribers will please take this as a notification to forward the subscription for another year, when due, if they intend to renew. Those whom this number reaches, marked 89, or any lower number, will please remit at once.

FOREIGN REGISTRATION FEES.—Registered letters for foreign countries, are constantly arriving at Distributing Post Offices with the fees underpaid, or overpaid in stamps. When registering a foreign letter, examine the "registration fee" column in the Table of Postages to Foreign Countries, and see that the proper fee, neither more nor less, is attached to the letter, in addition to the full postage.

☞ Some postmasters, at inland offices, are in the habit of requiring a three-cent stamp to be affixed to letters directed to foreign countries, apparently under the impression that the postage to New York is required to be prepaid, as well as the foreign rates. This is not the case. The rates published in the Foreign Postage Table cover the postage from and to any part of the United States.

New Post Office at Watertown, N. Y.

The Post Office at Watertown, New York, having undergone an entire renovation, was opened a few days ago for business. We have had to chronicle a number of improvements of Post Offices lately, and it certainly is as creditable to the functionaries who see and urge the necessity of these improvements, as it is satisfactory to the Department, and flattering to the communities in which the offices are located.

The office at Watertown is fitted up and furnished with a great deal of taste, and every modern auxiliary for the despatch of business and the accommodation of the public has been called into requisition. There is ample room in the arcade hall for citizens, and abundant room inside for receiving, opening, assorting, and despatching mails. A nicely-furnished room has been set apart for the worthy Postmaster, who must not be too modest to use it; and the money-order office is conveniently located, and perfect in all its appointments. Everything looks so white, bright, crisp, and new, in comparison to the dingy old office, that it commands the admiration of every one; and if the business don't increase, it is only because there is no more business to be done.

Accommodating the Neighbors.

There is, of course, no denial of the fact that the Post Office Department, and the regulations under which its operations are conducted, were instituted for the "accommodation" of the people, by the safe and speedy transmission and delivery of their correspondence, and for the diffusion of intelligence and education by the cheap distribution of newspapers and periodicals throughout the land. There is reason to believe, however, that many postmasters are in the habit of taking somewhat too liberal views of the extent to which "accommodation" can be carried in official matters—treating the Post Office as though it were established for the private benefit of individuals instead of for the general good, and stretching, and even breaking, its established laws, to suit the convenience of their friends, or to avoid the reputation of being unneighborly and "unaccommodating."

We are satisfied that the revenues of the Department are annually defrauded, to a very considerable extent, by the reprehensible compliance of postmasters with the requests of the public to violate the laws and their sworn obligation as a matter of "accommodation." Newspaper publishers ask the privilege of being allowed to fold a dry goods handbill, or a grocer's circular, within each copy which they mail to their subscribers; or they want to be "accommodated" in the matter of sending "specimen numbers" without prepayment; newspaper subscribers—and the name of such subscribers is legion—are "accommodated" by being permitted, by complaisant postmasters, to receive their papers year after year without payment of the postage—in each case a trifle, but in the aggregate a sum which would have a perceptible effect upon the annual balance-sheet of the Department. Packages of boots, shoes, tobacco, and such like articles, are allowed to be posted and delivered, when prepaid at only newspaper rates at the most; and, in various other ways, "accommodation" is made to assume a shape which renders it exceedingly difficult to distinguish between it and dishonesty.

The tax, in the form of postage-charges, which the Department levies upon mail-matter of all descriptions, is certainly light enough; and he who seeks to avoid its payment, and at the same time obtain the benefit of the postal system, furnishes thereby such evidence of innate meanness—not to say roguery—as to entitle him to the contempt of any respectable Postmaster whose aid he may ask in carrying out his schemes. Such applications for "accommodation," upon whatever grounds they may be based, should be met by a prompt refusal from every Postmaster who desires to keep his official oath by faithfully performing his duties. And he can do this in such a way, in most cases, as to avoid the undesirable reputation of being "unaccommodating." An explanation by a Postmaster, of the law or regulation which forbids the particular unlawful thing which he is asked to do, will be sufficient for any reasonable person; and a rogue who will not, or a blockhead who cannot, understand that laws and regulations cannot be twisted or broken to serve his private ends, is not worth wasting an explanation upon. A Postmaster has no more right to connive at, or allow the evasion of the payment of the just dues of the Department, than he has to embezzle its funds, or make donation of them to his neighbors.

There are other objectionable forms which "accommodation" assumes in Post Office matters. Idlers and gossips are allowed to saunter within the limits of the Post Office—Paul Prys and busybodies are allowed to handle, examine (untwardly) and guess and speculate about, the letters arriving for or deposited by others—in these and many other ways the neighbors are "accommodated" at some Post Offices, at the cost of a direct violation of well-known laws and regulations. This is all wrong; and we have called attention to the matter in order to induce every Postmaster who may be conscious that any of our remarks apply to him, to remember that while to be accommodating and courteous to all is a part of his duty, he is not at liberty to disregard his oath of office as a matter of convenience to himself or others.

Sundry Post Office Matters.

We have before us a few letters for the subject of our usual article under this head, and thus reply to our correspondent who asks how he can procure a copy of the Post Office Regulations. He must apply to the First Assistant Postmaster General; the book will be charged in his account. He also wants to know if the sender of a book or paper may write his address on it. Yes, as we do not think Sec. 216, Reg. 1866, applies to such cases. .....One complains of the stamps falling off letters, and wants to know if he must stick them on again. We think he should, for letters without a stamp must be sent to the Dead Letter Office; and a postmaster who holds such a letter in his hand, while the stamp lies before him that he knows fell from it for want of a little more gum, would be—yes, very unfit for a postmaster, were he to send the letter to the Dead Letter Office..... The question of Mutilated Currency has come to us from several correspondents. To answer it fully would require too much space. We can only say that postmasters are obliged to take Mutilated Currency according to the terms of the circular, published in the MAIL for September, 1867, and that the registry fee, on packages registered to the Treasurer of the United States, must be paid by stamps..... Another—How he can be expected to sell undelivered newspapers for the postage due on them. It is not required that such papers should be sold for the postage due, but only for what they will bring, and the proceeds credited to the Department. Nor is a postmaster required to charge himself with the difference between the postage and the amount so credited. If newspapers come regularly to an office, and they are not taken out, the publisher should be notified, according to section 392, Regulation of 1866.....Also several questions on railroad companies delivering mails. Railroad companies are required to deliver mails at offices within eighty rods of the station. If an office is farther than this, the postmaster should inform the Second Assistant Postmaster General, at the Contract Office, and request permission to employ a mail messenger. Pay cannot be allowed for this service, unless by special permission. Sec. 471, Reg. 1866.....A vexed question has again come up—after being at rest for a while—one which should remain forever at rest: whether a stage-driver shall deliver a mail bag at the sidewalk, the door, or within the room of a Post Office. As a driver is not required to leave his horses, it is, undoubtedly, the duty of the postmaster to take the mail bag to him, and go to the stage or vehicle for it. But a driver is required to drive as near the Post Office door as he can. In our judgment, such questions between a postmaster and a mail carrier should never arise..... One says he cannot afford to take the MAIL, because his salary is too small. Every one must be the judge of what he can afford; but we cannot but think that a dollar spent for the MAIL will be worth many dollars to the patrons of a Post Office, if not to the postmaster himself, and postmasters are postmasters for the public, not for themselves..... Stamping ink may be obtained of Francis & Loutrel. See their advertisement in this paper. ..... We close our Sundries with a puzzle for postmasters to solve. Suppose we receive a letter as follows:

"LETTERVILLE, Jan., 1868.

"ED. U. S. MAIL: Enclosed please find one dollar, for which send the MAIL to P. M."

Now suppose there are from ten to twenty Lettervilles, as there are Washingtons, Franklin, &c., the puzzle is, to which one to send the MAIL. N. B.—Postmasters will please take the hint.

"Information Wanted."

The recent subterranean rumblings on the northern frontier, following so soon after the terrific outburst and gorgeous pyrotechnic display of Vesuvius, caused a good deal of trepidation among intelligent people, who were somewhat apprehensive that the earth, in one of her gaping moods, might not only gobble up houses and lots, but that bipeds and quadrupeds might be forced into the breach in a most summary manner. The ignorant portion of the population have regarded the matter in a far more serious light, and, terror-struck, fully believed these earth-rooking demonstrations to be the precursor of the end of all things. On the morning after the shock, an apparently unsophisticated, but slightly inebriated individual, approached the delivery-window of the Post Office at Ogdensburg, and tremblingly inquired for the postmaster; that good-natured and urbane official making his appearance, was greeted thus: "Are you the postmaster?" "I am, sir," was the reply. "Do you think the Day of Judgment is coming now?" "I cannot say, my friend, that is beyond my knowledge." "Why, aint you the postmaster?" "Yes, sir." "And can't you tell?" "No, sir." "Well, I'd like to know; I had forty dollars when I came here; I spent part of it last night, and if I thought the Day of Judgment was coming, I'd spend the last cent of it." Not being able, evidently to his great surprise, to obtain the desired information, he walked slowly away, apparently in deep thought. What disposition he made of his funds, subsequently, we have not learned.

A LAW-ABIDING CITIZEN.—A short time since one of the New York letter-carriers, while engaged in serving his route in the upper part of the city, had occasion to pass an open lot where a party of workmen were engaged in blasting rocks, and had just lit a fuse. Not noticing the "red flag," which was set up as a signal, he was considerably startled by the loud explosion and the whizzing flight of numerous mineral specimens about his ears, none of the fragments, fortunately, striking him. The workmen emerged from their places of shelter, and the carrier, naturally indignant at such recklessness, favored them with a "blast" of his own—inquiring "why the something" they hadn't warned him to stop. He was silenced, however, by one of the party exclaiming, with well-feigned surprise: "Faith, we're too smart for that, Mr. Postman; shure, didn't we know ite again the law to be shtoppin' the mail?"

UNPAID FOREIGN LETTERS.—Postmasters at offices which are not "Exchange" offices for foreign mails (see list of such Exchange offices on third page), should only postmark unpaid foreign letters, leaving the rate of postage to be marked thereon at the Exchange office.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Accounting for Postage Paid Yearly.—G. C. C., L—— P——, Iowa.—The regulations require that postage on printed matter, collected from regular subscribers, must be accounted for quarterly. Sec. 311, Reg. 1866.

Re-mailing a Regular Paper.—E. F., S—— R—, Vt.—The law establishing quarterly rates of postage on regular papers expressly say, "sent to actual subscribers from a known office of publication." Sec. 201, Reg. 1866. This precludes a subscriber from sending a paper he receives regularly from a publisher to some other person, at the regular quarterly rates.

Sample Copies of Papers.—J. M., C——, N. Y.—Sample copies of newspapers are subject to the transient rate of two cents for four ounces, prepaid, (Sec. 226, Reg. 1866), and if they arrive at the office of delivery unpaid, this amount should be collected on delivery, (Sec 150, Reg. 1866). If refused, the papers should be sold at the end of the quarter, and the proceeds credited to the Department, (Sec. 391, Reg. 1866).

Postage on Transient Newspapers.—L. B. S., P——, N. Y.—The postage on transient newspapers is charged by weight and not by number. Upon a transient package of three papers weighing together not over four ounces, the postage is two cents, not six. Sec. 204, Reg. 1866.

Postage on Manuscript.—L. R., V——, N. J.—Book manuscript is chargable with postage at the rate of two cents for four ounces, all other manuscript at letter rates. In rating postage on such matter, periodicals and magazines must not be classed as books. Sec. 37, Reg 1866.

Forwarding Letters.—G. R. F., E—— S——, N. Y.—Letters should only be forwarded at the request of the parties interested, and if by order of the party addressed, no charge should be made. Many instances occur where a person very properly wishes a letter to reach him at some other place than his usual place of residence, and a Postmaster should not defeat this wish by forwarding without orders. In some cases it may be well for one Postmaster to address another, stating that such a letter is in his office, and requesting him to ask the person addressed if he wishes the letter forwarded.

Writing Subscribers' Names on Packages of Papers.—A. L., F——, O.—Postmasters are obliged to write the names of subscribers on the papers coming in packages to clubs, and they are also obliged to deliver such papers from a list of names handed in to them. Sec. 211, Reg. 1866.

Unpaid Post Bill to another Office accompanying a Paid Letter.—W. H. L., C—— P——, O.—An unpaid post bill to one office, could be sent with a paid letter to another office only by mistake, and such a bill should be returned to the Postmaster at the office where it originated, for correction.

Uncalled for Registered Packages.—B. H. H., C——, R. I.—Registered letters not called for, should be sent to the Dead Letter Office, according to Section 373, Regulations 1866.

Letters Directed to Unopened Offices.—H. E. T., L——, N. C.—Such letters should be delivered from the nearest office, and if not delivered within about five weeks, should be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

Registering Letters at Money Order Offices.—W. W. D., R—— C——, Wis.—There is no law or regulation to prevent registering letters at money-order offices, but the Postmaster should endeavor to point out the advantages of sending money by money-order, rather than by registered letter

Newspapers to Bremen.—J. M. G., St. F—— L——, Wis.—The postage on newspapers to Bremen or Hamburg, or countries beyond, via the North German Union, is charged on each one, the standard weight being four ounces. That is, three newspapers weighing together four ounces, are charged three times as much as one weighing four ounces.

Registered Letter Receipt.—K. J. A., L—— C——, Minn.—The marginal registered letter receipt given to the person mailing the letter, should not state the alleged value of the contents of the letter, about which n P. M. is not supposed to know anything. The blank receipts furnished by the Department contain all that is necessary, and these are the only ones that should be given, if you have them on hand.

Letters Posted by an Insane Person.—W. D., S—— V——, Pa.—There may in many cases be good reason why a Postmaster should refuse to receive a letter from an insane person to mail, but it is a question which must be decided on the merits of each case, and not generally. For the disposition of letters directed to fictitious persons, consult Section 60, Regulations of 1866. In such matters you must be assured beyond all doubt that the address is fictitious.

Hand Bills in Newspapers.—J. W. L., G——, O.—The sample you send is a hand bill. A hand bill is not a supplement, and cannot be enclosed in a regular newspaper sent to a subscriber, without subjecting the whole package to letter postage. Sec. 226, Reg. 1866.

Sale of Stamps at a Discount.—N. J. G., W——, Md.—Postmasters are not allowed to sell stamps at a discount, except in a few of the large cities, where, by a late arrangement, they are empowered to appoint a certain number of agents, to whom they sell at a discount of two per cent.

Postmasters Administering Oath.—G. P. B., W——, Mass.—Postmasters who are also Justices of the Peace, Commissioners of Deeds, or Notaries Public, can administer the oath to carriers, clerks, &c. Postmasters who do not also hold one of the above offices cannot administer the oath.

Sending Letters to a D. P. O.—J. C., U——, Mich.—The Regulations provide as follows: "Every Postmaster will mail direct to the place addressed, first, all letters for his own State or Territory," &c., (Sec. 93, Reg. 1866.) But this does not apply to registered letters, which "Should never be sent direct, when a distributing office is located on the route between the mailing office and the office of destination, except when sent under brass lock from one first class office to another." See General Instructions in Regulations respecting the Registration of Letters.

Defacing Postage Stamps.—A. T., G——, O.—The Department requires that postage stamps should be effectually cancelled at the mailing office, but if such cancelling has been omitted, the Postmaster at the office of delivery will cancel the stamps in the manner directed, and forth with report the delinquent Postmaster to the Postmaster General. Secs. 176 and 177, Reg. 1866.

Postage on Newsdealer's Packages.—U. U. R., W——, Mo.—Newsdealers are allowed to receive packages of papers and periodicals at the same rates as regular subscribers. (Sec. 235 Laws, and 202 Reg. 1866.) They cannot receive them by mail at lower rates. The circular you mention refers, we believe, to the delivery of papers and periodicals by express, and not by mail.

Rent for Boxes.—E. W. F., K——, Ind., and others.—Chapter XLII of Regulations of 1866, contains nothing in regard to the amount of rent for boxes. In a circular of "Instructions concerning Letter Carriers," it is required that the uniform rent of boxes in Post Offices where letter-carriers are employed, on and after January 1st, 1865, shall be double the amount theretofore charged, except at such offices as had already increased the price. But this does not apply to those offices where letter-carriers are not employed.

Refusing to take Request Envelopes.—J. J. L., K——, Ind.—The Department does not allow the sale of postage stamps or envelopes on credit, and a postmaster ordering envelopes at the request of, and on the credit of another, does so at his own risk. They must in all cases be paid for when ordered. Write to the Finance Office P. O. Department, stating all the facts.

Notifying Publisher, &c.—F. C. J., B—— N.Y.—1. Postmasters need not notify the publishers of papers in their own towns that such papers are not taken from the office. 2. See above.

Account of Letters Sent and Received.—C. W. R., U—— C——, Vt.—The Instructions appended to the Act of Jnly 1, 1864, required postmasters to count the whole number of letters received for delivery the last week in the quarter.

Post Office Marking Stamps.—J. L. W—— O——, Mass.—For Marking Stamps address E. S. Zevely, Cumberland, Md.

Wearing Apparel in the Mails.—E. S. D., E—— P——, Vt., and N. D. G., B—— H——, Pa.—All clothing sent through the mails must be charged at letter rates of postage, unless it be directed to soldiers, sailors, or marines in the U. S. service, when the rate is eight cents per four ounces.

Registering Mutilated Currency to U. S. Treasurer.—A. R. E., S——, Minn.—The registration fee on such packages must be paid by stamps—the postage need not be paid.

Letters, &c., to Members of Congress.—J. W. S., C——, N. Y., and, J. S., B——, Tenn.—Letters and other mail matter directed to Members of Congress are entitled to pass free in the mails, if not weighing over four ounces. If over that weight, mail matter so addressed must be forwarded, charged with letter postage on the extra weight. This limit as to weight, however, does not apply to public documents, issued by authority of Congress. See paragraph V., sec. 265 A. P. O. Laws, 1866.

Account of Mails Sent.—G. P. L., W——, Ind.—The sheets of account of mails sent are to be used at all Post Offices, of whatever class.

Toys and Fancy Goods by Mail, &c.—J. H. W, M——, Ga.—Toys and fancy goods, when sent by mail, must be prepaid at letter rates of postage; pictures, prints and fancy writing paper, two cents per four ounces or fraction thereof; books, four cents per four ounces or fraction thereof. No person can claim the right to send the above at any less rates. All mail matter which you know to be intentionally underpaid, should be "held for postage," and sent to Dead Letter Office. Notify the newsdealer that unless he complies with the law his mail matter will not be sent forward.

Subscribers Re-mailing Newspapers, &c.—R. A. S., M'C——, Pa.—Regular subscribers cannot re-mail the newspapers or periodicals they have received, to other persons, except on prepayment by stamps, at transient postage rates.

Samples of Flour.—S. E. F., A——, Mich.—The domestic rate of postage on samples of flour is three cents per half ounce, or fraction thereof—that is, letter postage.

Newspapers Free within the County.—C. G. T., H——, Conn.—Weekly newspapers which are entitled to pass free within the county of publication, must be sent by the publishers. A newsdealer has not the privilege of sending them free.

Account of Newspapar Postage Received, &c.—T. F., F——, Mich.—1. You are required to fill up the proper columns in the blank sheets of "Account of Newspapers and Periodicals Received" with the names of the papers, &c., and where published, as well as to enter the amount of postage received. This must be sent every quarter with your quarterly returns. 2. In sending unpaid foreign letters, do not send a post-bill with them to the D. P. O., nor charge that office with the amount due on the letter. Also, do not mark on the letter the amount due. That is done at the Exchange Post Office from which the letter is despatched to the foreign country to which it is directed. 3. You are mistaken in supposing that THE MAIL announced that the domestic registry fee had been reduced. You have, probably, got this confused with the postage to Great Britain, which was reduced to 12 cents on January 1. The domestic registry fee is 20 cents, to be always prepaid by stamps.

Route Agents' Receipts for Registered Packages, &c.—W. L. H., C——, N. Y.—Apply to the Third Assistant P. M. General for the blank receipts for registered packages. They are used between route agents and postmasters, not between postmasters. Postmasters at first and second class offices only, are supplied with common envelopes for official use. At present, no other offices are supplied.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

Foreign Letters, &c.

Letters to foreign countries, where prepayment of postage is compulsory, when insufficiently paid, are sent to the Dead Letter Office, to be opened and returned to the writers, and are thereby delayed one or two mails, and, no doubt, in many cases, causing serious loss and annoyance to the writers.

When the United States official postage entries on the letters received from Great Britain or the Continent of Europe, are in red ink, the letter is to be considered as paid, and is to be delivered accordingly; when in black ink, as unpaid, and the postage is to be collected on delivery. The postage on such letters is either wholly paid or wholly unpaid. Postmasters can readily decide any questions as to prepayment by this simple criterion.

REGISTERING FOREIGN LETTERS.—Letters can be registered in the United States for Great Britain and Ireland, for the North German Union, (including all the German States and Austria,) also for Belgium and The Netherlands. Letters to Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island can be registered, but not to Newfoundland. Letters can be registered (by British mail, via England) to Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Constantinople, East Indies, Egypt (viz.: Alexandria, Cairo and Suez), Falkland Islands, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Java, Lagos, Lahnan, Liberia, Malta, Mauritius, Natal, New South Wales, Queensland, St. Helena, Sierra Leone, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia, on payment of a registration fee (in stamps) of sixteen cents. This is in addition to the postage, which must be fully prepaid by stamps.

The registry fee to be charged on registered letters and other postal packets to Germany, to Austria and its States, or to Belgium and The Netherlands, via North German Union, direct or by closed mail, via England, is eight cents, and on letters to Canada, Nova Scotia New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, it is five cents—on letters and other postal packets to Great Britain and Ireland, eight cents. All registered letters and other postal packets must be prepaid in full to destination.

CANADIAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Irregularities having arisen in respect to Canadian correspondence, these directions must hereafter be observed:

The postage on a single letter to or from Canada is ten cents per half ounce, prepayment optional; but the whole postage must be prepaid or none. Part prepayments are not recognized. Prepayments must be made by United States postage stamps—not in money.

A postmaster may frank a letter to Canada the same as to any point in the United States; but it is optional for the Canadian Post Office Department to deliver such letter free, or charge full postage on it, at its pleasure.

COLLECTIONS IN COIN.—In pursuance of the provisions of a resolution of Congress, approved March 3, 1863, all postages due on unpaid letters received from foreign countries in the mails dispatched to this country from Great Britain and Ireland, France, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen or Belgium, are to be collected in gold or silver coin. Should, however, payment of such postage, and of the premium on a corresponding amount of coin, be tendered in United States notes, the same is to be accepted in lieu of coin. The amount to be collected in United States notes (in case coin is not offered), is marked on each letter on its arrival at United States Exchange Offices, and is charged in the post-bills. Hence, when coin is collected at the office of delivery, the difference should be entered in the account of Mails Received as an overcharge.

On out-going letters the former regulations remain unchenged, and, when prepaid, the regular rates (in currency) only are to be collected.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

1. TO OR FROM FRANCE, ALGERIA, &c., IN FRENCH MAIL OR VIA ENGLAND.—Newspapers, periodical works, books stitched orbound, pamphlets, catalogues, papers of music, prospectuses, circulars, and all other kinds of printed matter addressed to France, Algeria, or cities of Turkey, Syria and Egypt, in which France has post offices [viz.: Alexandria, Alexandretta, Beyront, Constantinople, Dardanelles, Galatz, Gallipoli, Ibralla, Ineboli, Jaffe, Kerassund, Latakia, Messina, in Asiatic Turkey, Mitylene, Rhodes, Saionica, Samsoun, Sinope, Smyrna, Sulino, Trebizond, Tripoli, in Syria, Tultcha, Varna and Volo], can be dispatched to France direct, or by wey of England, on prepayment of the United States postage, viz.: newspapers, two cents each; periodical works, catalogues or pamphlets, two cents per four ounces or fraction thereof; and all other kinds of printed matter the same as domestic rates; to be in all cases collected in the United States, whether sent or received. REGULATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NEWSPAPERS, BOOK PACKETS, PATTERNS, SAMPLES, &c., TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The regulations to be observed and enforced in the United States with respect to printed matter of all kinds and other postal packets, addressed to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Belgium, The Netherlands and the North German Union, or to the countries to which they respectively serve as intermediaries, are as follows:

1. NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED MATTER.—Newspapers, circulars, pamphlets, periodicals, books or other printed papers, (including maps, plans, prints, engravings, drawings, photographs, lithographs, sheets of music, &c.,) must be wrapped or enveloped in covers open at the sides or ends, so as to admit of the inclosures being removed for examination.

No newspaper, pamphlet, periodical, or article of printed matter, may contain any word or communication, whether by writing, printing, marks or signs, upon the cover or wrapper thereof, except the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, the printed title of the publication, the printed name of the publisher or vendor who sends it; or, in case of newspapers or other regular publications when sent to subscribers direct from the office of publication, the printed date when subscription expires. It must not contain a letter or any communication in writing, or other inclosure.

The law and regulation of this department which excludes all obscene books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of a vulgar or indecent character from the mails of the United States, are also to be enforced with respect to books, pamphlets, pictures, prints, or other publications of like character, addressed to foreign countries.

2. BOOK-PACKETS.—No book-packet may contain anything that is sealed or otherwise closed against inspection, nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. But entries merely stating from whom or to whom the packet is sent shall not be regarded as a letter.

No book-packet must exceed two feet in length, or one foot in width or depth.

Any hook-packet which is not open at the sides or ends, or has any letter or communication in the nature of a letter, written in it, or upon its cover, cannot be received or forwarded in the mail; and it is the duty of postmasters, whenever they have ground for suspecting an infringement of any of the above conditions, to open and examine book-packets, patterns, samples, or other postal packets, posted at or passing through their offices.

3. PATTERNS OR SAMPLES OF MERCHANDISE.—Patterns or samples of merchandise must not be of intrinsic value; which rule excludes from the mails all articles of a saleable nature, or whatever may have a market value of its own apart from its mere use as a pettern or sample; or where the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a pettern or sample is so great that it could fairly be considered as having on this ground an intrinsic value.

No packet of patterns or samples must exceed 24 luches in length or 12 inches in breadth or depth, or 24 ounces in weight. Patterns or samples of merchandise exceeding the weight of 7 1-2 ounces cannot be sent by mail to the North German Union.

Patterns or samples must not bear any writing other than the addresses of the persons for whom they are intended, except the address of the sender, a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles.

There must be no enclosures other than the patterns or samples themselves. The particulars allowed to be furnished under the preceding paragraph must in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, hnt on small labels attached to the patterns or samples, or the bags containing them.

Patterns or samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be of easy examination. Samples, however, of seeds, etc., which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, fastened in such a manner that they may be readily opened for examination.

Patterns, samples or other peckets containing llquids, poisons, explosive chemicals, or other articles likely to injure the contents of the mail-bags, or the person of any officer of the post office, are positively excluded from the mails.

DOMESTIC POSTAGES.

The law requires postage on all letters (including those to foreign countries when prepaid) excepting those written to the President or Vice-President, or members of Congress, or (on official business) to the chiefs of the executive departments of the government, and the heads of bureaus and chief clerks, and others invested with the franking privilege, to be prepaid by stamps or stamped envelopes, prepayment in money being prohibited. Postmasters can send official letters to other Postmasters free.

All drop letters must be prepaid. The rate of postage on drop letters, at offices where free delivery by carrier is established, is two cents per half ounce or fraction of a half onnce; at offices where such free delivery is not established the rate is one cent.

The single rate of postage on all domestic mail letters throughont the United States is three cents per half ounce, with an additional rate of three cents for each additional half ounce or fraction of a half ounce. The ten cent (Pacific) rate is abolished.

Letter postage is to be charged on all handbills, circulars, or other printed matter which shall contain any manuscript writing whatever.

Daguerreotypes, when sent in the mail, are to be charged with letter postage by weight.

Photographs on cards, paper, and other flexible material (not in cases) can be sent at the same rate as miscellaneous printed matter, viz., two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof.

Newspaper Postage.

Postage on Daily Papers to subscribers, when prepaid quarterly or yearly in advance, either at the mailing office or office of delivery, per quarter, (three months) ..... 35 cents.

Six times per week, per quarter (3 mos.)	30	"
For Tri-Weekly,	"	"	15	"
For Semi-Weekly,	"	"	10	"
For Weekly,	"	"	5	"

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS (one copy only) sent hy the publisher to actual subscribers within the county where printed and published, free.

POSTAGE PER QUARTER (to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance) on NEWSPAPERS and PERIODICALS issued less frequently than once a week, sent to actual subscribers in any part of the United States:

Semi-monthly, not over 4 oz.	6	cts.
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	12	"
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	18	"
Monthly, not over 4 oz.	3	"
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	6	"
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	9	"
Quarterly, not over 4 oz.	1	"
" over 4 oz. and not over 8 oz.	2	"
" over 8 oz. and not over 12 oz.	3	"

Quarterly postage cannot be paid for less than three months. If a subscription begins at any other time than the commencement of an official quarter, the postage received by the postmaster must still be entered in his account for that quarter. Subscribers for short terms—exceeding three months, say four or five months—can pay quarterly postage for the actual term of their subscriptions—that is for one quarter and a third, one quarter and two-thirds, &c. The law only requires that at least one quarter's postage shall be prepaid, and not more than one year's postage. Any term between one quarter and one year can therefore be prepaid at proportionate rates.

PUBLISHERS OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS may send to each other from their respective offices of publication, free of postage, one copy of each publication, and may also send to each actual subscriber, inclosed in their publications, bills and receipts for the same, free of postage. They may also state on their respective publications the date when the subscription expires, to be written or printed.

Religious, Temperance, Educational and Agricultural Newspapers of small size, issued less frequently then once a week, may be sent in packages, to one address, at the rate of one cent for each package not exceeding four ounces in weight, and an additional charge of one cent is made for each additional four ounces or fraction thereof, the postage to be paid quarterly or yearly in advance.

NEWSDEALERS may send newspepers and periodicals to regular subscribers at the querterly rates, in the same manner as publishers, and may also receive them from publishers at subscribers' rates. In both cases the postage to be prepaid, either at the mailing or delivery office.

Publications issued without disclosing the office of publication, or containing a fictitious statement thereof, must not be forwarded by postmasters, unless prepaid at the mailing office at the rates of transient printed matter.

Postage on Transient Printed Matter.

[All printed matter (except single copies of newspapers, magazines, and periodicals sent to regular subscribers from publishers) intended to go by mail westward from the western boundary of Kansas, or eastward from the eastern boundary of California, must be prepaid by stamps at letter postage rates. Sec. 259, P. O. Laws, Edition of 1866.]

BOOKS, not over four ounces in weight, to one address, 4 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 8 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 12 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 16 cts.

CIRCULARS, not exceeding three in number, to one address, 2 cts.; over three and not over six, 4 cts.; over six and not over nine, 6 cts.; over nine and not exceeding twelve, 8 cts.

ON MISCELLANEOUS MAILABLE MATTER (embracing all pamphlets, occasional publications, transient newspapers, handbills and posters, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, whether corrected or not, maps, prints, engravings, sheet music, blanks, flexible patterns, samples and sample cards, phonographic peper, letter envelopes, postal envelopes or wrappers, cards, peper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of different types, seeds, cuttings, bnibs, roots and sclons) the postage to be prepaid hy stamps, is, on one package to one address, not over four oz. in weight, 2 cts.; over four oz. and not over eight oz., 4 cts.; over eight oz. and not over twelve oz., 6 cts.; over twelve oz. and not over sixteen oz., 8 cts.

By a recent order of the Postmaster General, the fifth subdivision of the 42d instruction of the Post Office Law, approved March 3, 1863, has been amended by striking ont the word twelve and inserting thirty-two before the word ounces, so that it shall read as follows: "The weight of packages of seeds, cnttings, roots and sclons, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces."

All mail matter not sent at letter rates of postage, embracing books, book manuscripts, proof sheets, and other printed matter, and all other mail matter, except seeds, must be so wrapped or enveloped with open sides or ends as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper, otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage. No communication, whether in writing or in print, can be sent with any seeds, roots, cuttings or sclons, maps, engravings, or other matter not printed, except upon the separate payment of postage upon each separate matter at the established rates.

Exchange newspepers and periodicals cannot be remailed without being chargeable with postage.

Where packages of newspapers or periodicals are received at any post office directed to one address, and the names of the clnb of snbscribers to which they belong, with the postage for a quarter in advance, shall be handed to the postmaster, he shall deliver the same to their respective owners. But this does not epply to weekly newspapers whlch clrculate free in the county where printed and published.

Weekly newspapers and all other printed matter to the British North American Provinces, although sent from countries hordering on the line, are chargeable with the same rates as when sent to any point in the United States.

☞ All transient matter must be prepaid by stamps. But if it comes to the office of delivery without prepayment, or short-paid, the unpaid postage must be collected on delivery at the prepaid rate. Great neglect exists in the strict quarterly prepayment of postage on printed matter sent to regular subscribers. No such paper should be delivered, unless it is either prepaid at the mailing office, or at the delivery office for at least a quarter. If not so prepaid, postmasters must collect postage on each copy as on transient matter. If they fail, they will be charged with the full postage due, and in clear cases removed from office for neglect.

Every postmaster will be careful never to send a registered letter "direct," when there is a distributing post office between his office and the office to which the letter is directed. He must inclose it in a "Registered Package Envelope," directed to the postmaster at the first distributing post office on the route, and also send the Return Registered Letter Bill in a common envelope to the same postmaster by same mail—just the same as if the letter were for delivery at the distributing post office.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, January 23, 1868.

H. SHREVE—DEAR SIR: Your new Indicator has been in use ever since its arrival, and I have found it to be accurate in its entire system, saving more than half the time and trouble experienced in keeping the accounts. It is an article that has long been needed, and invaluable to every Postmaster. I would not be without it for double its cost. It is certainly an article of merit, and as such I take pleasure in recommending it to all who desire to economise in time, and get rid of the old perplexing modes of keeping the accounts. Very truly yours,

G. H. P. BAILEY, P. M.

SALEM, OHIO, January 4, 1868.

HENRY SHREVE—DEAR SIR: I have the pleasure of announcing that your Postal Indicator has been received, and find, upon examining into the particular workings of the Indicator, that it is one of the necessary things belonging to a Post Office, and do most cheerfully recommend its use to the Post Office fraternity in general, as a convenient, labor-saving and correct plan of keeping accounts of stamps defaced, &c. Very respectfully,

C. TOWNSEND, P. M.

MASSILLON, OHIO, January 10, 1868.

HENRY SHREVE—DEAR SIR: I have thoroughly tested the Indicator, and the more I use it the better I am pleased. I am satisfied that it is correct and can place implicit confidence in its operation. In offices of this (second) class it will, on introduction, be found invaluable. I therefore cheerfully recommend it on its merits.

I am yours respectfully,
A. G. SEABOLD, Assistant Postmaster.

a.—When the letter a is prefixed, the foreign postage (which in each case is 13 cents) is increased by an additional rate for every 7½ grammes (¼ oz.) or fraction thereof. The United States inland and Atlantic sea postage (which in each case is 10 cents the single rate) is increased by an additional rate for every 15 grammes (½ oz.) or fraction thereof.

b.—Where the letter b is prefixed, an additional rate is to be added to the foreign portion of the postage for each 4 ounces or fraction thereof, if the newspaper exceeds 4 ounces in weight. The foreign postage, in each case, is ascertained by deducting from the amount set down the sum of 2 cents, which is the United States portion of the postage on a single newspaper, regardless of weight. In all other cases, the postage is for each newspaper without regard to its weight, when sent in British mail.

THE DARK CLOSET.

The rocent excitement caused by the opening of letters in the French Post Office, with a view of seizing all copies af the circular of the Caunt de Chambord, has brought back vividly to the minds of the public the famous "Cabiaet Noir," where tbe aperatians M. Vandal recently recommended were systematically carried on by a regular staff af employes, and at considerable expense. In an article of the Revue des Deux Mondes, headed "Administratioa des Postes," M. Maxime dn Camp gives an interesting account of that disreputable institution. It would appear that the Cabiaet Noir—the Dark Closet—for what was done there could not hear the light of day—originated with the postal service itself, for Louis XI. ordered that the royal couriers should not carry letters that had not heea previously read, or those that contained anything prejudicial to his government. The practice was, in all probability, continued under successive governments, and one may feel sure that Richelieu, Mazarin, Louis XIV., the Regent, Dubois, were not people to besitate at breaking, or ratber melting, a seal, though it appears there are no official documents proving the fact. But there is no doubt about Louis XV., who first organized what was called "the secret closet of tbe post." His predecessors contented themselves with taking copies of dispatches which, for political objects, they had an interest in knowing; but to Louis XV. attaches the infamy of violating private correspondence for tbe gratification of a morbid desire to become acquainted with the most secret acts of private life. Besides this, there was what was called the "political agency," the object of which was to get at the mysteries of diplomacy; and this was under the direction of tbe Prince of Carl and the Duke de Broglie. Mme. de Ilousset, waiting woman to Mme. de Pompadour, the kiag's mistress, mentions in her memoirs what she herself was an eyewitness of:

"The king had caused to be communicated to M. de Choiseuil the secrets of the post—that ie to eay, extracts from the letters they had opened—a confidence whicb M. d'Argenau never enjoyed, in epite of all his favor. I have heard tell that M. de Choiseuil abused thie confidence, and recounted pleasant stories about love intrigues which the letters that were opened often contained. The mode of opening was very simple. Six or seven clerks of the General Post Office withdrew the letters they were ordered to examine, and took impressions of the seal with a ball of quicksilver. Each letter was then laid, on tbe side where the seal was, on a gohlet of hot water, which melted the wax without injuring the paper. It was then opened, extracts were made, and it was again sealed up by means of the impression. The Intendant of the Post took the extracts to the king every Sunday, and he was seen passing in and out just like the Ministers for this formidable business."

The reading of these lettere was a favorite pastime with Louis XV. In the beginning of his reign Louis XVI. tried to put an end to the' ecandalous practice which were a mystery to no one, and strongly repudiated such a means of government. A royal ordinance of the 18th of August, 1775, declared that "the private correspondence of citizens is one of those sacred things from which the tribunals, as well as individuals, should avert their eyes." Thie reform was not, however, of long coatinuance. Hie advisers persuaded him that reasons of State policy required tho practice; the Cabinet Noir was re-established and was in full working order soon after the ordinance wae published. The public conscience revolted against it; tho ontery was general, and in the official instructions of the electors to the deputies at the States-General in the commencement of the Revolution, the demand was general for the secrecy of private letters, the suppression of the Cabinet at the General Post Office where the correspondence was opened, the responsibility of the employes, and their severe punishment when they tampered with letters. The deputies to the States-General echoed the complaints of their constituents. At the sitting of the 8th of July, 1790, after a report from Armand Gontand (ci-devant Biron), the National Assembly ordered the suppression of the funds appropriated to the Cabinet Noir. On the 22d of August it decreed that the directors and clerks of the Post Office should take an onth, in presence of the judges, "to respect, and cause to be respected, by all means in their power, the secresy of the correspondence in the kingdom." It was believed after this that the Cabinet Noir was ehut up for ever, and that the meane made use of by "tyrants" could not be adopted by a free people. It was an error. It was esen, even then, that if Robespierre ever arrived at power he would not hesitate to resort to the eams practices for which he had denounced the abeolnte monarchy. In answer to some observations of Miraheau in 1789 he said: "No doubt private correspondence is inviolable; hut when a nation is in danger, when there are persoas conspiring against its liberty, that which is criminal in other times, becomes a praiseworthy act. Delicacy toward the conspirators is treason against tho people." He seemed afterward to have changed his opinioa. On the 29th January, 1791, he ascended the trihnne, and, touching the questioa of a certain number of letters that had hcen laid before the Assembly because they attacked the representatives of the people, he said: "How do we know that these effusione are directed against the National Assembly? The secresy of correspondence has, then, been violated. It is an outrageous public faith." These words implied an engagement which the Committee of Public Safety soon disregarded. It was, however, the Girondins who, when they had the upper hnad, set the bad example. They made no scruple whatever about opening the private correspondence of the Feuillants and the Fayettists; and the Mountain, when their turn came, paid thom back in kiud. Theee laet, however, had the merit of acting openly. They proclaimed it a measure of public security; and two members of the Convention were named to inspect the correspondeace which, in their judgment, endangered the safety of the country. Aa steempt was made after the 9th Thermidor to restore the Post Office Department to its normal state. In the sitting of the 19th Frimaire (9th of December, 1794), the Coavention decreed that "the secrecy af letters should no langer be violated in the interior of the Republic." The Thermidorians, wha were not famed for probity, took little account of tbie decree, for the secret police had never been more prying than at that perind. Under the Cansulate and the Empire there was no hesitation about the matter. Speaking of the Cabinet Noir at St. Helena, Napolcoa said:

"It is a bad institution, and does more evil than good. It often happens to a sovereign to be in bad humor, fatigned, influeaced by causes foreign to the matter submitted to his decision, and tben the French people are as frivolous aud as inconsisteat ia their correspondence as in their words. I mostly made use of the Cabinet Noir to find out the intimate correspondence of any Minister, any Chamberlain, any great officer, Berthier, and evea Daroc himself."

Las Casas ie more explicit. He saye:

"The momeat nny one was on the list of this important supervision, his arms and bie seals were at oace engraved by the Bureau, and so skillfully tbat his letters, after being read, reached him intact, without anything to excite euspicion. The Bureau cost 600,000 francs yearly."

Savary, who was Bonaparte's zealons agent in all his secret affairs, strongly condemas the practice of opening lettere, not, however, as might be expected from such a person, from any scruples, with which he was but little troubled, but only hecause it was attended with no advaatage. He says:

"It is thus that people used to carry a lie to the ears of the sovereign by means intended to make him know the truth. Iu this way a person who denounced another was ahle to give weight to his declaration. All he had to do was to throw into the Post Office letters couched so as to confirm the opinion he wished to have helieved. The honestest man in the world was thus exposed to danger by a letter which he had not read, or which he had not understood; and," he adds, "I have experienced this myself."

Bourrienne thus explains the real cause of the disgrace in which General Kellerman remained under the Empire: "M. Delaforest, Director-General of the Post Office, transacted business some time with the First Consul; and every one knows what is meant by a Director of the Post transacting business with the head of the Government." It was on one of these occasions that the First Coneul eaw a letter from Kellerman to Lassalle, in which he said: "Can you believe, my dear friend, that Bonaparte has not made me General of Division, though I am the man who has just put the crowa on his head?" (alluding to the battle of Marengo). The letter was scaled ap again and forwarded to its address, but Bonaparte never forgot or forgave it. The Cabinet Noir did not disappear with the Empire; it flourished under the Bourbons. It cost, as under the preceding Government, 600,000f., paid out of the secret eervice money of the Foreign Office; and there were employed in it twenty-two persone, several of whom were high personages. When M. de Villele fell, the new Ministry declared officially that the Cabinet Noir no longer existed in the General Post Office. This was, bowever, a deceit; it was merely transferred to another locality; nnd after the revolution of July it was discovered that it had continued to work tn the last moment. A curious trial occupied public attention a few months after the accessioa of the House of Orleans. A young lady of excellent family had married, in 1827, a superior employe of the Post Office—an important persoaage, who was in direct communication with the Tuileries, and was ia receipt of a large salary. His functions, about which he never would give nny explanations, required his attendance every evening in his office, and he often spent the whole night ia it. It was only after the revolution of July that the whole became known. The husband had been one of tho priacipal members of the Cabiaet Noir. His wife, on receiving this information, which she was far from expecting, sued at oace for a separation. In spite of the talent of her lawyer she lost her suit; but public opinion was for her, and she never would consent again to live with the man who had deceived her as to his poeition, and made her share in the infamy of which she had no suspicion. M. Ducamp says:
